FEAR NEW BLOWS AT U. S. AIR BASES

Predict Crushing Victory For Johnson

Seventy Million Americans Likely To Cast Votes

'Upset of the Century' Say the Republicans

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The United States election campaign neared its last hurrah today with every indicator—outside the Republican camp—pointing toward a big victory for President Johnson Tuesday.

Some 70,000,000 Americans will vote during a 27-hour period beginning at 12:01 a.m. EST Tuesday in some New England villages and winding up with the closing of polls in Western Alaska.

They will choose a president, vice-president, 25 governors the entire 435 members of the House of Representatives except 40 who have no opposition and slightly more than one-third of the 100-seat Senate. Thirty-four senatorial seats are being contested. One Senate incumbent, Democrat John Stennis of Mississippi, is unopposed.

The president and vice-president will serve four years, governorship terms vary, a representative is elected for two years and a senator for six.

President Johnson made no predictions on the extent of the victory he expects his Democratic party to bring in, but he hoped to win more than the party's record 60.8 per cent of the popularity vote registered for Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936 when FDR won all but two states against Republican Alf Landon.

This would give Johnson a massive victory in the 538-vote electoral college where 270 are needed to elect a president and vice-president.

REPUBLICANS AN UPSET

Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater predicted the "upset of the century" that would make him the winner by a narrow electoral margin despite the poll indications against any such results. His aides conceded only five states—Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Alaska and Hawaii to the Democratic president.

Aides of Governor George Wallace said they had given up only on Mississippi and Alabama.

In a last military setback in South Viet Nam gave Senator Goldwater and his supporters last-gasp ammunition against the president.

World communism is "geared to stiff" a Goldwater victory, the Arizona Republican asserted Sunday. He hinted that this

Brother Ousts Saud

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) — King Saud of Saudi Arabia has been dethroned and replaced by his 59 - year - old brother and prime minister, Crown Prince Feisal, a government minister announced over Mecca radio today.

A statement broadcast by Information Minister Sheikh Jamil Hujelland said the move was decided upon by the council of ministers and the consultative assembly.

Control of the government in recent years has been held in turn by 62-year-old King Saud and Emir Feisal ibn Abdul Aziz, the crown prince.

Last March the undersecretary for foreign affairs, Omar Al Saqqaf, said a disagreement between the two men over their respective powers had ended "by the consolidation of powers in the hands of Prince Feisal to an unprecedented extent."

Saud has ruled the country since Nov. 9, 1953.

Suslov, Mikoyan In Top Four

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Leonid Brezhnev, Alexei Kosygin, Mikhail Suslov and Anastas Mikoyan were in the top four places when portraits of the Russian leaders went up today for the Russian revolution anniversary next Saturday.

The first set of portraits erected appeared on the facade of the Maly Theatre in the centre of Moscow.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A low-yield nuclear test blast was set off underground today at the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada test site. Malaysia's First Retaliatory Act Is Leaflet 'Raid' Over Indonesia

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) — British and Malaysian military aircraft flew together today in a leaflet raid over Indonesia, it was announced in this Malaysian capital.

It was the first retaliatory action from Malaysia in the two-year unofficial war with Indonesia.

Today's Chuckle

If you're calm and collected when everyone else is losing his head -- maybe you just don't understand the situation.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Variable skies with little temperature change is the forecast for Tuesday.

Lake St. Clair, Lake Erie, southern Lake Huron regions, Windsor, London: Sunny with cloudy intervals Tuesday. Not much change in temperature. Light winds.

An official statement said aircraft dropped "thousands" of leaflets warning Indonesians not to engage in any new raids against the Malay Peninsula.

In Singapore, a British military spokesman said some British aircraft and crews took part in the raid. He explained the operation was "planned and conceived by the Malaysians," but "we provided them with some planes."

The leaflet contained a statement from a captured Indonesian officer, one of 226 Indonesian troops and Malaysian renegades who have landed in various groups in Malaysia in the last three months.

Indonesia has pledged to "crush" the Federation of Malaya—Singapore, Sarawak and Sabah (North Borneo) — which was formed in September, 1963.

It charged the new country is a neo - colonialist plot in Southeast Asia.

Session Could Be Stormy

LONDON (CP) — The Labor government will outline Thursday its legislative proposals. They could make the new Parliament session the most explosive this century and possibly force a general election long before it is due.

Every indication is that the government proposes to fulfil its election program — or go down in the attempt.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson has only a five-vote overall margin in the 630 - member House. If he does not curtail his more contentious proposals, he faces a head-on clash with the opposition, particularly over the nationalization of the steel industry.

The opposition Conservative and Liberal parties have promised to behave "reasonably" and co-operate with the government in the national interest, but they are pledged to oppose nationalization.

The government's plans for the next 12 months will be outlined at the opening of Parliament in the throne speech, from the throne, written by the cabinet and read by the Queen. It comes as the climax to the ancient ritual in the House of Lords in which a Canadian, for the first time in the 699-year history of Parliament, will play a prominent part.

The speech traditionally makes no mention of priority of dealing with proposed legislation, but many political observers are speculating that Wilson will put his hand fast with the most difficult bills.

The argument is that the government's hand is probably stronger now than it is likely to be again in this Parliament, party morale is higher and public opinion is running in favor of the new government.

Also, neither of the opposition parties is likely to be as anxious to bring down the government now as in, say, a year or 18 months.

Wednesday Tuesday will follow the Queen's traditional state drive from Buckingham Palace to the House of Lords. The procession to the throne will be led by Dr. Conrad Swan, Garter King of Arms, B.C., and Windsor, Ont., who holds the office of royal heritage pursuivant of arms. The honor falls to him as the most recently appointed officer of arms.

Italian Tornadoes Kill Six

RAGUSA, Sicily (AP) — The toll from a weekend of tornadoes in southern Italy rose today to six dead, with 150 injured, hundreds left homeless and damage that officials said might exceed $30,000,000.

One tornado hit southern Sicily Saturday. Another swept over the toe of Italy Sunday.

The twisters lashed across Calabria Sunday tearing down trees, whole rows of telegraph poles, and ripping the roofs off scores of houses.

Cattle perished as the tornado descended on farms in a wide swath across the countryside.

Forty families were left homeless in the village of Marricello, where houses were uprooted or badly damaged.

Hundreds of trees were blown down and great damage was done to olives.

Worst hit in Saturday's tornado in Sicily were Santa Croce Camerina, a town of 7,000 near the coast southwest of Ragusa, and Catania, industrial city of 300,000 at the foot of volcanic Mount Etna.

Hundreds of homes at Santa Croce Camerina collapsed like matchboxes under the blast of the winds. Three-residents died and more than 70 were injured.

Italian Red Chief Praises Mr. K, Indonesian Happy He Is Gone

ROME (Reuters) — Italian Communist chief Luigi Longo today hailed the person and deeds of ousted Soviet premier Khrushchev as "essential elements of a very important historical moment."

Longo said "in my opinion, even in the light of the latest events, the person and acts of Comrade Khrushchev, as leader of the Soviet government and Communist party, remain essential elements of a very important historical moment."

"From him came the bitter denunciation of Stalinism, the liquidation of the personality cult, and the re-establishment of socialist legality.

"He inspired the orientations and the fundamental decisions of the 20th Congress, by which Marxism-Leninism regained all its creative value.

"And from those decisions were drawn the fundamental directions of Communist policy over the last 10 years: non-inevitability of war, peaceful coexistence, national roads to socialism, autonomy of elaboration and of action for individual Communist parties."

Polls Give Johnson Edge

NEW YORK (AP)—The polls are unanimous. They point to victory for President Johnson in Tuesday's election.

But Senato. Barry Goldwater says he'll win.

"I know the polls don't agree with me, but they never have," he said Friday night.

An Associated Press survey of polls showed figures indicating that Johnson's percentage of the popular vote might approximate the 20th century highs.

The 20th century record is Franklin D. Roosevelt's 60.8 per cent of the vote in 1936 against Republican Alf Landon. Republican Warren G. Harding got 60.4 per cent in 1920. Dwight D. Eisenhower got 57.4 per cent in 1956.

Here's a rundown on the latest national polls:

Gallup poll—A semi-final poll by Dr. George Gallup gave Johnson 64 per cent, Goldwater 29 per cent and undecided seven per cent.

Louis Harris poll—Johnson 60 per cent, Goldwater 34 per cent, undecided six per cent.

Popcorn poll — Johnson lead 78-22 among purchasers of popcorn in movie theatres and supermarkets. They picked Harry Truman in 1948.

Newsweek magazine—A poll of 36 Washington correspondents showed 49 predicting a Johnson victory. Their consensus gave Johnson 454 elector votes to 84 for Goldwater. It takes 270 to TOKYO (AP) — China called attention today to the views of a leading foreign Communist who raised the possibility that Nikita Khrushchev's fall would result in a new rapprochement between China and the Soviet Union. He said "many difficulties and obstacles" must still be overcome, however.

Peking newspapers quoted D. N. Aidit, leader of Indonesia's Communist party, that Khrushchev's departure was "a good thing for the Soviet Communist party, for the international Communist movement and also for the emerging forces because a cleavage within the international Communist movement may affect these forces."

The official New China news agency said the new Soviet rulers had expressed hope for "solidarity" between the Russians and the Chinese. The agency said the Chinese leaders had received a message from Soviet First Secretary Leonid Brezhnev and Premier Alexei Kosygin in reply to a Chinese note congratulating the Soviet leaders on their new positions.

Three Held Following Jewel Theft

NEW YORK (CP)—Less than 40 hours after one of the country's most startling jewel thefts, three men were arrested and charged in connection with it.

A fourth man also was booked, although not on a charge directly related to the theft.

The FBI said the jewels had yet to be recovered. The 22 gems were stolen Thursday night from New York's famed Museum of Natural History.

The gems are formally valued at $300,000, but several such as the world's largest star sapphire, the renowned "Star of India," and a star ruby described as the most perfect in the world, are regarded as priceless.

ARRESTED IN MIAMI

The FBI said two of the men were arrested Saturday in Miami and charged with transporting jewelry across state lines.

They are Allen Dale Kuhn, 28, a self - employed salvage diver with past jobs as a Miami Beach swimming instructor, and Jack Rolland Murphy, 27, a professional diver.

The third man, Roger Frederick Clark, was arrested in New York. Clark was booked on charges of burglary, possession of a gun, a blackjack, mace of a gun, a jackjack, marijuana and heroin.

The fourth man, Robert Bernier, 27, of Meriden, was booked at the same time as Clark. Police said Bernier was riding with Clark when police picked him up. There was a pistol in the car and police charged Ber-

Goldwater Says Viet Cong Raid Was Forecast

Reds Could Do It Again If They Wanted - Major

By JOHN T. WHEELER

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. military sources said today a disastrous Communist attack on the key U.S. installation at Bien Hoa could be repeated at a dozen or more bases in South Viet Nam.

"What's surprising is that the Viet Cong did not strike sooner," an American major at Bien Hoa said. "When it suits them, I am sure they will do it again."

The Viet Cong plastered the air base 18 miles northeast of Saigon with 100 mortar shells just after midnight Saturday, killing four Americans and two South Vietnamese and wounding 36. A fifth American was killed a few hours later in another mortar attack about five miles north of Bien Hoa.

Some predicted that the Bin Tan Son Nhut airbase in Saigon might be the next target of the Vie Cong.

The 30-minute attack on Bien Hoa destroyed or damaged 27 planes, including 20 U.S. Air Force B-57 jet bombers.

MEASURES TAKEN

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in South Viet Nam, said adequate measures had been taken to protect aircraft at Bien Hoa and other U.S. bases.

But some U.S. military sources believe that given the security situation in the countryside and the Viet Cong's proven ability in swift night attacks, the Bien Hoa victory could be repeated.

"Air bases can't move and the Viet Cong literally can come in and survey the base from most any tar position and drive marking stakes," an American artillery officer said.

Defences around the bases are in the hands of South Vietnamese forces. Patrolling is sometimes erratic and Viet Cong infiltration to within a few hundred yards of the base perimeter is not considered difficult.

When the Communists launched a fire early Sunday, Vie namese artillery opened up on suspected Cong positions but fired by guess work. The Viet Cong apparently escaped unscathed, eluding three battalions that were sent out at dawn. The pursuit was called off.

Old timers reminiscing about how much livelier it was in their youth would have been justified Saturday night as Canadians celebrated one of the quietest Hallowe'ens in memory.

Even the fireworks fizzled. Indeed under the steadying influence of municipal bylaws banning their use in Sydney, N.S., one of the few displays ended with six persons scheduled to appear in court for setting off firecrackers Saturday night.

Four deaths attributable to Hallowe'en marred the night.

Eight-year-old Natalie Galo of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., near Niagara Falls, died after being struck by a car which plowed into a group of youngsters getting from their car for their trick or treat.

Two other children were detained in hospital for treatment while three others were later released.

A Toronto man, 37 year-old William G. Hill, was drowned after leaving a Hallowe'en party on Toronto Island early Sunday. He fell into the water trying to pull his wife aboard a 16-foot outboard boat when she missed her footing and slipped.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Senator Barry Goldwater charged today that the "sheer incompetence" of Democratic strategists has set the war in South Viet Nam on the brink of disaster.

The Republican presidential nominee issued a statement in Phoenix demanding a "full and immediate explanation" from the Johnson administration of the Communist bombardment that killed four Americans and two South Vietnamese and wounded 36 while destroying six jet bombers at an air base near Saigon in South Viet Nam Saturday.

"This administration owes every American an explanation," the Arizona senator said "And it owes the cause of freedom a full accounting for its dereliction of duty in Viet Nam!"

Goldwater declared:

"I charge that the attack against our aircraft was successful because of sheer incompetence on the part of the political soldiers who have been running and ruining the show in Viet Nam.

Goldwater said before the attack, the government was warned "by a former highly placed official of the military" that airfield defences were inadequate. He did not name the man.

Goldwater said the warning apparently was ignored.

He called for a full and immediate explanation by this administration and by the civilian strategists who have let the war in Viet Nam drift right up to its present brink of disaster. "...

"The time is short, of course before election day, to bring the truth to our people from this disaster that looms in Viet Nam," Goldwater said. "The time is too short, perhaps, ever, to avoid that disaster."

Bishop Dean, 51, is on five years' leave from his Canadian diocese of Cariboo. His job as executive officer is to further the unity and mission of the whole communion

Canadians Generally Celebrate Quietest Hallowe'en in Memory

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Margaret Connors, 13, of Congelton Harbour, about 30 miles west of St. John's, Nfld., was killed when struck by a car as she walked along the highway near her home on her Hallowe'en rounds.

And Neil Robert Sinclair, who would have been 20 today, died of a revolver wound in his chest early Sunday in Brandon, Man., 30 miles north of Winnipeg, as a result of what police described as a Hallowe'en prank.

Police said Hallowe'en pranksters, who pulled up a "yield" sign, were responsible for a car-truck collision Sunday night near Markham, Ont., 30 miles north of Toronto, in which seven persons were injured.

Pranksters were believed to have caused nearly $200,000 damage to four businesses in Regina after twin tanks were blocked on the second floor of the building and four taps left running Saturday night.

The water overflowed and flooded a furniture store, a fur store, a washer service outlet and the offices of a firm that specializes in reproducing drawings and maps.

The accident occurred about 15 miles from this Annapolis Valley town when the car, driven by Stewart Garven Oliver, 35, of New Albany, N.S., failed to make a sharp turn and dropped into the small brook.

400 Canadian Troops Take Part in Exercise

ARGENTIA, Nfld. (CP) — About 400 Canadian troops swarmed over the sides of nine ships Sunday and set up defences around the United States naval base here.

The troops, who arrived after a rough 750-mile voyage from The Maritimes, are taking part in exercise Avalon, the biggest tri - service war games since the Second World War. They are acting as enemy saboteurs from getting at American installations.

With several high defence officials on hand to see the action, the soldiers quickly took up positions across a four-mile front to guard the entrance to the base. Sunday night Jay had captured four of the enemy's 30-man party, but not before sabotage had been set up on a huge radar dome about a mile from here.

The troops are all members of the 3rd Infantry Brigade group at Camp Gagetown, N.B. About 200 of them are being reported here aboard eight ocean escorts from Halifax, and another 200 are flying in. They embarked at Saint John N.B., aboard the 22,000-ton supply ship Provider.

Objective of the exercise which concludes Thursday, is to transport by sea army personnel and equipment to test the army, navy and airforce problems of naval logistic support and land force, problems associated with transport, unloading and tactical employment of air support.

Five Lives Claimed in Fire In Levis Hotel

Police said they would continue sifting the ashes today for a possible sixth victim.

Puckish Pranks, Humor Simmer Down on Hallowe'en

The Hallowe'en witched cauldron of puckish pranks and devilish humour is simmering down.

City and district police forces late Sunday were reporting the end of the season's "trick or treat" activities.

The quietest in years—outside of fights, was the final official summation.

In Belleville, much of the season which turned city streets to bedlam, was confined within the stout walls of the Memorial Centre where now is that the city's Police Association and Recreation Committee stage a high-spirited soiree for local teenagers.

Soaping of car and store windows still holds its own—though the slogans show less command of colorful English.

Minor damage was pulled on a Strathcona Drive householder. He woke Sunday morning to find his lawn deluged with brand-now practice golf balls.

He sold police there were 500 in all. He knew. He had to pick them up.

Police still are puzzling where the prankster found them all.

May Postpone Flag Debate To Take up Other Issues

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament meets today to learn whether the party leaders were able to take the heat off the latest political crisis stirred by prospects of a new flag collision.

While the possibility of an early election remained unchanged during the weekend, the probability of such an event faded late in the week.

On both sides of the Commons there seemed to be a general feeling that debate on the flag committees recommendations will be postponed.

In place of it, MPs expected that the Commons would now turn to a number of vital legislative matters — the Canada Pension Plan, redistribution, transportation legislation and proposed constitutional amending formula and the new labor code.

This prospect promised an end to the current debate on the government's request for interim spending authority to pay civil servants for November and December bills.

The money is needed by about Nov. 10. But some of the Conservatives, including Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, showed no sign of agreeing to it until it became clear whether the flag design they opposed so strongly will not be pushed through the Commons quickly.

It was widely predicted, especially among Conservatives, that the opposition was prepared to deny the government interim supply — and thus force an election — if flag recommendation was pressed ahead of the legislative program.

The anticipated outcome — postponement of the flag debate in favor of work on the legislative program — was high, removing the threat of an immediate election.

But neither government supporters nor opposition members were under any illusions that such a stop would mean a smooth course in ensuing weeks in the commons.

Bell Telephone Net Income Shows Increase

MONTREAL (CP) — The Bell Telephone Co. of Canada reported net income of $56,364,738 or $1.98 a share for the nine months ended September 30, an increase of $5,814,143 or $550,424 or $1.92 a share for the corresponding period in 1963.

The quarterly report to share holders said operating revenues increased by 7.7 per cent to $402,137,019 while operating expenses rose by six per cent to $255,911,819.

In a message to shareholders, President Marcel Vincent said Bell's net income reflects "a continuing increase in the rate in the relationship between revenues and expenses."

He said 159,672 new telephones were added to the system in the first nine months of this year, compared with 143,481 in the corresponding period of 1963.

DEMAND STRONG

Demand for long distance service continued strong, with the number of long distance calls 9.7 per cent higher than in the first nine months of 1963.

Mr. Vincent said the board of transport commissioners will hold public hearings early in 1965 to re-examine the permissive level of Bell's earnings and the basis upon which such level should be established.

"This initiative of the board affords the company a further opportunity to express its views on these matters," he said.

Legion Zone F3 and District F Shuffleboard playoff was won by Belleville Branch 99; Tom Hockings, team captain holds the District F trophy presented by Lloyd Austin, Port Hope, District sports officer and Clint Woodbeck holds Zone F3 prize.

Legion Wins Shuffleboard Championship

A most enjoyable day was spent on Saturday when six teams played off for the district Legion championship in shuffleboard. The district playoffs followed the zone eliminations, the winners of district will proceed to the Ontario Provincial playoffs. Shuffleboard is a fast rising sport in Legion and various other social, fraternal and service organizations. This was the first year the Legion has recognized shuffleboard in its series of sports and recreational activities.

Teams represented here were two from Belleville, one each from Trenton, Port Hope, Oshawa and Peterborough, with a total of 108 players participating. After a close, hard-fought series Belleville were the winners of the trophy, and first place, while second place went to Peterborough. It is understood that both of these teams will proceed to Woodstock for the provincial playoffs on Nov. 21st.

Port Hope took third place, while Oshawa won fourth Belleville's second team won fifth, while Trenton brought up the rearguard.

Some readers may wonder why Belleville entered two teams while all other zones entered only one team. Each zone was privileged to enter two teams. Zone F-3 were the only who did and both teams happened to be from Branch 99.

To show that Branch 99 of Belleville are good sportsmen they already hold the following trophies: Zone darts, district darts, four-man euchre, Zone Legion west four-man euchre, Zone Eight man cribbage, and Zone shuffleboard.

Branch 99 missed in district euchre by three points, but qualified for Provincial euchre and were runners-up at Woodbridge, losing out by a small margin of 6 points. Zone trophies will all be competed for again this winter.

BURSARIES

Once again the Branch has offered a $25. bursary to each of the four high schools in the city.

The qualification for these awards are that the student is a child of a veteran, and has successfully completed Grade 12 and has entered Grade 12 or some other institution of higher learning.

The award is made on a basis of need rather than academic standing. The awards this year go to Blair Johnston of Nicholson College, presented by Ron Rollins. Robert Probert of Moira Secondary, presented by president Dick Kirby. Rockie Taylor of Quinte Secondary, presented by Tom Purdy. Connie Stovell of Bellville Collegiate, presented by the president Dick Kirby.

A further presentation was made at the Belleville Collegiate to Robert E. Hobbs who won a $400 bursary from the Royal Canadian Legion and Ladies' Auxiliaries in Ontario. The Ladies' Auxiliaries this year have awarded no less than 42 bursaries totalling $15,000. Since 1950 they have raised $164,000 for bursaries. The Ladies' Auxiliaries make up approximately 90% of the Command Bursaries. This is where Robert S. Hobbs bursary came from so a great deal of credit should be given the ladies for their assistance in the furtherance of education.

ROYAL CANADIAN LEGION LADIES AUXILIARY

A large crowd attended the Ladies Auxiliary Hallowe'en dance Sat. night. This is an annual affair and what made this more enjoyable this year was that it fell on Saturday night. The costumes were many and varied, the judges had a difficult time in selecting the winners who were Mrs. Grant, Ann Cassidy, George and Gale Gow, Don Johnson and Norma Rushlow.

Spot dances were won by Mr. and Mrs. Bert Rushlow, Kay and Joseph Clarke, Arthur Giffin and Myrtle Crosley. A basket of canned goods donated by the members as a door prize was won by Frank Karnick.

New Directory Will List All ANC Numbers

Local telephone numbers are almost completely converted to the new numbering system, All Number Calling (ANC).

Customers are now receiving their "new look" telephone numbers printed on discs that fit the centre of the dial. Information operators are giving out telephone numbers the all-number way and the next issue of the directory, January 1965, will list all ANC numbers.

D. C. Curry, Bell Telephone manager emphasized that this is not a change in telephone number but just a new way of expressing existing ones. As the name suggests Belleville customers now have "All Number" telephone numbers. The letters are replaced with the corresponding figures on the dial. For example, WO 2-1234 becomes 962-1234. (W is 9 and O is 6 on your dial.)

The manager pointed out that ANC answers an urgent need for more telephone numbers brought on by the tremendous increase in telephones since World War II. For almost the first time, he said, telephone growth does not mean an extra digit to dial. ANC provides the most telephone numbers with the least change and inconvenience to customers.

In addition to providing more telephone numbers, ANC eliminates the confusion between the letter "O" and "zero" and between the letter "I" and the figure "1" and resulting errors that have plagued dial service since it began, the manager pointed out. Other common errors, caused by misspelling and mispronouncing exchange names, will be relegated to history.

There is still another advantage to ANC and one that will facilitate world wide dialing in the future: alphabets and letter arrangements on dials vary widely, but numbers form an internationally common language. Even today, 43 million dial telephones in 100 foreign countries use All Number Telephone numbers.

South Hastings Member Speaker At Conference

TRENTON — The RCAF Association Quinte Region conference at RCAF Station Trenton Sunday was a marked success with 60 wing members from five Quinte points in attendance.

One resolution to be brought to the attention of RCAF authorities is a request that members leaving the airforce receive automatically a year's free membership in the association. Before this, members have been asked to fill out a form and send it to the association. Sometimes, this gets "lost in the shuffle."

Guest speaker at an evening banquet was Robert Temple, MP for Hastings South. Mr. Temple praised the work of the association, especially along liaison lines with the RCAF and with members of parliament. Mr. Temple said this was the surest means of parliament members finding out the true feelings of serving members of the RCAF on various issues. Mr. Temple will be visiting NATO installations in Europe in a few weeks and has promised to update the association on the situation overseas.

The Peterborough wing won the Temple Trophy for indoor sports and Trenton wing president, Louis Hamel and James Williamson walked away with the regional euchre trophy.

Three Youths In Hospital

TRENTON — Three area youths, admitted to Trenton hospital Friday night following a one-car accident near Frankford are reported to be in satisfactory condition today.

The driver of the car, Gerald Donald Anderson, 18, of Wooler, was X-rayed for a possible skull fracture, but final reports on the X-ray are not known yet.

Passengers in the car, Dennis Patrick Regan, 18, and Frederick Adonius Vanderlind, 14, both of R.R. 1, Frankford, are still in hospital. Regan complained of a headache and is under observation. Vanderlind had four teeth knocked out. Ronald Russell Regan, 16, was treated for abrasions and released.

Police say the car went out of control and rolled over. Provincial police from the Brighton detachment investigated.

Mistook Car

TRENTON — Friday night, a high school girl reported to Trenton police she had piled her books in the back of a 1958 black Chevvie, which she thought was her mother's, only to find when she met her mother shopping, that the car was not theirs. An appeal went out over CJBQ, and the books were returned next day.

The girl told police she had carefully unlocked the door of the car, and carefully re-locked it, so, believe it or not, there are two 58 Chevvies with a common lock system.

Hallowe'en Proves Quiet

TRENTON — Police report only minor incidents over Hallowe'en, mostly soaped windows. Merchants are out today, washing off the unflattering comments, particularly, one local jeweller, where prankster had soaped in the comment, "Too d—— expensive," in front of a gem display.

Mrs. Jane Downs of the Prince Charles Parent-Teacher Association, says the UNICEF pennies will not be counted until tonight, but from all indications, collections were good. The Prince Charles club sponsored the UNICEF drive. Schools participating officially were Prince Charles and Calvin Christian. Some Dufferin Ave school children took part also and quite a few east Trenton children called in at Dr Byrne's and were given collection boxes, which they returned to this depot later.

NEW COURSE

The Australian National University at Canberra is introducing air space law as an aspect of its Bachelor of Law degree course, the first university to do so in Australia.

Saturday night, 413 and 418 wings of the RCAF Association joined to celebrate Hallowe'en with a dance in the 6 RD rec. hall. Prizes were won by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meiarkey, and these were presented by Thomas Bailey of 418 and Louis Knack of 413 wing. The program was emceed by James O'Brien, not in the picture. MP Robert Temple watches as the prizes are presented. (Photo by Hebbard Studios, Trenton.)

Probe Mishap

TRENTON — Ontario Provincial Police are investigating a Saturday night collision between a car and a parked truck on County Road No. 25, Cramahe township. Damage to the Swift Canadian truck was set at $1,000. Damage to the car was $900. Police have not released the name of the driver of the car but say John Kelly of R.R. 3, Colborne, was in the car at the time of the collision. He was not injured.

Those Crowded Dockets

Among the most overworked of civil servants in this province are those who serve on the Bench.

It is, therefore, just and proper that a salary increase for them has finally arrived.

By April 1, it is expected, Ontario magistrates will earn from $13,000 to $18,000 a year. Thus, it is hoped, they will be sufficiently rewarded in the service.

That service demands a wide latitude in mental application. It is demanded of our magistrates that they render opinions on the guilt—or innocence—of motorists travelling more than 30 miles an hour and persons to be committed for trial on a charge of murder.

Minor infractions of social behavior and the most heinous of crimes are rated worthy of equal attention on the dockets of a magistrate's court, and this is how it should be.

In a democracy, all citizens accused before the law are entitled to an equal hearing. Still, to be realistic, the dockets of our magistrate's courts too often are dominated by these self-same minor infractions.

Local by-law infractions, speeding charges, liquor charges—all are called before the magistrate.

Granted, many of these are settled out of court—the accused either accepting the fact he is guilty as charged, or that the allegation is too trivial to merit a personal court appearance.

Yet, all charges must be processed before the bench. And in this age of acquisition with its emphasis on the Good Life, personal responsibility in social behavior is a declining factor. Lamentable or no, the future promises an ever-increasing burden on our magistrates.

There are two answers. One is to appoint more magistrates and deputy magistrates. The other, perhaps a more realistic move, is to extend the authority of our Justices of the Peace to process those allegations which, at the most, embarrass the accused.

Up and at 'Em Harry!

Forthright attitudes in political circles are as refreshing as they are rare.

In his brief tenure of office as Federal Agriculture Minister, Harry Hays, has proved no slouch when it comes to speaking his mind. In fact, he is something of a catalyst of mild outrage among politicians.

It was no different when he rose to address the farmers of Falher, Alta., the other day.

No political cliches for him. Instead of lauding his party and heaping opprobrium on his opponents, he put the boot on the other foot.

"I think at last Liberal government had forgotten the farm during its declining years," he charged. "I'll go even further—on the basis of its record with our farmers, the last Liberal government deserved to be kicked out when it was."

In turn he praised the succeeding Conservative administration for its concern with agriculture—though with some reserve.

"My only objection is that they only went half as far as they should have."

There is a traditional picture of the farmer as a man of social bluntness. Mr. Hays was a big-time farmer before his election to office.

His forthright statements at least demonstrate his office has not gone to his head—that he is still very much a man of his background.

And what better a man to qualify for the portfolio of national agriculture—even at some slight discomfiture to his political colleagues!

The English laws punish vice; the Chinese laws do more, they reward virtue. — Goldsmith.

Disarmament is a worthwhile aim and should extend to youthful neckers behind the wheel of a car.

Even a very mild kind of direction and guidance may seem like interference to an adolescent impatitent to be on his own. — Arthur T. Jersild.

Prosperity is a great teacher; adversity is a greater. Possession pampers the mind; privation trains and strengthens it.—Haslitt.

Balanced Diet Required Where Ulcers Concerned

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please send me a copy of "Local Secret of Reducing." I enclose the required 10 cents in coin and a long, unstamped, self-addressed envelope.

Would this leaflet be helpful in case I have ulcers and/or an irritated colon? — M. D. H.

Yes, the leaflet is adaptable, although you must use common sense in adjusting your diet.

With ulcers, a bland diet is required, but a bland (non-irritating) one need not necessarily be excessively high in calories. One problem is that of drinking cream. You can hold this to a minimum by not overdoing it or else by substituting milk. Watch the pattern of your ulcer pains. Learn how long you can go, at various times of day, without suffering. Then drink just a little cream (or half and half) at the strategic time which will stall off an attack.

An irritated colon is a different problem. You will have to avoid, as a rule, foods with too much "ash" or residue, and those with strong, resistant vegetable fibres, as well as seedy fruits.

The most difficult part, as far as reducing goes, is that you must avoid the "diet trick" which helps some people: That is, eating celery, raw carrots, etc., when they become hungry. Strained, low-calorie vegetables can be substituted.

Incidentally, I suggest that people who ask for "Lost Secret" also ask for a copy of my Calorie Chart. It's two very well together. You can have both in the same, self-addressed long, unstamped envelope that you send. Please enclose 20 cents in coin instead of ten if you want both together.

Dear Dr. Molner: Should a diabetic who takes insulin drink alcoholic beverages? I have heard that this could cause blindness. — Mrs. R. D.

Alcoholic beverages do not of themselves cause blindness in a diabetic.

At the same, they are risky from the standpoint of upsetting control of the condition and providing accidents when done to excess. If a diabetic proposes to use alcohol at all, he should discuss it with his doctor and abide by whatever restrictions are specified. Uncontrolled diabetes does, indeed, sometimes cause blindness.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 28. Ever since my teens I have walked and sat in a slumped position. As the years go by, my posture gets worse. Is there such a thing as shoulder braces for this? — Mrs. J. B.

Yes, but you may be a little late, and shoulder braces are not very comfortable.

It's better to pay attention to your sitting and standing posture. Along with this, take exercises to strengthen your back muscles — bending, twisting, leg-raising.

Firm your shoulder muscles with push-ups and arm exercises.

This will require effort on your part, but you can't correct, overnight, habits that have been building for a decade or so.

It would be most helpful to have your doctor arrange for a therapist to coach you in just how the exercises should be done but it will still be up to you to fix your mind on changing your posture, and doing your exercises every day without fail.

Celebration of Hallowe'en in Belleville was orderly, except for the reported breaking of a few windows, which of course should not have happened. But the general observance was on a high plane and everyone enjoyed it the more for that reason.

The great success of the Kinsmen's effort to raise money for "Bundles for Britain" and combined with the program for the entertainment of about 2,300 boys and girls of the city was something of which the club members must be very proud for this project served a double purpose in that to raise money for their war project and also directed the attention of the school boys and girls of Belleville along constructive lines, to lend their aid to such a philanthropic object as aiding the girls them a model program of Hallowe'en entertainment.

Criticism Outrages Press

By Ben H. Bagdikian in a speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Almost no one objects out loud to the abstract idea that the press is a legitimate target for criticism by society at large.

Yet of all the great institutions of our country, the press is the least subject to over-all systematic study. It is the least co-operative with its critics and studies it runs less critical news of itself than of other segments of our social system, and it is the most easily outraged at suggestions by other institutions that the press might have some serious failings.

The idea of expose, complaint and reform is built into the heart of American newspapering — when it is applied to others.

Papers ought to resign themselves to this same therapy for themselves. And to the fact that they are no more entitled to select their critics than are politicians or playwrights.

• • •

When Carl Lindstrom published his book, The Fading American Newspaper, it was greeted with outrage, not in the reviews or in rebuttals to specific arguments but in the official, front-office response that pictured Lindstrom as a traitor to his trade.

During the Fulbright hearings last year, newspapers generally gave good coverage to testimony showing that some foreign agents manipulated congressional bureaucratic action, but when testimony showed that they had also manipulated favorable press treatment with some serious journalistic conflict-of-interest, most of these same papers modestly averted their gaze from such vulgar evidence.

I drifted into the work of studying the press a few years ago . . . My study involved talking to some publishers and that is when I discovered this terrible trauma.

Without my ever having mentioned it, suddenly the late A. J. Liebling would be thrust into the discourse by the enraged proprietor.

Some would say things like, "It's people like Liebling are you . . . " — a flattering association that would have surprised Liebling.

In Liebling's memory and in the light of my experiences, I would like to propose a new unit of measurement to be used in journalism the way volt, ohm and ampere are used in electricity.

Since so many proprietors seemed to have normal blood pressure of 120-over-80 when we talked about other things but zoomed to as high as 220 when Liebling or money-making came up, I would like to suggest that five points of publisher blood pressure constitute one Liebling, and that this scale go up to a terrible maximum of 50 Lieblings, the equivalent of absolute apoplexy . . .

• • •

Let me mention one more personal experience.

You will be surprised to learn that among proprietors of newspapers there is a certain reserve about displaying financial statements, a reserve roughly equal to the CIA's attitude toward its list of agents in Peking. So, beyond some happy exceptions, I was resigned to looking at combined figures for groups of papers.

• • •

One of the better-known newspaper associations entertained the idea of letting me see their combined figures.

At about this time, I had picked up my Washington Post one morning and read about Fidel Castro on Page One, Fidel Castro on the Jump, Fidel Castro on the editorial page, Fidel Castro opposite the editorial page and then, by God, there was Fidel Castro in Little Orphan Annie, Bus Sawyer and Dan Flagg.

So I wrote a piece of frou-frou, called "Stop Laughing, It's the Funnies," complaining that funnies aren't funny any more and saying that I really didn't want Daddy Warbucks instructing my kids on foreign policy. And I sent it to that subversive publication, The New Republic.

• • •

Shortly thereafter, I heard from the newspaper group saying that they would not look at their combined figure and for the reason which I now quote directly from their letter:

"Since your request first came to our attention, there have been a number of articles published which, in the opinion of the committee, have reflected on newspapers generally and to which responses have been used in a way which they believe to be inaccurate.

"Among such articles was one published in The New Republic on Jan. 8 entitled, 'Don't Laugh, It's the Funnies,' which the magazine attributes to you . . ."

• • •

Proprietors get angry on the subject of monopoly, partly because there is a great deal of senseless moralizing about this economic fact of life and partly because publishers, through monopolizing local printed news, are in fierce competition for advertising dollars, fighting against magazines and broadcasting.

One sign of the insecurity this fight produces is Rupert Murdoch's campaign to make television disappear by printing TV listings.

It would have been wiser simply to refer to the other advertising mediums as "the high-priced spread . . ."

Not-So-Private Eye

Vancouver Sun

A recent introduction to the American political campaign is the eye camera, a device used by the advertising agency of Erwin Wasey, Ruthrauff and Ryan, Inc., in testing consumer response to products — political products included.

The eye camera measures what is called non-verbal response to political questions. The orists say the pupil of the eye dilates if the subject is attracted and contracts if repelled. (The reaction of girls' eyes to boy questioners is not stated.)

Apart from their four to five million dollar fee from each campaign funds, two reasons for not laughing at Erwin Wasey and Etc. occur to us.

One is that devices such as the eye camera have established some record of success in selling soap and other products. Camera studies in supermarkets indicate that skillful arrangement of products by shapes, sizes and colors can induce a partially-hypnotic state in which the shoppers' impulse to buy is increased.

The second is that the techniques of "image making" are becoming increasingly important in elections everywhere. Considerations such as the estimate of how many votes Richard Nixon lost because television revealed his blue beard are matters of serious consideration to political campaign managers.

The regrettable features of this are plain enough.

Policies become less important, appearance more so, and what a candidate says may be less noted than the way he says it.

The trend will not be reversed merely because we deplore it. However we are grateful to Mr. Wasey and his associates for opening our eyes to the latest development!

Give Him A Star to Steer by

(REPRINTED BY REQUEST)

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

O Lord, whichever one it may be, give him a star to steer by.

Drain away the passion and the hate flowing on all sides of him.

Make cool the fevers of dissension; make charitable the followers of his foe.

Unite us, not for war or victory, but for righteousness; and we cannot fail.

Give him the courage to do the right as he sees it, not seeking the favored men or the applause of nations.

O Lord, whichever one it may be, make him walk straight in the darkness of these days, with only a star to guide him;

Ignoring the voices that are not Your voice; casting off the hands that are not Your hands.

For there are many, O Lord, who take Your name in vain, even as in the past; who make of You a God of war and violence and hatred and bigotry; and all these abominations in Your name.

We are troubled; we are torn; we have lost the way.

The world has become a terror unto us; we are strong, and new or before we must rich, and never before so poor; informed, and never before so ignorant.

We have the instruments of strength; the arrogance of mastery; the vanity of human knowledge; but none of these will save us, as they saved not the mighty empires of the past.

Only a star will save us; even as we have been saved before.

The Lord, make this the man; give him the light, the upward look, the dream You dreamed when You fashioned us in Your image.

Let him see a sign; let him know Your children are crying where under the sun; as troubled, as torn, as lost as we are.

Let him see beyond the darkness of ambition to the radiance of love; from the narrow valley of self-interest to the broad plateau of mankind's common fears and hopes and needs; from the sense of Your farthood to the unwavering acceptance of our brotherhood;

Let him know that the enemy is not outside us, but inside us, not in the world, but in the heart, in the mind, in the passions; and purify him, so that his tongue will tell the way to truth.

And give him the courage, not of his convictions, but of Your commandments; and the hardest of all: to love our enemies.

In Your will, our peace.

Says Callousness Today Unbelievable

Ontario Intelligencer,

You finished your 'Trade and Hunger' editorial, October 20th, with the paragraph: 'One day, posterity may identity our time with the most monstrous.' I understand it, I guess, I believe we know this now, and who really cares.

A generation ago at least many of us could claim with some truth that we were ignorant of the conditions you describe. Present day news media have completely eliminated that excuse for what it was worth. Today we all share responsibility for this indifference to human misery with a callousness that is unbelievable.

It would seem that we in the Western capitalist world, with a standard of material living never approached before, are content to allay our conscience with blasts of anti-communism.

P.M. Wilson Intends to Push Ahead Despite Opposition To Nationalize Steel Industry

The AP world spotlight this week takes it from 24 Prime Minister Harold Wilson's plans to again nationalize the British steel industry, and shifts it to Premier Khrushchev's reaction to the ouster of Nikita S. Khrushchev. Also examines the farmer's role in the French economy, and points to two important European elections next fall.

LONDON (AP)—Despite opposition, Prime Minister Harold Wilson intends to push ahead in the next few weeks with his plan to renationalize the British steel industry.

Wilson's Labor party controls the House of Commons by five votes, a thin margin for getting controversial legislation through Parliament.

Yet party success say Wilson is determined to put Britain's steel industry—nationalized for a brief period 13 years ago—back under state ownership.

The Conservatives are organizing for last-ditch opposition. The Liberals also are against renationalization. The struggle to keep steel in private hands has the backing of many leading figures in industrial and banking circles.

The Labor party says the steel industry is not as efficient and forward-looking as it should be and that it must come under public ownership to help revitalize Britain's economy.

Opponents contend Wilson must nationalize steel to keep the Labor party's restive left wing in line.

As now organized, the industry operates successfully in competition with public regulations. It has been subject to some form of government control since world war I. Since 1932 when its rate of unemployment ran as high as 40 per cent, the British steel industry's annual steel production was 12,700,000 tons. A record level of 24,300,000 tons was reached in 1960 when utilization of plants reached 94 per cent of capacity.

MIXED ECONOMY

The post-war Labor government of Clement Attlee (now Lord Attlee) followed in 1945 election triumph by nationalizing Britain's railways, mines, gas and electric power industries, airlines and the Bank of England. These measures gave Britain a mixed economy—part socialist, part private enterprise—which prevails to this day.

The steel industry's case was different.

In the 1950 election, Attlee's party scraped home by a margin of six votes—a situation parallel to that facing Harold Wilson. It set up the Iron and Steel Corporation of Great Britain. This public body bought out steel shares. In time it had 90 firms, almost the entire industry, under public ownership.

In 1951, Winston Churchill's Conservatives formed the government. Under party whips, Conservative influences prices.

Various branches of the industry were linked by their own British Iron and Steel Federation.

A Labor party policy statement says state ownership "will make it possible to simplify the industry's structure." Advocates of private enterprise contend the industry in the long run would be damaged by being caught up again in a political clash.

NICOSIA (AP) — Led by a sound truck blaring a Beatles record, more than 10,000 perspiring Greek-Cypriots marched in a Communist-organized demonstration demanding the withdrawal of Britain's three military bases from Cyprus.

The march gave a capsule picture of how events in Cyprus are playing into the hands of the Communists, the only organized political party on the island.

Since the Cyprus crisis erupted last December, the feelings of many Greek-Cypriots by no means Communists themselves — have gradually come into line with Communist policy. Neutralism for the island, down with the West and down with NATO.

Communist tactics have been to step up all the stage, organize and let events take their course, with the popularity of AKEL (the Reform Party of Cyprus Workers) feeds and grows on the anti-Western feelings.

The Soviet Union has declared its support for President Makarios and signed an aid agreement.

Soviet Ambassador Pavel Ershov has appeared when he appears. In public. Western statesman are booed when they leave the island. Greek farmers and conservative Greek - Cyprists have joined the Cyprus-Soviet Friendship Society.

OPENS A RIFT

The possibility of Cyprus' slipping toward the Communist orbit has been partly responsible for opening a rift between Makarios and right-wing army officers who oppose Soviet aid and support immediate union of the island with NATO Greece. Makarios wants to consider the possibility of union later.

AKEL claims more than 10,000 members and holds five of the 50 seats in the island's parliament. A few Communists are believed to have fairly influential positions in the ministries.

One reason is the Greek Orthodox religion in which Cyprus and Greece are united. Greek bishop Makarios represents. As a political leader, Makarios is considered to be a leftist whatever he can get it, but as head of the island's church, he opposes atheistic communism.

Also, the average Cypriot still seems to feel attached to the Western world.

Makarios advocates the same aims, but declares that the ultimate goal is enosis, union with Greece.

PARIS (AP)—French farmers are up in arms about their role in the national economy.

They want a wider slice of France's current prosperity. As they see it, they are being treated as poor relations in a family of increasing affluence.

The farmers' case is a story behind last week's unsuccessful attempt to unseat Premier Georges Pompidou through a vote of censure in the National Assembly — a parliamentary move aimed really at President de Gaulle. As expected, the government's majority beat back the motion.

Farm spokesmen insist, however, that this was only the opening gun in a campaign looking to next year's presidential and various municipal and departmental (county) elections. The heat will be on deputies from rural areas who supported Pompidou and bills in the eyes of farm organizations, betrayed their constituents.

The government, fighting inflation, says any concession to the farmers on produce prices will push open the flood gates to high living costs. The farmers contend that the remedy lies in a reform of France's antiquated distribution channels which frequently double an item's cost between farm and retail market.

SEEK NEW MARKETS

This farm unrest is reflected in the French attitude toward the European Common Market unless the six-country organization soon establishes a common market for agricultural products. The government's aim is to get a great French farmers new markets in West Germany at prices a cut above those now prevailing in France.

Farm produce in France comes under a complicated system of minimum and ceiling and guaranteed minimum prices. For the producers, these ceiling and minimum rates tend to be the same. Farmers, writing their own ticket, say the ceilings must be raised.

Farm organizations see far too great a spread between prices received by the farmers and those paid by the housewife. In other words, too many middlemen.

The farmers' spokesmen contend that farm prices can be raised and current retail prices maintained simply by compressing the profits of middlemen. A survey by one farmers' organizations says 40 per cent of Frenchmen live directly or indirectly on agricultural earnings.

BONN (AP)—The future of the United States' alliance with Western Europe depends on two key issues next year, Britain and West Germany.

The French polling date probably will be set for the last fall of 1965. It is expected that President de Gaulle will run against Ludwig Erhard in already deep in the campaign for the election, also next fall. Mayor Willy Brandt of West Berlin hopes to put him out and give West Germany its first Socialist government.

Prosperous, and sceptical of any [illegible] danger, both Frenchmen and West Germans are likely to be more concerned with domestic issues than with defence or foreign affairs.

But many also want to reassert themselves as Europeans after two decades of U.S. leadership in world affairs.

The Gaullists want to make the continent as independent as possible of Washington. So they call the U.S. and British Such leaders as Chancellor Erhard and Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson are ready to accept U.S. leadership, although many want a stronger voice in the way it is exercised.

West Germany, France Battle Over Trade

By CARL HARTMAN

BONN (AP)—Relations stand at a low point between the governments of France and West Germany, new friends and old enemies.

The main troubles:

1. Chancellor Erhard's support of the United States on questions of nuclear arms and on trade matters.

2. President de Gaulle's new east flirtation with Moscow.

Chances for improvement:

1. An offer due this week from Chancellor Erhard on a new organization for European political unity, plus some new proposals on trade. De Gaulle is not likely to find that it can go far enough in giving France a bigger share of world trade for its products in Germany.

2. Anything the newly elected U.S. president can do to get France and West Germany pulling smoothly with the United States and Britain.

SIGNED TREATY

It was less than two years ago that ex-chancellor Konrad Adenauer and De Gaulle signed a treaty of special friendship between their two countries which had fought three bloody wars against one another in less than a century.

In the year Erhard has been chancellor, differences with de Gaulle have widened.

The French farm and food products has been at the bottom of much bitterness. De Gaulle wants a bigger share for them in the West Germany for French farm exports, especially grain. The French president has an obligation to let the United States and other overseas exporters keep a fair share of the market they won during the days of the Marshall Plan, when the food was a gift.

De Gaulle now is threatening to pull out of the Common Market if the talks founder. He has not taken so far toward a United States of Europe, unless he gets satisfaction on farm policy.

During the weekend there has been talk of France pulling out of the Atlantic pact, too.

What Constitutes English Canadian Not Decided

TORONTO (CP) — University students across Canada left for home Sunday night still wondering what constitutes an English Canadian.

About the closest definition offered after a four-day conference on The Changing Face of English Canada sponsored by the Canadian Union of Students, that he is not a French Canadian and he is not an American.

Dr. Stephen Leacock, former minister of municipal affairs, told the closing session of the conference that only white Anglo-Canadians are frightened by his province's silent revolution.

He said the province has probably had a legitimate ambition that would benefit the entire nation.

Premier Lesage of Quebec told the Montreal daily newspaper Le Devoir, said most of those who advocate separation in the province have never been in positions of authority in the province and probably never will be.

NEED FOR STUDY

Mr. Ryan, speaking on the French Canadian view of English Canadians, said there was a need on the part of both elements for more study with open minds.

If they tried to solve their problems in narrow nationalistic terms, then Canada was doomed, not as a nation but as a democratic society, he said. But they could contrive to explore the possibilities for positive co-operation.

Saturday, Gordon Fairweather, Conservative Member of Parliament for Royal and Arnbrew Brewin (NDP) — Toronto Greenwood) recommended the idea of any protracted new flag debate in Parliament.

The New Brunswick MP sailed the idea "intolerable" in the face of reports that Party Leader John Diefenbaker is considering delaying a vote on acceptance of the report of the Commons flag design committee, while Mr. Brewin said a delaying tactic would endanger Confederation.

Russia Drops Objections To Ottawa Meeting on UN Peace-Keeping Operations

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Russia has apparently dropped its objections to the Canada-sponsored meeting on United Nations peacekeeping operations which opens here today.

However, diplomatic sources added Sunday this does not indicate any softening of the hard Soviet attitude on non-payment of its assessed share of UN peacekeeping costs in the Middle East and The Congo.

Russia and some other countries face loss of their votes in the UN General Assembly which opens Dec. 1 because of refusal to help pay for UN peacekeeping operations not initiated or financed by the Security Council. The Middle East and Congo UN operations were established by the General Assembly.

It was learned authoritatively that External Affairs Minister Martin and Soviet Ambassador Ivan Shpedko met briefly Saturday at least four occasions the peacekeeping meeting has been discussed. The meeting is an attempt to put pressure on some countries concerning the financing of UN peacekeeping operations.

CONVINCED RUSSIANS

The assumption in diplomatic circles here was that Mr. Martin had managed to convince the Russians that the meeting here is technical only, and will deal, as he has said often publicly, with such matters as financing of UN peacekeeping missions.

Mr. Martin also evidently convinced the UN that of the technical - only nature of the meeting. Observers at UN is sending one or two official observers to the five-day conference.

Authorities said Mr. Martin had thus achieved something other Canadian efforts have failed to do.

With the UN meeting in month, Canada would have been in an embarrassing position if Russia had kept insisting that Canada, a NATO member, was trying to stick its nose into the political affairs of the UN.

The meeting is confined to countries which have contributed to UN peacekeeping operations or which have designated military units for such duties.

Eight of the countries invited by Canada — Yugoslavia, Indonesia and six African nations — have failed to attend Sources indicated the six African countries might have accepted if the UN meeting had been sooner its withdrawal of its objections.

The Power Women Have Over Men.

Is it simply the power to say "NO!"—as one man claims? Is giving praise the secret of women's success? Or is it solely a matter of sex? Dreams of Unity Being Shattered By Dissension

LONDON (CP) — Deepening clouds of dissension are rising over western Europe and Britain, darkening and perhaps shattering dreams of unity.

The cleavage was accentuated by the European storm aroused by Britain's sudden announcement last week of a 15-per-cent import tariff—imposed without first consulting her European friends.

The new British tariffs, described by the Labor government as "temporary, are to be closely examined by a General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade special committee with the idea of perhaps forcing revisions by mid-December.

The European complaint is that by imposing the special tariff, contrary to GATT rules, Britain placed the major burden of her international payments problem on countries heavily dependent on the British market for sales.

The GATT committee, of which Canada is a member, will consider whether other "punitive" courses are open to Britain, an indication that the GATT machinery is in a good mood to grant Britain a waiver from her obligations.

RIFT TO WIDEN

The rift caused by the import tariff is likely to be widened with reports that the new Labor administration has decided to crush Britain's agreement with France to undertake joint development of the Concorde supersonic jet airliner. Costs of the project have zoomed from the original estimates of about $480,000,000 to a new forecast of more than $1,000,000,000.

But Britain is not alone in stirring the heart of European disunity. France has accused West Germany for failing to agree to uniform grain and dairy prices within the six - country Common Market and Germany has criticized France for providing the Soviet Union with long-term trade credits.

French President de Gaulle has threatened to pull out of the Common Market and thus tear up the whole concept of European political unity. Weekend reports from Paris quoting sources as saying de Gaulle was not bluffing.

The European authorities maintain the Common Market is too far advanced to be broken up. The London Times Telegraph describes Whitehall opinion as suggesting 'britain's protective tariff measures will set her back pedalling on the Anglo-French Concorde scheme now being used by the government to rub home his theme that France can place no reliance on any partner and that no other nation is sufficiently 'European' to share her confidence."

CAN SYMPATHIZE

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Finance Minister Walter Gordon says all Canadians can sympathize with and encourage Quebec's need for two cultural societies making use of two languages, but any idea of two economic societies is dangerous and should be opposed. Mr. Gordon was speaking here Saturday at Brock College, celebrating its 75th anniversary.

Mayor Whitton May Be Ready To Run Again

OTTAWA (CP)—Mayor Charlotte Whitton refused to commit herself Saturday on whether she will be a candidate for mayor in the Dec. 7 civic election.

Speaking at what appeared to be the kick-off buoy of her election campaign—a Hallowe'en tea at an Ottawa department store for the women voters—the mayor told a crowd of about 400 people that if they would pledge themselves to encourage "responsible and intelligent" citizens to run for other civic offices on the city council, then I will commit myself to this high, hard duty of being mayor again."

Asked following her speech by reporters if it was her intention to run again, the mayor refused to make a definite statement.

"You heard what I asked my supporters to do," she said.

She wound up her speech, however, with these words—"So long as my friends say I'm not too late to seek another term."

Robert Young, uncle of the bridegroom and Rev. J. A. McDermaid, minister of the church officiated before a background of bronze and gold mums and colorful autumn leaves. Mr. D. Esplin provided traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Marion Hoag in two appropriate selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father wore a floor-length gown of white Chantilly lace over peau de sole attired with mother of pearl sequins. The fitted bodice came to a "V" at the back and featured a scalloped neckline and long sleeves of Chantilly lace. The billowing skirt was formed by tier upon tier of Chantilly lace extending into a long lace train. Her shoulder-length bouffant veil of white silk tulle fell from a butterfly headpiece of seed pears and she carried a bouquet of Talisman roses mingled with white stephanotis.

Their headdresses consisted of three roses of the same material with matching tulle and each carried a nosegay of gold and bronze 'mums.

Mr. Ryan Ruf of Sudbury was groomsman while Mr. Lloyd White, brother of the bride and Mr. Harold Werkhoven of Lopdon, Ontario were the ushers.

The reception followed by a dance was held at the North Halton Country Club, Georgetown, where the bride's table was most attractive, centred with a three-tier wedding cake topped with wedding bells and misted about the base with white tulle and dainty rosebuds. Glowing candles and the bridal bouquets completed the nuptial setting.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a street length gown of beige peau de sole with lace bodice and lace insert with brown accessories including a striking dark brown velvet hat with multi-colored feathered brim and a corsage of bronze roses. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a street length sheath of emerald green, embossed crepe, dark brown accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

For the wedding trip through New York and Pennsylvania to Penn Hills Honeymoon Lodge in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania, the bride chose a three-piece double knit cranberry red suit, black velvet picture hat, other black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Guests were present from Shannonville, Port Credit, Brampton, Oakville, London, St. Catharines, Belleville, Toronto, Sudbury, Brantford, Gananoque, Amelisburg, Hamilton, Carrying Place, Cannington, Newmarket, Willowdale and Brockport, New York.

Previous to the marriage the bride was honored at miscellaneous showers given by the staff of American Motors, Brampton with Mrs. Rita Balrstow as hostess, assisted by Mrs. Doreen Forties and Mrs. Mary Kosting; also by the bridesmaids at the home of Mrs. Sherril Mitchell in Belleville with Miss Muriel White and Miss Linda Patterson as co-hostesses. She was also presented with an electric frying pan by her co-workers at American Motors.

A miscellaneous shower was held in Victoria United Church when members of the community of the bridegroom were present. The mother of the bride entertained at a trousseau tea in honor of her daughter at the home of Mrs. George Greatrix in Belleville.

Susanna's Family Fare

AMONG OUR SOUVENIRS

Dear Susanna: Here is an idea that has proven to be of great value to our family.

As each one of our girls reached the age of 3 or so her name was written on a large file folder. Then, in the years to come whenever she won an award, passed a music test, received an athletic ribbon or obtained special mention for some project or examination, we filed it loot away. Also included were their term reports, class pictures, birth certifitates and doctor's reports.

You would be amazed at the number of uses we find for the contents of these folders and how often we refer to them.

For instance one of our daughters was anxious to obtain admittance to a special school, and this handy record of her past achievements was a determining factor in her being accepted. — Mr. and Mrs. R.S.

Files for fillies! Might be very handy at that! — SUSANNA.

SWITCHEROO

Dear Susanna: I am another working mother who has only a limited time each week to sandwich in household chores. The once-over-lightly touch to our six room house manage quite well through the week, but when it comes to the more thorough weekend cleaning tasks I always end up at various stages of incompletion.

So one day decided to change directions. Now, when it is time to do those extra cleaning chores, I always start in a different room. This way, by the end of three weeks or a month you will find that you have covered the whole place. Not only that, it adds humour to the task as you get the distinct feeling that you are really putting one over on the house! — A. Reasod.

For such a clever idea I think we should bestow on you the honorary title of "Wrong Way Corridor". — SUSANNA

SODA STOPS SMELLS

Dear Susanna: It isn't always convenient to put covers on all the bowls of food in our refrigerator, but I don't, the taste of one food is often picked up by another. Is there any little trick I could try that would stop this happening? — Perplexed.

If you're having trouble with food odors sneaking out of their containers, here is a suggestion.

Fill a cup with dry baking soda and park it at the rear of the bottom shelf where it is well out of the way. The soda will absorb food odors, thereby preventing them from flitting around the refrigerator and establishing themselves in other foods.

It's a little like having an air wick in your fridge!—SUSANNA

REPLACE RAILS

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — New guard rails of steel and aluminum designed to bounce an out-of-control automobile back on to the highway will replace older, outdated railings, the New York state department of motor vehicles says. The stronger, more flexible railings will be installed along the state's highways as old ones wear out.

MR. AND MRS. PATRICK BERNARD HOGAN

Hogan – Sprackett

At Sacred Heart Church, Madoc, a double ring ceremony took place when Sharon Dolila Sprackett of Gilmour, Ontario, was united in marriage to Patrick Bernard Hogan of Steenburg.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Douglas Sprackett, and the bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Charles Hogan and the late Charles Hogan.

Rev. P. Carty of Tweed performed the ceremony. Baskets of white and pink 'mums decorated the church, with candles on the altar. Mr. John Murphy, cousin of the bridegroom, was organist, and accompanied the junior choir in several selections before the ceremony, and also as the wedding party was leaving the church. Misses Jane, Susan and Nancy Murphy, cousins of the bridegroom sang a selection, and during the signing of the register Miss Lynne Armstrong sang a solo.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a full length a-sleeveless bridal gown of dacron with lightly scooped neckline and fitted bodice. The bell shaped skirt had unpressed pleats with detachable train and contour headband. The overjacket was of rose patterned handmade silk lace imported from France with three-quarter length scalloped sleeves, high round neck and lace covered buttons. Her headdress was a crown of pearls and her three-tiered silk illusion veil was waist-length. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and white Shasta 'mums.

Miss Sharon Newman of Cornwall was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Sandra Sprackett and Miss Bonnie Sprackett, sisters of the bride. They wore identical gowns in French blue silk faille with round necklines. The French lace overjackets were blue with white daisies, and had short sleeves and bow trim at the back closing. They wore matching shoes and silk box hats, and carried blue-tinted 'mums.

Michael Hogan of Belleville was groomsman for his brother and the ushers were Lawrence Tripp of Whitby and Raymond Peters of Oshawa.

A reception was held at Gilmour United Church parlors which were decorated with pink and white streamers and bells. The three-tiered wedding cake was trimmed with pink roses and silver leaves, and was topped with a miniature bride and bridegroom under a arbor of flowers with doves holding wedding rings. The cake was flanked by silver candelabra holding white candles and the bridal bouquets completed the attractive setting.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a two-piece turquoise linen dress with matching lace, pink accessories and corsage of pink roses.

The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing printed silk of yellow, brown and green shades, green accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

For travelling to Quebec City and points east, the bride wore a Dior blue sheath dress with matching jacket, white picture hat and accessories, and corsage of white carnations.

Guests attended the wedding from Whitby, Oshawa, Weston, Coe Hill, Malton, Sarnia, Montreal, Warkerville, Kingston, Gilmour, Little Current, Belleville, Madoc, St. Ola and the Ridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Hogan are residing at 30 Chatham Street, Belleville.

A shower honoring the bride was given at the home of Lynda Wardle and was attended by her co-workers from the Department of Pathology where the bride is employed.

Friends and neighbors gave a community shower in the Gilmour church parlors.

Increased Demand Is Noted For Higher Protein Foods

MONTREAL — The pattern of Canadian food consumption will "continue to shift in the direction of higher protein foods and foods which satisfy an increasing demand for variety and convenience," according to the Bank of Montreal Business Review for October, just issued.

The bank reviews the changes that have taken place in food in the past decade and notes that, with new methods of processing and distribution, the housewife buys a "packet of built-in services."

Many of the changes in the last decade also reflect the tendency, as living standards rise, to eat less food with a high carbohydrate content.

FOOD PRICES RISE

With these changes, plus higher spending on restaurant meals, the bank says that some rise in food prices would be expected and this has taken place.

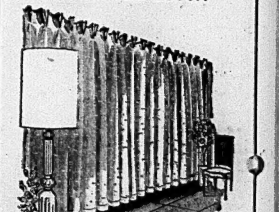
"The wonder is, however, not that food prices have gone up, but that they have gone up so little." The B of M points out that, on the average since 1951, food prices have actually risen less than the prices of other consumer goods and services and substantially less than the rise in incomes per capita.

GOOD FUTURE

For the future, the B of M says that there are two opposing influences at work in the market for food.

"Real incomes in the population as a whole are rising and the distribution of income is changing in such a way that there are relatively more families in the higher income brackets," the bank notes. It adds that these changes indicate a continuing decline in the percentage of total consumer expenditure devoted to food.

MORE HEAVY EATERS



On the other hand, the population is increasing and the age distribution is shifting in such a way that there will be relatively larger numbers of "heavy eaters" (teenagers and young adults) in the years ahead than was the case in the recent past.

Therefore, "total expenditures on food in Canada, which in 1963 reached $6.3 billion, will most certainly rise but the extent of this rise will depend on the strength of the various influences," the B of M review concludes.

Low Number Of Women In Election

WASHINGTON (AP) — Politicians aren't sure if it's faint heart or fading interest that's causing a decline in the number of women running for the U.S. Congress nowadays.

Only 21 candidates are on the Nov. 3 ballot in 31 states—the lowest number of women aspirants for Congress in years.

After reaching a peak of 30 women in the 8th Congress, there's been a drop in feminine representation at the Capitol, down to levels of the early 1950s.

Political experts don't think the forthcoming election will change the declining pattern much. They think the voters will be likely to elect one or two newcomers from among the 11 Democrats, eight Republicans, one Liberal and one Conservative who are candidates for Congress.

Fourteen women served in the outgoing Congress and two of them have retired.

Running for re-election are 10 House of Representatives incumbents, five from each party, and all favored to keep their seats.

The two women senators — Margaret Chase Smith, Maine Republican, and Maureen Neuberger, Oregon Democrat — are not up for re-election. Their seats are not among the 35 being contested this year.

Warner and Phyllis were thanked for their hospitality and the meeting closed.

Tulips and Tarts Fall Projects

By MARY MOORE

Christmas baking and tulip bulb planting seem to coincide in this house. As you know, my Christmas baking has to be done well in advance because testing, tasting and storing all take time before the recipes reach you in this column.

While the oven was full of fruit cakes I had in mark time so I planted my new tulip bulbs. Every time I planted a dozen I'd slip off my gloves, go in and take a peek in the oven. I'm excited about the cakes and I'm excited about the tulip varieties I'm planting together this year — White Triumphator alternating with dark maroon Queen of Nights; at the front of the house are Red Matador between Carnival (rose petals with green bands) and Golden Harvest. Planting tulip bulbs always makes it easier to accept the inevitable cold Canadian temperatures, for you know Spring will come.

I will tell you about the first fruit cake tomorrow, but today I want to give you a recipe for some superb tarts we made.

PETER PAN TARTS:

(Makes twenty-four 2½").

(Note: On Wednesday you will see here two recipes for Christmas pastaz items: a rich chocolate cake and some fine oatmeal cookies. These tarts too, would be good items on a bazaar table, but you should buy some little fluted paper cups — preferably variegated in which to protect the pastry from handling.)

Pastry: 2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons purpose flour, 1 teaspoon salt, cold water.

Cut shortening and butter into flour and salt until the size of peas. Drizzle over water, 1 tablespoon at a time, tossing with a fork, until all flour is dampened. Press into ball, roll out on floured board to ⅛" thickness. This makes a large thin sheet of pastry. Cut into 24 circles (you will have to reroll the scraps and cut them out too). I used a 3 ½" cutter. Line twenty-four tart tins with.

In each put 2 level teaspoons of apricot puree (baby food) — the kind which has been sweetened with 2 tablespoons sugar or 2 teaspoons apricot jam. Cover each with Topping: Mix together ¾ cup sifted flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup butter or margarine, ¼ cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind and ½ cup desiccated coconut. Drop this evenly on top of the apricot puree or jam. (Don't worry about it being in a lump. It spreads when baked. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 12 to 25 minutes or until barely tinged with gold. Let stand in pans for a few minutes before carefully removing to cake racks. These are reputation-builders

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

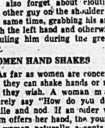
BY PATRICIA LEWIS

SHAKING HANDS

A handshake is a simple enough thing, but sometimes it can be a revealing of personality as a Rorschach test. Sometimes, it gives a wrong impression.

A limp handshake may denote a wishy-washy attitude, especially when coupled with a blank stare and a half smile that's almost a sneer. Equally non-committal is the stiff hand-shake, given while looking over a person's shoulder or waving to someone in the distance. It'd say that either showed a complete lack of interest, wouldn't you?

At the other end of the handshake is the bone-crusher, obviously given to impress and with a forceful output of personality. Chances are tiv inner man doesn't really feel as secure as his handshake. But he's going to conquer the feeling, even if he has to break your hand to do it.



Men do most of the hand-shaking in this gregarious world, so you'd think they'd be experts at it. If not, here are a few tips. Generally, a man should take off his gloves when shaking hands — unless he's outdoors. It's rude, too, to observe the niceties he would have to risk frostbite.

When introduced to a woman, he doesn't grab her hand, but waits until she offers here. The hand is grasped firmly and held a second. A slight bow usually goes with it.

When shaking hands with another man, he can be more forceful about it, forget the bow but also forget about clouting the other guy on the shoulder at the same time, grabbing his arm with the left hand and otherwise mauling him during the greeting.

WOMEN HAND SHAKES

As far as women are concerned, they can shake hands or not as they wish. A woman may merely say "How do you do" smile and nod. If an outer woman offers her hand, the younger woman naturally accepts it. She can dicitate terms when a man is concerned, but if a host should forget his signals and offer a hand, she should graciously accept it rather than make the poor fellow feel fousish.

Wife Preservers

A woman shaving brush makes a great complexion brush. Before using, cut the bristles down to about one inch from the handle.

Why has our nation been blessed more than others with prosperity, Christianity, peace, freedom, security and so many other things all given to us in trust from God that might feed the hungry souls and bodies of men. What are we doing with this trust? We must use our blessings or they are taken away. We are a chosen people, chosen to spread the gospel throughout the world."

Price of Gold Rises Again on London Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The price of gold has been rising again on the London market after a long levelling period and the U.S. government is taking steps to stave off any attempt of other nations to drain American gold reserves further.

During August when the price of gold was holding steady in London, the U.S. exchange stabilization fund added $28,000,000 to its gold holdings. And the treasury reserves (which don't include the fund's holdings) held almost unchanged.

In September the price of gold rose 3½ cents an ounce in London, where it can be bought and sold on the market. Recently the price climbed to $35.1125 U.S. an ounce. The official price at the U.S. treasury is $35 an ounce, with purchasers required to pay around eight cents more for handling charges.

The London free market is important because if the price mounts high enough to cover buying charges and shipping costs, the temptation rises for foreign central banks to cash in their American dollars for U.S. treasury gold. This happened in October, 1960, when the price of gold rose to $40 an ounce and U.S. reserves dropped sharply.

CAN BUY GOLD

Foreign central banks are permitted to buy gold from the U.S. treasury. American business concerns also can buy gold from the treasury for commercial and art purposes, but American citizens can't on their own.

On Sept. 25 the official treasury gold reserve was $15,460,841,203, compared with $15,582,057,607 the same date in 1963.

The success of the U.S. monetary authorities in protecting the treasury's official gold reserves, although the holdings of American dollars by other nations has been advancing, is due to a number of things.

One is the shift of 10 of the principal financial nations, working together to prevent runs on members' currencies or reserves. This has held drains and fluctuations to a minimum.

Another is the workings of the International Monetary Fund. And it is this source of help which the United States is tapping again.

DRAWS FUNDS

It has just arranged to draw an additional $100,000,000 from the fund in the form of currencies to other nations for dollars they hold this keeps them from presenting these dollars to the treasury for U.S. gold. And the nations use the fund currencies they get in the swap to settle their own accounts with the International monetary fund.

This time the United states is drawing currencies of Germany and The Netherlands. It is reported swapping $50,000,000 of these for dollars held by Canada which, in turn, is repaying $50,000,000 it owes the fund and doing so in currencies of Germany and The Netherlands.

It's all very complicated. But it adds up to this: Canada didn't turn in American dollars for U.S. gold and U.S. reserves are untouched.

But eyes still will be on the London market to see if the price goes still higher, and the pressure against U.S. gold mounts again.

The FBI said Kuhn, Murphy and Clark had been living in a hote in New York for several weeks.

The gems were stolen from the J. P. Morgan collection of the museum.

Police said Kuhn and Murphy were believed to have entered the building at about 8 p.m. Thursday through a door in an interior courtyard, using celluloid strips to slip the locks.

They went to the fifth floor and hid in a storage room until midnight, then lowered themselves from a window to the fourth floor window opening into the hall where the gems lay, he said.

Police said Clark "confessed to his participation in the robbery"—that he acted as a lookout for the other two during the robbery and was never in the building.

Coyle said "confidential police information" led to the suspects.

Gold Bathtub Installed in Japanese Hotel

TOKYO (Reuters)—A pure gold bathtub is being cast in Tokyo.

The 130,000,000 yen (about $360,000) tub is in the shape of an ancient ship with a dragon figurehead. It will be installed soon in the Funahara Hotel in Izu Peninsula, central Japan.

And the charge for relaxing in the worlds' most expensive bath will be 1,000 yen ($2.80) every two minutes.

"I wanted to do something no one else had thought of," said G.T. Ishikawa, owner of the fashionable 600-guest hotel.

A model of the bathtub of 22-karat gold has been prepared. Casting and manufacture of the six-foot-long two-foot-deep tub began in Tokyo in August.

Ishikawa expects it to be installed in December after being displayed in Tokyo.

"It's being installed in a large specially - built public bathroom tiled in gold with gold - colored carpets," he says.

"The room alone has cost me 50,000,000 yen (about $140,000)."

Hotel guests waiting their turn for the tub will splash about in a community bath.

"Twenty people, men and women, will be permitted in the community bath at a time," Ishikawa said. "The gold bathtub will be alongside the community pool and as one person steps out of it another will step in.

"A special window has been installed through which people not wanting to take a bath can watch those in the community pool and gold bathtub.

"I'll charge 100 yen (28 cents) a look."

Four Injured In Seperate Traffic Mishaps

PICTON (Staff) — Two people were injured in a one car accident near Picton at 2.45 a.m. Sunday. The driver of the car, Douglas Richard Thomson, age 21 of 76½ Marmora St., Trenton, received the same injuries as his passenger, Steven Ralph Clark, age 22 of the Ballalation Queen's Own Rifles, Victoria, B.C.

The vehicle was badly damaged after the driver approached the intersection of Scobarie Road and Highway 33, failed to make the curve in the road near the intersection, passed through an opening in the guard rails, crossed over a field through a ditch and continued across highway 33 through the opposite ditch and field and finally upside it's wheels in a field after striking a hydro pole. Both men sustained minor abrasions and cuts on the face and arms. They were taken to Picton Army Camp for treatment. Their car was headed for Picton at the time of the accident and damage was estimated at over $1,000.

FAILS TO MAKE CURVE

Saturday afternoon at approximately 4.15 another auto also failed to make a curve, near Waupoos. Driving the vehicle was 18-year-old Robert Creaky of R.R. 4 Picton, who was uninjured. His passenger, 20-year-old Michael Ostrander also of Waupoos received severe lacerations to his wrists and was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital for treatment. Creasy was driving in a westerly direction about 2½ miles east of Waupoos when he lost control of the auto on a bad curve. After leaving the road the car struck a telephone pole and a tree. The car was completely wrecked, Ostrander was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital for treatment. Dr. K. McQueen was in attendance.

Be Positive Your Wheels Are Balanced

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

At any time of the year, improper wheel balance is a safety hazard . . . but it becomes especially dangerous in winter when roads are slick. Even a well-balanced wheel is inclined to bounce somewhat when the car is really moving — this reaction is reduced. When the wheel is out of balance a very dangerous bouncing action can take place . . . dangerous even on a dry road surface. If the road is icy or snow-covered, you can find yourself sliding into bad trouble.

Besides failing to hold the road, a bouncing wheel sets up a vibration which affects good steering control. Less important, but nevertheless a factor in favor of wheel balance, is the economy angle. Naturally, a bouncing tire is going to wear pretty quickly, too. And, speaking of tires, remember that they don't wear evenly . . . which is one reason why a properly balanced wheel becomes unbalanced after a time That's why a periodic check — every several thousand miles, at least — and certainly every winter — is worthwhile.

From D. F.: "Doesn't a brake squeal indicate that linings are badly worn?"

No, — in fact brand new linings may squeal until high spots wear down. Incorrect adjustment or a hard type of lining are also causes.

Miss B. N. asks: "My new '64 compact has automatic transmission drive and it tends to creep forward slightly when the gear is in low, drive or high. . . unless I hold the brake. Does this require an adjustment of the transmission?"

No — this is more or less normal, although it can be minimized by slowing down idling speed.

W. P. writes: "Why should engine oil be changed so often in winter?"

Crankcase condensation is greater in winter, thus oil is more likely to be contaminated by water. Secondly, overchoking is very common during cold weather starting, and raw gas gets into the oil to further dilute it.

From N. K.: "After trying everything for weeks to cure an engine miss, it suddenly disappeared after I bought a new battery. How can you explain that?"

Easily — a low or failing battery can result in an abnormally weak spark, which will certainly cause engine miss.

Expulsion From School Need Not Be Permanent

DEAR ANN LANDERS — This time you are really off. I refer to your advice that a pregnant high school girl who marries should be asked to leave school but the expectant father should be permitted to remain and get his diploma.

What is the reasoning behind your double standard? Why do you say she must leave but, "He will be needing all the education he can get. He should not be kicked out — expulsion would hit him at a time when he can least afford it."

Don't you realize in this day and age a girl also needs all the education she can get? Why must a girl who makes a mistake remain ignorant for the rest of her life? Where is your sense of fairness?— C.E.F.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR C.E.F. — Who said anything about remaining ignorant for the rest of her life? Are you aware that students can and do drop out of school for reasons of health and return six months, or a year, later, get their diplomas and go on to college? This is what I recommend for pregnant girls.

An expectant teen-ager who would want to remain in high school throughout her pregnancy is a pretty strange duck to begin with. She is thumbing her nose at society and saying, "So what?" The high school administration which permits her to remain in school condones her behavior.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Please print my letter. You will be doing a vast service to thousands of confounded salesmen.

I work in a large and well-known furniture store. I've spent as long as two hours with a customer showing her every imaginable type of furniture. I advise, counsel, suggest, inform and in many a case I almost get down on my knees. I am tied up I can't approach other potential customers — many of whom know what they want and could give me an immediate sale.

This is what gets my goat: The woman I spent two hours with, waltzes in three days later, goes straight to another salesman and acts as if it's her first time in the store. Because she has seen every stick of furniture in the house she knows what she wants and gives a juicy sale to the guy who happened to be standing there. It's a lousy, helpless feeling. — U.H.S.

DEAR U.H.S. — There's something wrong with a salesman who will spend two hours with a potential customer and fail to impress her with the importance of looking for him if and when she returns to buy.

Do you have printed cards bearing your name? If not, get some — and tell those potential customers that if they return you would deeply appreciate it if they would ask for you.

God helps those who help themselves.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My daughter who is ten years of age came home in tears last week. The teacher announced that all students who made perfect scores on a test would be given a special treat.

I was stunned to learn that the perfect scorers were served ice cream and cake in the presence of those who did not make perfect scores.

I say this was downright cruel and should not have been permitted. What do you say? — INDIGNANT MOTHER.

• • •

DEAR INDIGNANT — Incentives are effective spurs. But the teacher should not have given the perfect scorers party treats in the presence of those who failed to make the grade. Such favoritism triggers understandable hurt and resentment.

• • •

Do you lean on cigarettes as a social crutch? You may regret it later. Send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-Age Smoking," enclosing with your request 15c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

India's Perpetual Crisis

465 Million People and Too Little Food

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI (AP) — There were sounds of trouble in the air—distant rumbles and murmurs that made small boys run about excitedly and started police horses prancing.

It was 11 a.m. March 13, 1964, and 10,000 ragged, hungry-looking villagers were driving into New Delhi on squeaking ox carts or ancient buses that coughed and steamed. Many plodded wearily along on bare feet.

With them came a new era for India.

For the ragged 10,000, demonstrating under a socialist canopy of red flags, were driven from the countryside by hunger, anger and rising prices and frustration with their government.

At that moment Prime Minister Jawaharla Nehru — with just 75 days to live—must have known that despite his lifetime of toil for "Mother India" an unavoidable part of the legacy he would leave behind would be discontent and turmoil.

Thus it has been since that sunny, pleasant day in New Delhi.

India's millions, buffeted by man and nature, are discontented and show it. Food riots and demonstrations have exploded in scores of cities. Thousands have been arrested.

Bright young men are laboring night and day to exploit that discontent, often in the name of communism.

MUST FIGHT AGITATORS

Nehru's shy, soft-spoken successor, Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri, is on the spot. He must combat the discontent —and the young agitators—or go under.

It won't be easy, for India's problems read like a catalogue of ills for underdeveloped nations.

There are too many people—465,000,000 and too little food; not enough factories to meet the consumers' needs, let alone their desires; sickness, illiteracy, social injustice, government red tape—all are present in stunning quantity.

There also are heavy external pressures, primarily from neighboring Communist China, that distract, worry and confuse. When all effort should be directed at providing bread, India must also manufacture bullets.

Many foreigners frequently discuss India's monumental problems with such phrases as: "Can you imagine, an annual population increase of 10,000,000" or "How can a country progress when it can't make enough electricity to run my air conditioner?"

Then, almost predictably, the sophisticated sum up the situation:

"There is no hope for India, really."

This grossly underestimates India and the proven resilience of its people.

India with its 5,000 year-old history is not going to disappear, swept away by one more of the food shortages or political crises that have plagued it for centuries.

The question—and this worries many Indians—is whether the nation can wrestle with its ills and, win or lose, maintain its dedication to democracy and the parliamentary form of government.

NEW ASIAN STATES

For all around India—in Pakistan, Burma, Indonesia, Viet Nam—are examples of "new" Asian nations that turned to the army or authoritarianism when civil governments failed. Conditions existing in those countries prior to the failures—economic shortcomings, political turmoil, diplomatic problems—now exist in some degree in India.

Indians like to think of their army as a professional army trained in the best British tradition of staying out of politics. But some officers, especially younger ones who did not go to British academies, are dissatisfied.

It is in the left-wing and right-wing of Indian politics, however, that a real explosion is building up.

Leftists, at the moment incapable of taking power, have assumed the role of spoilers. They want to disrupt and confuse in hopes of finding political gold in turmoil.

Rightists work more quietly, hoping to swing the government away from Nehru's non-alignment abroad and "democratic socialism" at home toward firmer ties with the West and heavier reliance on capitalism.

A battle is under way between these two groups for control of the countryside, and for positions of power within Shastri's government and the ruling Congress party.

The 59-year-old Shastri, a compromise candidate picked to avoid an all-out succession battle after Nehru's death, tries for middle-road balance in his cabinet.

INTERIM LEADERSHIP

Looking on are Morarji Desai, "Mr. Conservative" of India, and V. K. Krishna Menon, anti American leftist.

Of all his colleagues — and competitors — Shastri feels the most pressure from Desai, a stern, unyielding man who thinks India needs tough leadership and that he can provide it.

But there is widespread feeling that the Shastri-Desai operation is providing only interim leadership and that within a few years young political unknowns will take over. Shastri has been stricken twice with a heart ailment; those around him are in their 60s.

RECORDED CONFESSION

FLINT, Wales (Reuters) — The tape-recorded voice of railway repairman John Rhys Williams told an inquest today at nearby Connah's Quay how he spent the last two days of his life, which he ended by killing himself after slaying his wife. Police Inspector John Evans said: It was a unique case in that a murder confession had been recorded on tape. The inquest heard Williams' voice say: "I was compelled to do this. I did not want her to go to a mental home."

SPEAKER at final dinner of Jaycees International Amerada conference was Gil McDermott of the Centennial Commission, presented a plaque by Belleville Jaycee president Don Dafoe.

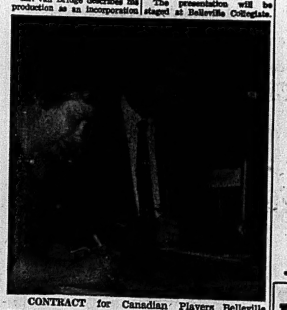
Centennial Planned Projects Outlined to Jaycees at Meet Held in City Over Weekend

Canada had unity problems from 1864 to 1867 that might be compared with the problems of today, Centennial Commission public relations officer Gil McDermott, told 110 Jaycees from Canada and the U.S. yesterday. Speaking at the Amerada conference at the Tops Motor Hotel, Mr. McDermott told the Jaycees they should reflect the policies of McDonald and Laurier, policies of unity. "Let's emphasize the things all Canadians have in common", he said, "not the differences."

During his speech, Mr. McDermott outlined the organization of the Centennial planning bodies, and some of the projects planned.

In January, he said, "a Confederation train" will carry a display to 80 centres across Canada, on C.N.R. and C.P.R. main lines. The train's schedule will bring it to Ottawa for July first, before a final stop in Montreal. Also planned are eight "Confederation caravans" of eight or ten trucks each, to carry the story on Confederation to towns not served by the Confederation train. Starting in May, the eight caravans will make 640 stops in six months. Set up for the display, they will take about 250,000 square feet of ground area and the display will take several hours to see.

PLAN TATTOO



About 3,00 students travelled in different parts of Canada this summer, in the start of a project to acquaint Canadians with their country. The Centennial Commission is cooperating, in this project, with 15 private groups sponsoring student travel.

The Canadian Armed Forces plan a tattoo program, to cover most major cities and Expo '67 during about five months. About 250 men will be used for indoor presentations of the tattoo in arenas, about 600 men will be used for outdoor presentations in stadiums and between 1,400 and 1,500 men will be used at Expo '67.

Plans are afoot for a bilingual collection of the biographies of great Canadians, and for microfilming the files of all newspapers in the country. There is talk of a canoe trip with race sections along the way, on the route of the voyageurs from Edmonton to Montreal. The trip would take about 100 days.

Jaycees can co-operate with the - Centennial Commission, Mr. McDermott said, because the success of the Centennial depends almost completely on planning at the local level. He urged all his listeners to take active part in local Centennial plans. Mr. McDermott was introduced to the group by Jim Whitz of Belleville and thanked for his speech by Belleville Jaycees president, Don Dafoe.

Canadian Players to Stage Play for Theatre Guild

The Canadian Players, now putting finishing touches to their fall tour of "Passion and Destiny" will play Belleville, December 2nd.

Contract arrangements for the Players appearance here were concluded last night with the Belleville Theatre Guild.

"Passion and Destiny" based on scenes from Shakespeare, has been written and directed by Tony van Bridge.

Mr. van Bridge describes his production as an incorporation of scenes of romance, comedy, jealousy and tragedy for the best-known Shakespeare works.

"It is really a light-hearted study of Shakespear's concern for humanity," he explains.

Included in the cast are Max Helpman, Amelia Hall and Mervyn Blake, all members of the Stratford Festival company and Mary Benning, well-known stage and television actress.

The presentation will be staged at Belleville Collegiate.

CONTRACT for Canadian Players Belleville appearance is signed by Mrs. C. I. Wilson, Belleville Theatre Guild president and Raymond Wickens, Players' manager at Guild's Loft Theatre.

Seventy

might be the reason behind the Viet Cong mortar attack which killed four Americans and two South Vietnamese, wounded 36 others and destroyed or damaged 27 B-57 bombers.

The two standard bearers make final televised bids for votes tonight.

They will spend election day in their hometowns, Johnson at Johnson City, Tex., and Goldwater at Phoenix, Ariz. Goldwater's vice - presidential running mate, Representative William E. Miller, will go to his Lockport, N.Y., home and Johnson's running mate, Senator Hubert Humphrey will be at his Waverly, Minn., home Tuesday.

Goldwater said in a TV interview Sunday he had predicted the Viet Cong airfield attack a "long, long time ago" and said that the Communists have made greater strides under Democratic administrations.

'BASE WAS WARNED'

Richard Nixon, 1960 Republican presidential candidate, said at Milwaukee the U.S. defence department was warned two days before the attack that the airfield was exposed to just such an action.

". . . But there is no evidence that anything was done," said Nixon, noting the assault the worst U.S. military disaster since the attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941.

A straw vote conducted by the New York Daily News dealt with what has been one of the key sideshows of the campaign outside the presidential contest.

This poll said Johnson is leading Goldwater three to one in the New York State, which with 43 electoral college votes is the richest plum of all, and former attorney - general Robert Kennedy is ahead seven to five in his fight to oust Republican Senator Kenneth Keating.

In a campaign generally regarded as the bitterest in modern times, Johnson rode the issues of peace and prosperity. He tabbed Goldwater as an "extremist" and as a man whose finger could not be trusted near the button of nuclear weapons control.

Goldwater concentrated on "morality in the White House," crime in the streets, big government and personal freedoms. He called the administration "soft on communism" and suggested that the solution of the civil rights problem lay in the hearts of men rather than in legal measures.

EXPECTS LARGE VOTE

The Republican nominee's hope of victory is based on his belief that there is only surface support for Johnson and that a hard core of conservatives will get out an unexpectedly large vote for him. His strategy is based on winning most of the South and on carrying such key States as Illinois, Ohio, Indiana and California.

There was general recognition among Johnson's supporters that he had a built-in advantage as an incumbent president who took over after the assassination of President Kennedy.

Linked to this was Johnson's success in getting Congress to act on a legislative program which had been stalled under Kennedy. Also cited was the president's action in the Bay of Tonkin incident and his assessment that the explosion of the Red Chinese nuclear device and Russia's ouster of Nikita Khrushchev had not changed world conditions materially.

Johnson has been predicting the Democrats will increase their strength in the Senate from the present 66 seats to 70. He has made no public predictions on the House outcome. But Democrats generally believe that if the president runs as well as forecast they will increase their present 257 - 178 margin — including vacancies over the Republicans.

Of the 33 governorships at stake, 18 now are held by Democrats. Republicans hope to make some gains in these contests.

Canadian Guards of Picton Rigorously Search Vehicles

By ALAN WALKER

NICOSIA (CP)—The critical Kyrenia road has been open a week today without incident and United Nations officials are expressing cautious optimism that normal life soon will return to troubled Cyprus.

Traffic was heavy Sunday as Greek - Cypriots from Nicosia drove 16 miles through Turkish-Cypriot territory to Kyrenia and spent a lazy day by the Mediterranean under brilliant sunshine.

Curious Turks clogged roadside cafes in the tiny towns of Geunele and Orta Keuy and ogled a passing convoy heavily guarded by UN troops, mainly Canadians.

Swarthy shepherds in colorful muffling garb curbed flocks of goats and sheep and leaned on staffs as the convoy passed. Some waved cheerfully at vehicles.

Convoys move out of Nicosia to Kyrenia and back twice daily now. Members of the 1st Battalion, Canadian Guards, Picton, Ont., rigorously search vehicles and passengers for weapons and cameras. Turkish-Cypriots object to being photographed.

Then the column of cars, trucks and motorcycles snakes across the parched central plain into the lush Kyrenia hills.

Along the route, other UN troops assist Canadians guarding the road. The column is escorted by the UN Delta Force of Danes, Finns and Canadians from Lord Strathcona's Horse (Royal Canadians), Calgary.

Escorting troops travel in Ferret armored scout cars, equipped with machine - guns. There are also recoilless anti-tank rifles mounted on jeeps.

The road had been controlled since last Christmas-by Turkish Cypriots and Turkish national soldiers. UN negotiations managed to persuade the Turks to put the road, which lies entirely in Canada's, area of responsibility on the island, into UN hands so that normal commerce could resume.

Brig. Norman Wilson-Smith, 48, of St. Catharines, UN commander of the Nicosia zone, said Sunday night he was "extremely gratified there were no incidents or events expressing bad feeling" during the first week the road has been open.

"This is due to co-operation on both sides who appear actively interested in making this thing work.

"I also want to pay tribute to the energy and hard work of the soldiers who are doing a difficult and sometimes boring job of manning the posts along the road."

Lt.-Col. William Mulherin, 42, 1st Battalion commander, said: "Indications are that no difficulty will occur on the road from here on."

Col. Mulherin, a native of Grand Falls, N.B., said both Turkish- and Greek - Cypriots are happy with the arrangement.

However, it still is impossible for people to commute regularly. The UN feels it still is unsafe for Greeks to travel the road at night.

But, as no - major incidents have occurred on the island since August, there is much hope here that a settlement may be possible to end the squabbling between the island's 500,000 Greek - Cypriots and about 100,000 Turkish-Cypriots.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1964

UNVEILED at Greek Orthodox service in the Knights of Columbus Hall, is one of two ikons presented the church by Belleville artist Georgina Maniates. Hammered copper picture of The Last Supper was also presented. Here Miss Maniates unveils ikon as Father Kostas Giuftsis blesses it.

Ikons Made by Local Woman Presented to Greek Church

Two new ikons and a hammered copper picture of The Last Supper were presented yesterday to Belleville's Greek Orthodox community. The ikons, all painted reproductions of Christ and of Mary with the Christ child, both with hammered copper symbolic insets, were hung at the entrance of the sanctuary. The picture of The Last Supper was hung inside the sanctuary.

All three works were done by the donor, self-taught Belleville artist Miss Georgina Maniates. They represent about four months' work. They were unveiled and blessed at the morning service at the K. of C. hall by Father Kostas Giuftsis and left open for inspection during the afternoon. Several Anglican church officials and MP Robert Temple dropped in during the afternoon, to inspect them.

SUIT DISMISSED

CALGARY (CP) — An $18,000 suit against the crown by a Calgary woman has been dismissed by Exchequer Court Judge Mr. Justice H. F. Gibson of Ottawa. It was learned Saturday. Jean Millar Hendry sued for damages and injuries suffered when she slipped on the floor at the RCAF station at McCall Field in February, 1962. In a judgment from Ottawa Thursday, the justice held that Mrs. Hendry had not been careful. It had not been proven that there was a deliberate "trap" on the floor in the form of food or wax.

MAYBE IT WAS GOBLINS who soaped all the windows around town Saturday night. But if it was, the goblin photographed in the act of drawing a clown on the door of the Victoria and Grey Trust Co. was disguised as a teen age girl. It's only fair, though, considering the number of teen agers disguised as goblins.

May Import Skilled Labor

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Ontario is considering importing skilled labor from Japan and Hong Kong, the province's economic development minister, Stanley Randall, said today.

On his arrival here from Vancouver, Randall said Ontario has a severe shortage of skilled labor and 15,000 workers from Japan and Hong Kong could be considered for entry into Canada.

He said he would discuss the matter with authorities in Hong Kong and Japan.

Randall, who is accompanied by Deputy Economics Minister Stewart Clarkson, leaves for China Wednesday for a short visit before proceeding to Japan.

Key Contests For Governor And Senator

WASHINGTON (CP) — The spotlight is on the presidential race in Tuesday's U.S. election but across the country there are a number of key contests for governor and senator. In many cases, they are interwined with the presidential race. In brief, they are:

Arkansas

Governor Orval Faubus seeks an unprecedented sixth straight two-year term. Winthrop Rockefeller, brother of New York's Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller is making a determined bid to become his adopted state's first Republican governor in a century.

California

Senator Pierre Salinger, a Democrat, has been campaigning feverishly for the Senate seat to which he was appointed this summer after the death of Democrat Clair Engle. Republican nominee George Murphy, once a stage and screen song-and-dance star, has been going at a more leisurely pace and is reported to have cut sharply into Salinger's early lead.

Illinois

Governor Otto Kerner, a Democrat, seeks a second term. Charles H. Percy, fresh from a successful business career, has been campaigning since July, 1963. A victory could push him into the future Republican presidential picture.

Michigan

Republican Governor George Romney is shooting for a second term on the claim that his administration helped improve the state's economy and financial picture. Representative Neil Staebler, the state's Democratic congressman at large, contends the improved economy is due to a better national economy.

New York

Vote - switching is expected to be a factor in New York's Senate election between Republican incumbent Kenneth B. Keating and former attorney-general Robert F. Kennedy, brother of the late president.

Ohio

Representative Robert Taft Senator Stephen M. Young's bid for a second term at the age of 75. Taft is the 47-year-old son of the late Senator Taft.

Oklahoma

This is the first big game for Bud Wilkinson since he quit a successful career as football coach to plunge into Republican politics. The Republican Senate nominee is battling young State Senator Fred Harris for the two remaining years of the term of the late Democratic Senator Robert S. Kerr.

Pennsylvania

Goldwater appears to be the big issue in the close contest between incumbent Republican Hugh Scott and Miss Genevieve Blatt, three - time Democratic state secretary of internal affairs.

Texas

Senator Ralph Yarborough, a Liberal Democrat, faces opposition from a hard - campaigning Republican, George Bush, as well as many Conservative Democrats who have never supported him.

Tunisian Floods Kill at Least 28 Persons

TUNIS (AP) — Rampaging rivers flooded vast areas of Tunisia Sunday killing at least 28 persons and isolating President Habib Bourguiba in the southern oasis of Gafsa.

Units of the 20,000-man Tunisian Army were thrown into the battle against surging waters. Helicopters flew mercy missions to towns and villages cut off from the rest of the country.

Bourguiba, bedridden in Gafsa on a speech-making tour of the Tunisian south, found the roads flooded by the Rivers Baich after three days of torrential rains.

The president is suffering from nasal infection and is not expected to leave Gafsa until later this week.

All Tunisian railway lines were cut and most highways linking the capital with outlying towns were flooded.

The hardest hit was the Holy Moslem city of Kairouan, southwest of Tunis, where at least 12 persons died and four were reported missing.

NEARLY A THOUSAND TEENAGERS gathered in Belleville Armouries Saturday night for a Hallowe'en Dance presented by the Belleville Recreation Commission for UNESCO. Jim Ketcheson and CJBQ's Cam Finley were disc jockeys for the evening.

UNESCO Hallowe'en Dance At Armories Huge Success

More than 850 Belleville teenagers paid admission to the annual UNESCO Hallowe'en dance at the armouries Saturday night. About 200 others entered free after 10:30 p.m., when the box office was closed off. The dance was reported the biggest in the eight years it has been held and profits for UNESCO, about $150, the most ever raised at a Hallowe'en dance in Belleville.

Prize for the best boy's costume went to Ernie Pope, 15, dressed as a Spanish lady and for the best girl to Vicki Jones, 16, dressed as a flapper of the 1920's. Best couple were Roy Mack, 18, and Judy Robb, 14, dressed as Indians. Most original costume was Lionel Rivers, 20, dressed as an old lady of the 1890's and the funniest costume was worn by Susan Baxter, 14, who wore a man's combination suit stuffed with pillows. Costume prizes and a total of 28 spot prizes were donated by downtown merchants and by radio station CJBQ.

Disc jockies for the evening were Jim Ketcheson, until 9 p.m. and Cam Finley of radio station CJBQ, after nine. The dance was organized by the Belleville Recreation Commission.

East Germans Visit West

FRANKFURT (AP) — The Communists for the first time let large numbers of East Germans visit the West today for tearful reunions with relatives. The visitors are old persons who no longer work.

An estimated 6,000 elderly East Germans entered West Germany during the first day of Operation Oldster.

The first group of pensioners arrived by train in central Germany from Leipzig shortly after midnight. During the next year as many as 3,200,000 of them are expected to enter West Germany in the largest East-West crossing since the Iron Curtain came down at the end of the Second World War.

Curtain Rolls Down at London Theatre

LONDON (Reuters) — A British institution died here Saturday night after a funeral oration claiming that foreigners are right after all. The Englishman is sexually frustrated.

London's Windmill Theatre rolled down the curtain and closed its box office for the last time after 32 years of nude shows and comedy, but not before its woman owner gave her opinion of the male audiences that come to leer.

"We are a frustrated nation and our audiences primarily through the years have been a lot of frustrated gentlemen. I prefer to call them that rather than dirty old men, which is what they were really," declared Miss Sheila Van Damm a few hours before the theatre's final show.

"Because of the times, the strip clubs and the sexy films, we have become too respectable for these frustrated old men," she explained.

NEARLY $150 raised by the Belleville Recreation Commission's UNESCO Hallowe'en Dance is handed over by Belleville Police Constable Jack Parker to CJBQ disc jockey Cam Finley at the armouries Saturday night.

Ant Poison Said Handed Out to Minors

COMMACK, N.Y. (AP) — A 47-year-old mother accused of handing out pellets of ant poison to Hallowe'en trick-or-treaters was ordered committed to hospital Sunday for psychiatric examination.

Judge Victor J. Orgera ordered the test for Mrs. Helen Pfeil, a Greenlawn, Long Island, housewife and mother of two teen-aged sons and a married daughter.

Mrs. Pfeil was arrested Saturday and charged with endangering the health of a minor. A parent recognized the pellets his youngster brought home in a candy sack.

Police are still trying to alert parents in the Greenlawn area although they say they have recovered about a dozen pellets so far, and believe that is probably all that were dispensed.

Extra officers were called on duty to make house calls Sunday. Some also were stationed outside churches to warn parents to inspect whatever their children had collected the night before.

Police said Mrs. Pfeil told them she gave out the pellets as a prank.

Dr. Bernard Newman of the Suffolk County police laboratory said they could be fatal, depending on the amount taken and the size of the child.

Pinch Hitting

By GARRY ALEXANDER

The high school football season is nearing its climax and Belleville and district clubs are battling this week to capture group championships, as well as the right to represent the district in COSSA playoffs.

Quinte Secondary School teams are in the thick of the fight for both Junior and Senior "A" honors.

The "Little Saints" meet Trenton, defending group champions, for the Bay of Quinte crown while Quinte Saints do battle against their arch rivals, the BCIVS boys, for the senior championship.

Officials were unsure of times and places on the week-end but it was expected both games would be played at the Quinte school field, Tuesday afternoon.

If such is the case, and Quinte's Robert Saccilotta was sure that it is, the junior game will start at 1.00 p.m. tomorrow with the senior squads taking over about 3.15.

The Quinte teams were undefeated for most of the season but the juniors lost their unmarred record on their second-to-last game and the seniors suffered their first defeat in the schedule wind-up.

The Q.S.S. seniors wound up with a five and one record while the juniors won four, lost one and tied one, the same as Trenton. The game between these two clubs should be a classic.

BCIVS will give the seniors a rough time too and the school lads who follow their teams all season call this one a tossup too. Quinte has a decided edge, however, since even a tie at the end of regulation time will give Saints the title. BCI must win in regulation time to force two ten-minute overtime periods.

Quinte ended the season in first, BCI in second, and these are the rules set down earlier.

RCAF Wins Charity Cup

RCAF Trenton won the Belleville Charity Cup Tournament by goal average on Sunday, after participants in the series at the RCAF Station were Parsons Cleaners of Belleville and Batawa.

The first game between Parsons Cleaners and Trenton was a wide open affair, Trenton winning the game 3-0. Both goals were scored by Alan Brown. Parsons played below their usual form, defensive errors allowing the Trenton forwards their chances to score.

Batawa downed Trenton by a single goal in the second game. The goal was scored by B. Kuszevsky.

Parsons play improved considerably in the last game as they defeated Batawa by 2 goals to 1. Fraser Ritchie playing his first regular game for Parsons scored to put the Belleville club in the lead. Within minutes Ritchie sent a neat pass to Bob Rutherford who broke through the middle to drive another shot home, to make the score 2-0.

Batawa scored through Kusevsky, and had an excellent chance to get the equalizer when they were awarded a penalty shot. However Bob Vangysen made a fine save on S. Urbegi's shot.

These clubs again meet at the Air Station next Sunday, to play for the Pop Helyer Trophy, first game to start at 1 p.m.

United Defeats Liverpool 2-0

LONDON (Reuters) — Manchester United defeated the first division champions Liverpool 2-0 Saturday, and topped Chelsea from the head of the league standings.

United, putting on an impressive display of fast, incisive soccer before a crowd of 32,000, scored once in each half. After 36 minutes a header from Scottish international Dennis Law was deflected to Daryl Herd, who scored easily, and Pat Crerand got the second goal.

Behind Manchester United (34 points) and Chelsea (33) are Nottingham Forest and Leeds United with 20 points. Both won Saturday.

Wolves' position is all the more serious as their comrades in distress, Aston Villa, beat Fulham.

In the second division, Northampton, the surprise team of the season, stayed at the top by winning 2-1 at Crystal Palace.

In the third division, the three leading teams have 27 points each. Brentford clung to the top position on goal average but it had to struggle to collect the two points against 8-shend. Brentford is joined by Bristol Rovers who just managed to best Barnsley, and Grimsby Town, easy winners at home over Hull City.

In Scotland, Rangers gave their goals total a boost when they slammed in six goals in a second half burst against Clyde. This brought their goal tally last week to 12. They netted seven against F. Mirren Tuesday.

A late goal by Jackie Mcinally gave Kilmarnock a 1-0 win over Dundee United and kept it on top of the league standings.

Its nearest challenger, Hearts, two points away, beat Morton 4-1. Celtic gained a 2-1 victory over Airdrieonians.

Blank Redmen, Blues Lose

Gaels Sew Up Top Berth

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Queen's Golden Gaels still boasting a perfect record in the Senior Intercollegiate Football League, sewed up the top berth Saturday by shutting out the second-place team, McGill Redmen.

Queen's won in Montreal 20-0, while on home ground the University of Western Ontario pushed University of Toronto Varsity Blues into the cellar with a 42-27 victory over the Blues.

McGill, going into the game with two wins, a loss and a tie, launched a powerful fourth quarter attack in an effort to overcome a 20-0 deficit, but was repulsed by the Queen's defence.

Both the dying minutes, Quarterback Cal Conner of the Gaels rifled two touchdown passes, one to Ward and the other to Bayne Norrie, that wrote off Montreal's chances.

Bayne and Conner combined on a 49-yard play in the second quarter that set up Glenn Lillies, who planned over from two yards out two plays later. Eric Hafemann kicked four of five converts.

INTERCEPTS PASS

Guard Frank Armour intercepted a McGill pass and returned it to the McGill 40-yard-line where Conner connected with John Latham for the touchdown, putting the game away at 20-0.

McGill's tries in the final quarter were stymied when they lost five yards and two downs and had to punt from their own 25. Later Bill Ferguson intercepted Glen St. John's pass in the end zone to ruin a scoring attempt.

At London, Western Mustangs got two touchdowns from Quarterback Bob Israel and another two from halfback Rob Campbell, a defensive back pressed into service for the first time this season.

Gary Cranmer and Bill Payne got the other two, and Art Froese kicked four converts. A fourth - quarter safety touch added two more points.

Halfback Ken Davison scored two Queen's touchdowns and quarterback Bruce Taylor and halfback Rilvo Ilves got the others. Taylor had three converts.

IN FIRST WIN

It was Western's first win against three losses and a tie. The Blues have one win and four losses.

Western is the only team left with a chance to challenge Queen's for the title. They must beat the Gaels next weekend while McGill, two points ahead of Western, must lose to Toronto.

Cats, Riders Roll Through Workouts

Larks Meet Ottawa

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Ottawa Rough Riders, with nothing to gain but untimely injuries, rolled to easy victories during the weekend as the regular Eastern Football Conference season drew to a close.

Second-place Ottawa crushed the cellar-dwelling Toronto Argonauts 36-0 Saturday, and first-place Hamilton dumped Montreal Alouettes 31-14 Sunday.

Neither game had any bearing on the standings, which had been decided the previous week and and about all they amounted to for Hamilton, Ottawa and Montreal was a tune-up for the EFC playoffs.

The Alouettes meet the Rough Riders at Ottawa Saturday in a sudden-death semi-final with the winner advancing to a two-game, total-point final against the Ticats.

The spotlight was on the Ticats-Alouettes game at Montreal where Hamilton's ferocious bulldozers switched their tactics and staged a full-scale air raid.

Quarterback Bernie Faloney, who shared the signal calling with understudy Frank Cosentino, hit Tommy Grant and Willie Bethea with touchdown passes.

Placekicker Don Sutherin, who won the EFC scoring championship by 26 points, converted both Hamilton touchdowns, booted a 44-yard field goal and two singles. The Ticats added two points on a safety touch.

Jerry Fields and Vernon Cole scored the Montreal touchdowns and Willie Lambert converted both.

Cosentino and Faloney picked up 200 yards in the air as they hit with seven of their 16 past attempts. The Alouettes picked up 155 yards passing.

The Ticats also outrushed the Alouettes 106 yards to 91. Montreal picked up 21 first downs to Hamilton's 13.

Hamilton got off to an unusually fast start as Faloney hit Grant with a 12-yard pass for the first touchdown at 4:45 of the first quarter.

Bethea then set up the second Ticat touchdown in the third quarter with a 53-yard pass to Bethea. Faloney replaced Cosentino and threw a five-yard flare pass to Bethea who went around to give Hamilton an 18-7 lead.

Rookie quarterback George Bork threw a four-yard pass to Fields in the second quarter for the first Alouette touchdown. Jim McKean, who replaced Bork in the final quarter, teamed with Cole for a 26-yard touchdown pass.

IN TOP FORM

The Riders were in top form against the hapless Argos as Dave Thelen spearheaded the attack with three touchdowns to take over fourth place in the scoring race.

Whit Tucker and Ron Stewart collected the other touchdowns and Moe Racine added six points on five converts and a single on a wide field goal attempt.

Thelen went over on two one-yard plunges and ran 76 yards for his other touchdown after a screen pass from quarterback Russ Jackson.

Jackson picked the Argo defence apart during the first three periods before being replaced by understudy Bob O'Billovich in the fourth quarter.

Referee Harry Ross ejected Toronto's Jim Lee and Ron Brewer and Ottawa's Billy Joe Booth from the game after a scuffle broke out along the sidelines.

The Argos, despite the shellacking, rolled to 17 first downs to Ottawa's 19 and outpassed the Riders 242 yards to 228. The Riders were the masters on the ground, outrushing the Argos 214 yards to 78.

Montreal Reaches Jr. Final

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal NDG Maple Leafs advanced to the Canadian junior football final by scoring a 34-26 come-from-behind victory over Windsor AKOs in Montreal Saturday.

NDG scored 28 points in the third quarter to overcome a halftime deficit of 20 points.

The victory will meet Edmonton Huskies in the Canadian final at Calgary Nov. 11.

NDG received the Walter Troph, emblematic of the eastern junior championship, for the third consecutive year.

The first half of the game was dominated by the previously unbeaten AKOs but NDG came back strongly, tackling hard and forcing Windsor into mistakes.

Windsor crammed all its scoring into the first half, intercepting three NDG passes and turning two into touchdowns.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A tight race is developing between four clubs in the Western Hockey League — Seattle, Portland, Vancouver and Los Angeles. Weekend action only helped make things tighter.

Only San Francisco, trailing with a mere four points compared to league co - leaders Seattle and Portland with 14 apiece, and Victoria in second-last spot with six, don't seem to be in the hunt.

Victoria could probably plead weariness — they had three games in three days. First they dropped a 6-3 decision to Vancouver Canucks, who are tied with Los Angeles Blades in second spot in the standings with 10 points.

Saturday at home Victoria Maple Leafs dropped a 4-3 squeaker to Portland at home. Sunday night they went to Portland only to drop another 5-4 in overtime.

Other weekend action saw Los Angeles beat San Francisco 3-1 Saturday and Vancouver drop a 5-3 decision to Seattle Totems Sunday night.

The Tracks

NEW YORK (CP) — Kelso, racing to a North American record for two miles, won the Jockey Club Gold Cup Saturday for the fifth straight year and became the world's leading money winning horse with total earnings of $1,803,262.

The seven - year - old gelding from Mrs. Richard D. Dupont's Bohemia Stable sped over the Aqueduct course in 3:19 1-5, to cut one-fifth of a second off the standard he set in winning the Gold Cup for the first time as a three-year-old in 1960.

He earned $70,250 to pass Round Table's $1,749,959.

Kelso hit the finish line 5½ lengths in front of three-year-old Roman Brother from Log Wolfson's Harbor View Farm. Paul Mellon's Quadrangle, also a three-year-old, was third, another six lengths back in the field of six.

PAYS $28

Kelso, strong favorite of the cheering throng of 51,122, paid $2.80, $2.30, $2.10. Roman Brother returned $2.80 and $2.10 and Quadrangle paid $2.10.

At Cherry Hill, N.J., Briardale Farm's Tormah led every step of the way to win the Jersey Belle Stakes at Garden State Park by 1¾ lengths.

The daughter of Tim Tam sped the 1 1-16 miles in 1:41 4-5.

Teeple Jill was the non-threatening runner-up all the way and at the wire was eight lengths in front of Open Fire.

Tormah carried 124 pounds and paid $2.60 and $2.20. There was no show wagering. Steeple Jill returned $2.80.

She was the first woman to achieve the feat since Queen Elizabeth in 1927. Two horses, Baldric II and Nasram II, both trained in France, put Mrs. Jackson at the head of the list with a total of £56,270 ($275,163) in prize money.

Petes Edge Generals 4-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was a weekend of firsts in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A schedule. Oshawa Generals took a first loss, Hamilton Red Wings had a first win, and Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens got its first Sunday night hockey game.

The Generals lost 4-3 to Peterborough Petes in Peterborough Saturday. The Red Wings edged Montreal Junior Canadiens 4-3 at Montreal Sunday. And in the first Sunday night game ever played at the Gardens, Toronto Marlboros held off Kitchener Rangers 6-5.

Oshawa, in third place one point behind Toronto, lost in a penalty - loaded game that saw two players ejected after receiving double major fighting penalties.

John Vanderburg, Mickey Redmond, Dan Grant, and Gord Godeau scored for the Petes, while Chris Hayes, Danny O'Shea and Bill Bannerman tallied for the Generals. Peterborough led 2-1 after the first period and 3-2 after the second.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Avelino Gomes rode Canadillis to victory for his 25th stakes victory Saturday in the $11,950 Fairbank Stakes Handicap at Greenwood Race Track.

Gomes got a boxed in fourth place moving into the home stretch of the 1¼-mile race for three-year-olds. When Langerest tired he shot Canadillis to the lead and outdueled the postime favorite Hunaldo and Fairmar for a one-length victory.

The win brought Canadillis his second stakes victory of the season. The son of Canadian Champ, owned by Viscount Hardinge of Montreal and trained by Mike Long, has won $34,697 this season. Saturday's victory, in a time of 2:02 4-5 on a slow track, was worth $6,800.

FIRST RIDE REMEMBERED

10 Writers Reveal Canada To U.S. as a Country in Search of National Purpose

By CARL MOLLINS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ten Canadian writers reveal Canada to the United States as a country in search of national purpose where events, notably in Quebec, are pressing the search to a climax.

The November edition of Atlantic Monthly, published in Boston, is a special issue on Canada with articles by Canadians on topics from politics and trade to education and art. Included is a representative work by eight contemporary Canadian poets, reproductions of Canadian painting and five political cartoons by Duncan Macpherson of the Toronto Star.

Two contributors, one French-speaking, one English-speaking, conclude that what Canada needs most is a new constitution that makes the people of Canada, rather than the Crown, the fountainhead of political power.

This would have the effect of making Canada more like a republic than a constitutional monarchy.

"We Canadians have so far failed to enter fully into our legacy, and this is our one great, overreaching problem as we centennial approaches," writes Dr. John Conway, now professor of humanities at York University in Toronto after 16 years as a master at Harvard University.

"We have failed to best our sovereignty where it properly belongs—in the Canadian people," writes in the lead article.

TION DIVIDED

Instead, we have allowed it to remain in the British Monarchy, and in doing so we have divided our country and inhibited our emotional and creative development as a people."

The only way to celebrate properly the centenary of Confederation in 1967, Dr. Conway says, is to hold a conference that would produce a truly Canadian constitution.

Dr. Conway's view is echoed in part by Marcel Faribault of Montreal, president of the Trust-General du Canada, who argues in an article on French Canada for a new constitution—as he did as a speaker at a Conservative party thinkers' conference in September at Fredericton.

The new constitution should be "less imperial" and provide for a true constitutional court, a reformed Senate and "the return to the provinces of all their fundamental functions stripped of the illusions of federal fiscal predominance," Mr. Faribault writes.

Under the present system, he says, "Canada has developed neither a philosophy of federalism nor indeed any philosophy at all, nor a philosophy which is neither harmonious and integrated nor vocally expressed; simply does not exist."

LACK IDENTITY

This lack of a philosophy, national purpose or a Canadian identity is a theme emphasized in other articles in the Atlantic symposium.

Brian Stock, a Canadian scholar at Cambridge University, bases the case for the expatriate on the argument that Canada "has forfeited the very inmost nature of our selves by denying us the spiritual resources to be anything but a patria."

Canada, writes Mr Stock, gave him health, money and education "but she failed to give me the one thing essential: a sense of identity, without which everything else is useless."

Canadian Choreographer Breaks Into London's Big Time With Smashing Hit

By CAROL KENNADY

LONDON (CP) — The future is bright with promise for Canadian choreographer Paddy Stone, who has burst into the big time with his Liverpool dance routines for the Liverpool musical, Maggie May.

The show a rollicking tale of a dockland tart, with a script by Liverpool playwright Alun Owen and music by Lionel Bart, opened to rave reviews Sept. 22.

Winnipeg - born Stone has long enjoyed a high professional reputation in London, but this is his first smash hit. Next year he fulfills a longtime ambition to do a Broadway show. American producers who flew over for the Manchester tryout of Maggie May want the show for Manhattan, and Stone relishes the prospect of devising new dance numbers for the U.S. production.

Before that, however, he will hit New York with the British musical Half a Sixpence a nostalgic version of H. G. Wells' Edwardian novel Kipps, starring British pop singer Tommy Steele. The show will open at boxoffice smash in London after more than 18 months.

FAVORS U.K. DANCERS

Later in 1965, Stone hopes to do another Broadway show, one that hasn't yet been written. It will be based on Paul Gallico novel Mrs. 'Arris Goes to Paris, the sentimental adventures of a Cockney "char" — daily help — and like Maggie May will have songs by Lionel Bart.

"I'm tremendously excited about working on Broadway," says Stone. "I love New York and I'm looking forward to working with American dancers. They're so highly trained and they have a different quality from British dancers—great zip."

Stone, a wiry, dark 39-year-old with a jaunty step and a handsome mobile face, was formerly a leading dancer with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet. He made his last appearances with them in 1956 in An American in Paris. Since then he has mostly lived and worked in London, but his family—"mother, brother, sister, grandmother, aunts, cousins"— all live in Winnipeg.

Stone was tapped for the pphum Maggie May job by composer Bart when they were both on vacation at a Spanish villa 2½ years ago.

18-HOUR DAY

After many setbacks, work finally began on the musical last January. It was a tough 18-hour-a-day grind for Stone, fellow - Canadian William Ely (Fred) Ketchef, who directs the show, and others on the production team to get Maggie into shape in time for the London opening.

Stone's previous London productions, which he both choreographed and directed, included two popular revues and two musicals which garnered not success but failed to hit the jackpot. They were The Golden

KEEPING IN STEP — Paddy Stone, a Winnipeg-born choreographer, has dazzled London audiences with his dynamic dance routines in a new British musical "Maggie May." The show opened Sept. 22 and Stone, formerly a leading dancer with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, has won the acclaim of both audiences and critics. He has been in London since 1946, but next year he hopes to take the show to Broadway. (CP Photo)

Touch in 1960, a story of bettnits on a Greek island, which the critics liked but the public didn't, and Little Mary Sunshine which made critics, in pastiche of Rose Marie type operetta, which audiences enjoyed but the critics skewered.

Maggie May, however, delights both public and press and seems destined to run several years. People are calling it a British West Side Story, but Stone points out it's much more of a play and less a jazz ballet than Leonard Bernstein's New York musical.

Not only are there large stretches of straight drama in Maggie, but the cast is a mixture of musical-comedy players and established "straight" stars like Rachel Roberts, who plays the title role, and Kenneth Haigh.

WATCHED DOCKERS

This gave Stone a particularly challenging task in designing his dance routines. Whereas musical comedy actors react spontaneously to dance directions and can improvise at short notice, straight actors concentrate more on their lines and stage directions and have to think consciously about every move.

Another choreographic problem arose from the fact Maggie May is based on Liverpool and London. He and fellow-Canadian Ketchef savored life in Liverpool's brawling docklands, mentally recording the husky, half - swallowed Liverpool speech and the swinging beat of Britain's pop - music capital.

Oddly enough, there is little of the "Mersey beat" in the score of Maggie May, except for one sequence in the famed Cavern Club where the Beatles first burst upon Britain.

STOPS SHOW

The Cavern scene is one of Stone's three show - stopping dance sequences. Another is a sultry routine with Maggie and her fellow-prostitutes weaving among the men they hope to snare for the night.

Stone works his routines out physically, by walking around to music from the show—"I'm not a mental choreographer."

He would like to have included one more big dance number in Maggie's second act, and probably will before the show goes to Broadway.

A choreographer's job is not over when the show has opened—he must keep sharpening up the routines, which tend to go "rusty" after a few weeks.

"When a show settles down and the cast settles into the show, there's a tendency to slow down, you lose that first excitement," explained Stone. "It's a physical thing. The body begins to protect itself and the dancers don't go all out all of the time.

"I'll be going in to the theatre about once every four weeks to make sure they do."

"something in the social atmosphere that has operated to blur sharp edges" in Canadian life.

COVER BUSINESS, ART

Other contributions to the special Canadian issue are articles on the Quebec revolution by Gerard Pelletier, editor of Montreal's La Presse; on Canadian business by Robert M. Fowler, Montreal lawyer and businessman; on Canadian diplomacy by John W. Holmes, president of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs; on art by Alan Jarvis, former director of the National Gallery in Ottawa; on nature by conservationist Roderick Haig-Brown; on education by Robertson Davies, master of Massey College at the University of Toronto.

Edward Weeks, editor of the Atlantic, says several factors prompted the National Geographic special issue, among them unusual fishing trips to Canada for the last 23 years, frequent meetings with Canadian writers and the ferment in Quebec.

The clinching argument, he says, was a comment by Livingston T. Merchant, former U.S. ambassador to Canada, that "Canada is more important to the United States than any other single country."

Trade Rumors Persist CBS Will Cut Expensive Shows

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Trade rumors persist that CBS is on the verge of drastic activity reducing to some apparently dramatic shows which are having audience troubles. Among the two of them are The Reporter and Mr. Broadway—continued to limp along on silly cliches.

Friday night's Reporter was a routine retread about exposing a fake charity — the one that has been done by just about every series in recent seasons. Mr. Broadway on Saturday told a predictable tale about the glamorous, temperamental actress who knows things when she's drunk. Even Tammy Grimes couldn't do much for the script.

Ed Sullivan, suffering from a bad case of laryngitis, lectured the teen-age audience as usual Sunday night for howling at the rock 'n' roll Dave Clark Five. He gave a young impressionist, Marilyn Michaels, the toughest backgrounding on the show, to follow the British singers, but she soon had the noisy audience settled down as she did successively acrobat imitations of Ethel Merman, Connie Francis, Judy Garland and Barbara Streisand.

Politics - weary viewers may have been surprised at the way NBC's The Rogues wickedly satirized a bunch of rica Texans Sunday. The show however was was not up to its usual excellent standard.

Recommended tonight: The Andy Williams Show, NBC, 9-10 EST with Fred MacMurray as guest; Slattery's People, CBS, 10-11 — Richard Crenna as a young legislator confronted with an adoption problem.

Mother Worried Son Will Be a Confirmed Bachelor

DEAR DORIS — My son is 32. He is rather reserved, but good in his profession (lawyer) and thoroughly adult in his attitudes to work and friends.

He has only had one girl, and has gone back to her now, after not seeing her for some time. I asked about his future and he said he thought he would know when he fell in love. So far he hadn't felt any electric shocks.

Not many mothers want to push a son out of the nest, Doris. But I want the best for him, and I'm afraid he is getting to be a confirmed bachelor. I think the girl loves him and must be deeply hurt by his unromantic attitude. — HOMELOVER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR HOMELOVER — It doesn't always strike like a thousand volts. Lifetime love can grow out of much companionship. Tell him that, then leave him alone. Let your happy home plead its own case with him.

• • •

Confidential to HE'S TOO FRESH — Then tell him so. But if your skirts are tight, your lips scarlet, your eyes come-hither-ish, you are giving him wrong ideas to start with. Act the lady and you are likely to be treated like one.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — My two children love to go to stay with their grandmother several times a year. She has plenty of time to spend with them and makes a great fuss over them. Consequently they enjoy their stay very much.

She is a person who thinks table manners and good grammar are unimportant. My children come home using phrases they never did before. They say "I seen," "It don't matter," "The toy is broke," "I'm full up," etc. etc., as well as eating with their elbows on the table. When I tell them it is wrong, they say Nana does it. It takes several weeks each time to get them back to normal. It is so hard on me to get upset and irritable.

Should I not let them visit her so often, or am I taking this all too seriously? — BEWILDERED.

• • •

DEAR BEWILDERED — Don't undermine Nana. She is far too precious to your little ones. As they move up in school good grammar will become their habit. And the table manners that will stick will be the ones they see and hear about at home.

Write in again for my book list on manners for children, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope. When you read such books together it'll be so much fun that they'll be teaching Nana next time.

• • •

Confidential to IN NEED OF HELP—The father is required by law to help financially with hospital expenses and support of the baby. Your resource for counselling is your local child care agency.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I married into a family who can speak two languages equally well. I have in-laws (who obviously know I can only speak and understand English) who talk this other language to my husband and themselves leaving me totally in the dark.

I feel awfully bad about the whole situation. It has been explained to them more than once by other relatives who cannot speak their language either, that we don't — BECOMING WORSE AND MORE UNBEARABLE.

DEAR BECOMING — Learn to speak them. Launch into the mother tongue is comforting and close to friendly relatives — though not too considerate of the outsider! The sooner you take the plunge — even to the extent of mastering everyday phrases in the new language — the sooner you'll reach a new high in in-law communications. We're worth the effort.

• • •

DEAR DORIS — I went around with a girl for about three months. In that time, I fell in love with her. She told me that she loved me too.

Then, all of a sudden, I am a misfit to her. I seemed to "bug" her to no end. I haven't phoned her for about a week and a half. Each time I see her I just wave and my heart skips about four beats. Not phoning her or talking to her face to face is driving me up the wall.

I was talking to her for a couple of minutes the other day and I felt I was embarrassing her. She looked at me as if to say, "Why doesn't that dense pill go play in the traffic and leave me alone?" I love her very much so please tell me, should I try to forget her?

I don't think she rejects me because of my appearance. She is in grade nine and I am in grade 11. — GERRY.

• • •

DEAR GERRY — If you didn't clip and save my paragraphs on "What is Love?" write in for them, enclosing 6 cents and a stamped envelope. And forget her.

• • •

DEAR DORIS —

(1) How can we get the senior boys in school to act their age? We girls now have to resort to the older men (aged 23-27) in order to enjoy life. That's our first problem. (And don't say, "Wait a while." We're sick of waiting. Sick, sick, sick.)

(2) Do you think there's anything wrong with a girl smoking when she reaches grade 12? Our parents are dead set against it.

(3) Does Ringo have false teeth? — SEVEN MIXED-UP GIRLS.

• • •

DEAR SEVEN —

(1) Help them with encouragement and good manners, and don't nag them along fine. Show you are acting your age, show you are growing up, by keeping men at 23 to 27 at a distance. Otherwise, your sickness may take a turn for the worse.

(2) The normal girl in grade 12 is still growing. You'll have to wait awhile for permission here, too.

(3) I doubt it; although, like some other performers, he may have his front teeth capped.

Astrological Forecasts

By SYDNEY OMARR
For Nov. 3

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Questions concerning money, payments arise. You may be disappointed in outlook of friend. Be patient. Don't force issues. You have much in your favor. Bring this to attention of superiors.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Some associates will come to you with problems. Show you are willing to listen. Be sympathetic. But help only those willing to aid themselves. Refuse to be a "fall guy." Be skeptical, alert.

Gemini (May 21 to June 20): Key is patience, tact, sense of humor. There are pressures — but not as serious as they seem on surface. Realize opposition is mostly "bluster." Avoid unnecessary journey. Exercise caution.

Cancer (June 21 to July 22): One who formerly "taught" you now requires aid. Give with open mind — and heart. Good lunar aspect stresses romance, affection. Could be a very vital day. Urgent: keep feet on ground!

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 22): One who made promises is to be called to task. Could involve family circle. You could be called upon to mediate dispute. Be impartial, diplomatic. Obtain valuable hint from today's Taurus message.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22): Be willing to "tear down" in order to rebuild. Don't commit yourself to old-fashioned methods. Key is versatility, humor. Welcome change of routine. Accept challenge . . . recognize opportunity.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Question of finances, budget should be settled. Stop talking and do something about it! Mate or business partner has valid suggestion . . . listen. Be ready for surprise communication.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Cycle moves up. Circumstances a.w work in your favor. Your "hunch" can pay off. Come out of emotional shell. See people, do things. Many will be impressed by your personality, ideas.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Plan for obtaining "breathing spell." Be sensible. No time to strive for perfection. Do your best . . . then relax. There are pleasant surprises due. Know this — and be optimistic.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Be considerate, tactful. Combine friendship with an awareness of responsibilities. Refuse to throw caution aside. Applies especially to purchases, investments . . . especially tonight.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): Finish projects. Leave no loose ends. Concentrate on being thorough. Important individual may "object" to your efforts. Be aware of responsibilities. Obtain valuable hint from Capricorn message.

Pisces (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Favorable lunar aspect highlights "journeys of the mind." Your imagination is creatively stirred. Put thoughts on paper. Outline programs, campaigns. Display confidence in future.

If today is your birthday . . . you have much wit, brilliant sense of humor . . . but you do not always live up to potential. General Tendencies: Cycle high for Scorpio, Sagittarius, Capricorn. Special word to Leo: One who urges you to take backward step does not have your best interests at heart.

Oscar Boisjoly, Courtroom Reporter, in Spare Time Is Always on Go in Big Car

By GERARD McNEIL

QUEBEC (CP) — Oscar Boisjoly shatters the image of the courtroom reporter as an unobtrusive figure.

His spectacles are adjusted, by his choice, so that he can bunch a few inches from his notebook as he takes up to 275 words of testimony a minute.

Usually, all that can be seen of him is his brown hair and the horn rims of his spectacles, but when a several persons begin talking at once he has a gesture that silences even judges.

He springs erect, hands above his head, his long black pen looking as if it might spit lightning at the first person to utter a sound.

During the Brossard royal commission inquiry into the Colfin murder case, Mr. Boisjoly's magic gesture sometimes stopped savage fusillades between witnesses and lawyers.

That was the effect he had on the commission, and it made him a memorable figure in the panorama of striking personalities in the case.

The effect the acrid inquiry had on him was that for the first time in his 20-year career he had a tape recorder going to back up his record of the testimony.

Careers hinge on this conflicting record and the 45-year-old reporter thought his accuracy might be questioned at some point.

It wasn't.

TOPS IN FIELD

"We lived on our reputation for accuracy," he says.

Errors are—sometimes made, particularly since court reporters must copy down most of accents and inflections and the occasionally rambling testimony of people who are nervous or evasive.

Mr. Boisjoly was the reporter who thought the jury foreman said "mille," the French word for thousand, instead of "nil" in announcing damage in a civil suit. The jury had to be called back to hear it and awarded nothing instead of $1,000.

Despite any fears free-lancer Boisjoly may have, his reputation for accuracy is unchallenged. Recognized as a top man in his field, he usually wins major assignments such as the Brossard inquiry, the royal commission on St. Lawrence pilotage and important murder cases.

To ease tension while working and to avoid the professional writer's cramp, he constantly tells himself "Don't squeeze the pen."

But he never relaxes, if for no other reason than that he finds himself doing three things at once:

"I listen to what is being said, I write what has been said, and I read what I have written."

If one stenogram—the code of curls, dots, dashes and other marks that make up shorthand — isn't clear, a mental note is made of it and it is corrected at the first pause.

PAYS WELL

Court reporting appears to be one of those jobs with short hours and shorter pay, but actually it is a gruelling profession that, in Oscar Boisjoly's case at least, yields handsome rewards.

In the Brossard inquiry he not only took as much as seven hours of testimony daily but then read it back into a tape recorder and saw that typists got the record into a bound volume before the commission sat the next day.

He took most of the 18,000 pages of testimony, at a fee of about $1.50 a page, the typists getting 25 cents a page. The more than 60 volumes fill the trunk of an auto.

He worked 20 hours or days that produced up to 40 pages of testimony.

But besides the $1.50 a page he also owns rights to the sale of the transcript. Copies go for 30 cents a page to lawyers, witnesses and others interested in the case.

The income enables him to live like a bon vivant. When the commission adjourned July 3, he and wife Rachel climbed into their $6,500 Jaguar and took a two-month vacation that ranged from the trout waters of Cape Breton to the salmon streams of the Gaspe.

PREFERS TAPE-BEEP

He turned the Jaguar over during a race in Gaspe — he takes along his own mechanic—but plans to replace it with an Alfa-Romeo, an expensive Italian sports car.

A convivial figure, he smokes imported Dutch cigars, American cigarettes, wines at dinner and narrates rib-tickling courtroom tales.

On first - name terms with most judges and lawyers in eastern Quebec, he was called into the Coffin case 11 years ago when prospector Wilbert Coffin was found critically responsible by a coroner's jury in Gaspe for the deaths of three Pennsylvania hunters.

He later recorded testimony at Coffin's preliminary inquiry, at his 1954 trial in Perce and at the accompanying perjury trial of Jean-Guy Hamel, a defence figure.

During the Guay murder trial—which resulted in three executions for the placing of a bomb on an airliner—Mr. Boisjoly not only took testimony in French but translated it into English for the Toronto Star which ran it verbatim the next day.

Will the tape recorder ever replace the live reporter? Oscar Boisjoly doesn't think so, especially after listening to the tapes he took during the inquiry.

"When there was no coughing or chair-scraping, and only one person talked at a time, it did an excellent job."

Otherwise, he says, it produced a garble of voices and sounds.

Vandusen and Mrs. Cunningham gave a well prepared devotional service based on Thanksgiving. The U.C.W. rally will take place in Wellington United Church on November 2 at which time Rev. Swan and Mrs. Swan will be the guest speakers. Mrs. L. Wight gave an interesting talk on India and was thanked by Mrs. Snider. Thank-you notes were read from Mr. and Mrs. L. McCartney and Mrs. L. Chantell.

THINGS THEY NEVER TELL YOU — Recruiting advertisements for the Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., generally show clean-cut young men in immaculate scarlet tunics. Here some first-year cadets find out about one thing the ads didn't mention—the annual obstacle race which includes a climb up an inclined ramp liberally coated with heavy black grease. These future officers of Canada's armed forces show a lot of determination as they tackle the slippery slope. They may have figured out that the first man through the course will probably be the first man into the showers. (CP Photo)

"We lived on our reputation for accuracy," he says.

Errors are—sometimes made, particularly since court reporters must copy down most of accents and inflections and the occasionally rambling testimony of people who are nervous or evasive.

Mr. Boisjoly was the reporter who thought the jury foreman said "mille," the French word for thousand, instead of "nil" in announcing damage in a civil suit. The jury had to be called back to hear it and awarded nothing instead of $1,000.

Despite any fears free-lancer Boisjoly may have, his reputation for accuracy is unchallenged. Recognized as a top man in his field, he usually wins major assignments such as the Brossard inquiry, the royal commission on St. Lawrence pilotage and important murder cases.

To ease tension while working and to avoid the professional writer's cramp, he constantly tells himself "Don't squeeze the pen."

But he never relaxes, if for no other reason than that he finds himself doing three things at once:

"I listen to what is being said, I write what has been said, and I read what I have written."

MOVEMENTS OF GEESE

Ever since the early part of the 19th century, and for many years before that, the movements of geese have paid a semi-annual visit to the St. Lawrence River below Quebec. Champlain reported that he saw "white birds with black wing tips". Great snow geese spend the winters on the Atlantic coast from New Jersey down through the Carolinas and breed far north, but spring and fall they break the long migration trip by stopping over for about two months at Cap Tourmente to rest and fed on sedge grass that grows on the mud flats.

For years nature lovers wondered exactly where great snow geese nested, but it was not until the spring of 1937 that Louis Lemieux of the Northern Affairs Department found the spot. Geese are so regular in their movements that he was able to calculate just about when they would leave Cap Tourmente. Starting shortly before that date he went first to Pond Inlet and then travelled by dogsled with two Eskimos to Bylot Island at the northwestern end of Baffin Bay. He was in time to welcome a flock of some 100,000 birds. This seemed to be the main nesting ground of great snow geese, but he discovered that there were more on Ellesmere island and also on the west coast of Greenland.

Mr. Lemieux found that the big eggs hatch in July and that there are usually three in a clutch. At moulting time when the geese were grounded he was able to catch and band 800.

FALL FLIGHT

As summer wanes the geese begin their fall flight. At first non-breeding adults arrive at Cap Tourmente, then in flocks of hundreds the rest fly noisily in, usually in V formation. Immatures are recognized by their grey plumage. Unlike the deep honking of Canada geese, snow geese have a sort of bark, higher pitched than the voices of their cousins.

From all accounts, flocks were extremely large a hundred or more years ago, but with no hunting restrictions they dwindled until by 1908 there were about 3,000 birds. Now the Game Department sets a bag limit to prevent snow geese from disappearing like the passenger pigeon. Provincial game wardens and the R.C.M.P. see that laws are enforced.

It is very difficult to count the number in the Cap Tourmente vicinity, so that estimates vary considerably, but it is safe to say that there are now considerably more than 100,000 in this the only flock of greater snow geese in existence. They will remain there until the end of November probably, and some will possibly stay into December.

BELL'S BUSINESS INTERPHONE

Executive Command Post describes it best. Here's how it puts you in charge:
The internal part gives you direct access to your key people (up to 17 of them). One push of a button—you're there. (They don't have to do anything—when they answer you, their voice does the switching!)
They can reach you equally fast. If you don't want to be disturbed, a little lever gives you privacy.
Mike and speaker, of course, are beautifully sensitive. You can move about your office, or have a group there to talk and listen—everybody will get every word.
Then the same set is hooked up to your outside lines—up to 11 if you need them. You can make your own calls, you can add others in on any call, you can hold an outside call while you use the intercom—in fact, as you can see, there isn't much by way of voice communication inside or outside your office that the Business Interphone won't do.
Our reps will be glad to tell you all about it. For an appointment, just call your local Bell Office!
AND THERE'S MORE WHERE THIS COMES FROM: Remember—Business Interphone is just one of the complete communications services for business from Bell.

Liberals Disrupt Canadian Unity Says Diefenbaker

PC Leader Is Speaker At Ont. Annual Meet

TORONTO (CP)—Opposition Leader Diefenbaker rapped the Pearson government Monday night for what he termed its disruption of Canada's unity. And he stayed relatively clear of the controversial flag issue.

Mr. Diefenbaker told delegates to the annual meeting of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association that the Pearson government has given rise to a "crisis of uncertainty about the fate of the nation than has existed at any time since Confederation.

He made no comment on his meeting in Ottawa earlier Monday with other party leaders to discuss House procedure on a proposed flag. But he said he would not be thwarted in his crusade against the maple leaf design by accusations from the Pearson government that he was injuring Canadian unity.

AWARE OF CRITICISM

Mr. Diefenbaker said he was not unaware of criticism made of him.

"But there is one thing that has not been criticized of me—that I would do anything that would hurt my country."

He said the greatest challenge his party ever had is to "heal the wounds inflicted by a government that has been so short in office."

He further accused the federal government of attempting to be all things to all people—a government that could not say no.

A series of associate states with their own tariff laws, immigration laws and monetary policies could emerge in Canada, Mr. Diefenbaker said. He looked toward Premier Robarts of Ontario, Premier Lesage, and said he had no criticism of the provinces.

WILL CALL CONFERENCE

He said a Conservative government would call a national conference on the constitution to examine all areas of disagreement and to find a consensus on how constitutional changes might be made in Canadian Confederation.

Earlier in the day, Dr Phyllis Hanley of Toronto told the policy research council of the Ontario Young Progressive Conservatives that poorly planned and underequipped hospitals are the fault of architects and doctors.

She said some new wards at the Toronto General Hospital have so few tubs and showers that the nursing staff has to use public washrooms and treatments. There was also difficulty in linking patients to oxygen and suction equipment as a result of poorly designed cupboards and washrooms.

Patrick Conaghan, secretary of the PC association, said that the doctors main ambition was to get a big, beautiful office, "not to serve humanity, and he doesn't even enter into it now."

PCs Keep Floor In Debate

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — With no scarcity of subjects, the Conservatives would like the interim supply debate through its seventh day Monday, and with the exception of one speaker, it was a one-party effort.

The only help they got in the extended debate came from Creditiste Leader Real Caouette, and neither the tone nor the topic of his speech was designed to be helpful to the official opposition.

With a quick change of pace he took the heat off the government and attacked the Conservatives for taking "malicious pleasure" in obstructing parliamentary process.

But apart from this, the Conservatives had the day to themselves, centering their criticism largely around the alleged erosion of federal authority, but dredging in such diversified subjects as broadcasting and the ownership of islands in the far north.

ENTERS 8TH DAY

Today, the debate goes into its eighth day as the government seeks about $749,000,000 spending money for November and December. If the debate is carried on for another week or so, the government will run out of funds, and an election would normally follow.

Former Conservative agriculture minister Alvin Hamilton said Monday, "why should we vote supply? Why should we give them two months' money?"

He called members of the government "fathers of deconfederation." The cabinet was thoroughly confused, he said.

Terry Nugent (PC — Edmonton Strathcona) called on the Liberals to resign "so that competent individuals can take over the government."

Without mentioning an election, he said the government should vacate office because there had been a "disgraceful" erosion of federal powers since the Liberals took over.

BASIS OF CRITICISM

At the base of most of the Conservative criticism is the formula under which the constitution would be brought under Parliament's jurisdiction so future amendment could be made entirely in Canada.

Final approval for changes in the British North America Act now rests with the United Kingdom Parliament. Conservative spokesmen say the formula approved last month at a federal-provincial conference, gives too much power to the provinces.

But Paul Martineau (PC — Pontiac - Temiscaming) said it is a good thing to decentralize some of the power He described the constitution as a

Queen Opens House

LONDON (CP) — Britain's new Parliament was advised today that Prime Minister Wilson's Labor government will renationalize the country's steel industry, restore rent controls and open the way for the abolition of capital punishment.

Queen Elizabeth formally opened the Parliament elected Oct. 15 by reading the first speech from the throne written for her by Wilson and his cabinet. The speech outlined the government's legislative program.

In international affairs, the speech promised the government's support of the United Nations and the North Atlantic alliance and other collective defense organizations in which Britain belongs. It said the government would continue to encourage further progress in East-West relations and "to encourage further progress toward disarmament."

The Queen delivered the speech from the throne in the House of Lords after driving from London in a coach accompanied by a glittering cavalry escort.

Members of the House of Commons, summoned with the customary ritual, stood around the edges of the chamber as the Queen read the speech.

A key passage of the speech: "My government will initiate early action to re-establish the necessary public ownership of the iron and steel industry."

This policy is expected to touch off a major parliamentary battle.

Wilson's government has only a five-seat majority in Commons. Sir Alec Douglas-Home's Conservatives and the small Liberal party oppose nationalization of the steel industry.

Clement Attlee's Labor government took the steel industry under state control in 1951 after nationalizing the coal, gas and electricity industries, the railways, the airlines and the Bank of England.

Other nationalization measure. of the Attlee regime continue in force, but the steel industry went back into private hands after the Conservative party won the 1951 election.

The speech from the Throne said the Wilson government will "restore control of rents" and added: "They will establish as rapidly as possible a Crown land commission with wide powers to acquire land from the community."

TO END SPECULATION

This measure, Labor ministers have said, is designed to check land speculation and to help clear the way for a parliamentary flight is expected on that date.

"Facilities will be provided for a free decision by Parliament on the issue of capital punishment," the Queen said.

This means every Labor and Conservative and Liberal as well—will be allowed to vote according to their personal beliefs rather than the dictates of party policy. Abolition of capital punishment is expected to result.

I Should Have Known Magic Could Not Last, Writes Jackie

NEW YORK (AP) — "I should have known," writes Mrs. Jacqueline F. Kennedy of her late husband, "that it was asking too much to dream that I might have grown old with him and seen our children grow up together."

In a tender reflection, written for Look magazine to mark the first anniversary Nov. 22 of President Kennedy's assassination, she says:

"It is nearly a year since he has been gone. . .

"Now I think that I should have known that he was magic all along. I did know it —but I should have guessed it could not last. I should have known that it was asking too much to dream that I might have grown old with him and seen our children grow up together.

"So now he is a legend when he preferred to be a man. I must believe that he does not share our suffering now. I think for him—at least he will never know whatever sadness might have lain ahead.

"He knew such a share of it in his life that it always made me happy whenever you saw him enjoying himself. But now he will never know more — not age, nor stagnation, nor despair, nor crippling illness, nor loss of any more people he loved. His high noon kept all the freshness of the morning—and he died then, never knowing disillusionment."

UN Peace-Keeping So Efficient It Delays Permanent Solutions

OTTAWA (CP)—Have United Nations peace - keeping operations been too successful?

Some delegates to the 23-nation conference here on experience-sharing in UN missions are suggesting that this is the case and they cite Cyprus as an example.

The UN force recently took over patrol of the 16-mile highway between Nicosia, the Cypriot capital, and Kyrenia on the northern coast of the island. This road has been one of the few routes open to travel between Greek and Turkish Cypriots since the Cyprus crisis arose.

The question now is: Will the UN have to guard this road for years to keep Greek and Turkish Cypriots apart? If the UN doesn't continue to do this job, will it?

The point some delegates are making is that supposedly temporary UN military solutions militate against permanent political solutions.

They say that as long as the UN is prepared to police the Kyrenia road the Cypriots will feel less urgency about solving their political problems—as illustrated by the impasse over the road.

These same delegates say that the UN's success in preventing war between Israel and its Arab neighbors since 1956 militates against a political solution in this area. Canada contributes a 1,000-man contingent to the 5,000-man UN force on the Israeli-Egyptian border.

On the other hand, other sources at the conference say that no matter what the cost

Common Market Locked in Another Dramatic Struggle

By DOUG MARSHALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Once again the European Economic Community has produced an end-of-the-year cliffhanger calculated to keep economists perched on the edges of their seats.

President Charles de Gaulle has threatened to take France out of the Common Market unless her five partners agree on a common price for grain by New Year's Eve.

This is a virtual rerun of last years suspenseful drama when the Common Market negotiators in Brussels kept the suspense waiting until Christmas Eve before resolving the deadlock on beef, rice and dairy products.

Although the plot is familiar western French ultimatums involving cries of distrust from Germany — this year's crisis has added dimensions

Not only is a common grain price crucial to the community's whole agricultural policy it is also an essential preliminary to the successful outcome of the Kennedy round of world tariff negotiations in Geneva.

On top of this both the Brussels and Geneva talks are unfolding against a background of uncertainty and reappraisal of Europe.

Britain's relationship with Europe and Europe's relationship with the United States.

The grain problem is basically the same that has dogged negotiators throughout attempts to establish a common price structure for farm goods — the gap between high German agricultural prices and low French ones.

France, with about one-half the total agricultural land of the Common Market countries, has efficient farming programs that produce more food than the French can consume.

Germany, despite massive government subsidies, has a less efficient agricultural industry. The country is heavily dependent on imported goods.

The German government claims any lowering of prices to a level somewhere between the French low and the German high would spell ruin for many German farmers, despite initial financial compensation.

On a larger scale it might mean Germany would stop buying most of her grain from other regions — mainly North America and France would become the breadbasket of Europe.

Campaign Furore Still Echoing In Their Ears

Opinion Polls All Point To Win for Johnson

By ARCH MacKENZIE

American voters, an estimated 71,000,000 strong, make their choice today with election campaign thunder still echoing in their ears.

The public opinion polls all pointed at President Johnson as a landslide winner over Republican Barry Goldwater. But the Arizona senator drew first blood.

Both men made their last appeals in home territory Monday night—Goldwater asking for an "overwhelming repudiation of the small minority which has twisted the Republican party."

Goldwater, with a final stop at little Fredonia in the butte country of Arizona, again denounced big government as a menace and said "my whole campaign . . . has been directed to warning Americans of the dangers that lie in this philosophy."

The little mountain hamlet of Dixville, N.H., all of whose eight voters are Republicans, voted unanimously for Goldwater a minute after polls opened at midnight Monday night—that is. It did for Republican presidential candidate Richard Nixon in 1960.

BARRY CONFIDENT

Goldwater, the Western democrat, a self-made businessman who became the voice of the American right, went down to the wire confident of the general belief that he was a loser.

The answer was due at polling booths opening as early as a minute after midnight Monday night in some rural New England states and remaining open as late as 2 a.m. Wednesday in western Alaska.

Generally fair, was the weather forecast, strengthening predictions of a record vote.

Some publications pointed toward a popular vote higher than the 64 per cent captured by Democrat Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936 when he routed Alf Landon. The Republicans then got only eight states and 166 electoral votes—Vermont and Maine.

The campaign officially began officially in early September went down as one of the most vitriolic in U.S. and thus also stood eyeball to eyeball in a game of nuclear "chicken" while the world trembled, was two years away.

REBUFF CAME LATER

Also down the road were the reveal with U.S. strategy for European nuclear and political unity, chiefly by France's President de Gaulle.

There are many more echoes of 1956 in this '64 election campaign.

Then, the Democrats under Adlai Stevenson questioned the desirability of voting to elect Republican vice - presidential candidate Nixon as backup man in the White House while Eisenhower having suffered a heart attack.

Today, Republican Barry Goldwater questions having Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota a "heartbeat" from the presidency while Lyndon Baines Johnson having suffered a heart attack nine years ago.

Hellyer Disbands 58 Major Militia Units

OTTAWA (CP) — The Irish Regiment of Toronto is one of 58 major militia units to be placed on the inactive list in effect, disbanded-in the reorganization of the reserve army announced today by Defence Minister Hellyer.

Mr. Hellyer ordered this action despite the recommendation of the commission which investigated the militia that the Irish Regiment be retained.

The other four infantry regiments in Toronto are retained. The major infantry unit in Montreal to be disbanded is the Victoria Rifles o. Canada.

Le Regiment de Maisonneuve is retained despite the commission recommendation that it be disbanded.

The Royal Rifles and Les Voltigeurs de Quebec at Quebec City will be amalgamated.

In the Atlantic provinces, traditionally strong supporters of the militia, no major infantry units are being put on the inactive list.

However, some companies of regiments will be relocated and the Princess Louise Fusiliers will amalgamate with the Halifax Rifles, an armored unit, to form an Infantry Battalion in Halifax.

All militia group headquarters and manning depots are eliminated.

The Highland Light Infantry of Canada at Galt, and the Scots Fusiliers of Canada at Kitchener will be amalgamated. The new battalion will be located at Galt with companies at Kitchener.

In cases of amalgamations, no names for the new units have been given.

The 1st and 2nd Battalions of the Essex and Kent Scottish will amalgamate and be located at Windsor and Chatham. Battalion headquarters will be located at Windsor.

There will be many shifts among companies of various regiments throughout Ontario.

For instance, the Algonquin Regiment of Sault Ste. Marie and Agawa Falls will be relocated at St. Catharines, as another example.

Many medium artillery batteries throughout the country will be disbanded. Signals, service, ordnance, medical and engineer units will be merged into service battalions.

Shuffle Hasty Pees

The Madoc, Picton, Port Hope and Trenton companies of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, one of Canada's most famous Second World War infantry units, will all be located at Belleville, the regiment's headquarters.

Leaders Talk For 40 Minutes

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Will they collide or won't they?

This remained the big question on Parliament Hill Monday as Prime Minister Pearson met the other party leaders. After 40 minutes, the talks broke up to permit the leaders to find out what their followers figure Parliament should be doing in the coming weeks. The leaders meet again Friday.

The central issue was the flag design—rejected by Opposition Leader Diefenbaker but accepted by some of his followers — which a Commons committee recommended last week.

The question mark was whether Mr. Pearson, who has forecast there will be a new flag by Christmas, planned to push for a decision on the flag by then or give priority to such major legislative items as the Canada Pension Plan, redistribution, new transportation legislation, a proposed labor code and the like.

The governing factor in a confused political situation was the government's need of money by about Nov. 10 to pay November and December bills. Refusal to approve the request would mean an election.

The Progressive Conservatives, apparently with one eye on the flag proposal, have been debating this request for interim supply for seven days with some help from other parties.

Spokesmen for two of the smaller parties — New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas and

Two Elderly Scottish Sisters Carry Happy Memories Home

Vivid memories of limitless miles of golden wheat on the Prairies and towering snow capped mountains in the Canadian Rockies will be carried home by elderly Scottish sisters visiting in the city this week.

The two women, Mrs. Agnes Fowler, 81, and Miss Margaret Watt Campbell, of Ayr, Scotland, have been in Canada since June visiting the former's doctor son in Grande Prairie, in northern Alberta, and will fly home to Scotland on Thursday.

Today they will motor to Galt with their Belleville hosts, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bradbury, 170 William St., and on Wednesday will take in the sights at Niagara Falls.

Sunday there was a gathering of the clan at the home of Herb and Tena Watt at Foxboro, where roughly 60 Canadian relatives of the Scottish family met for a reunion.

Family connections were present from Bancroft, Coe Hill, Peterborough, Lakefield, Tweed, Brockville, Toronto, Picton, Wellington and Belleville.

The two Scottish sisters are second cousins of the Watt and Bradbury families and are close family connections of the Robert Watt Campbell family in the Coe Hill area.

Six years ago Mrs. Fowler visited her son in Grande Prairie, but it is the first trip to Canada for her sister. They hope to visit Canada again in 1966.

Rotarians Get Closer Look At Israel

Members of the Rotary Club of Belleville received a closer look at Israel at their regular weekly meeting held at noon on Monday when Dr. Martin "Mark" Zimmerman of Toronto spoke to the club about his recent trip to Israel.

Dr. Zimmerman outlined the country, the people and their ways of living. He explained that the country was 260 miles long and only 30 to 30 miles wide.

The speaker stated that he visited Palestine and Jerusalem, explaining that Palestine was the best-known land in all the world for Christians and Jews. Dr. Zimmerman also visited the Sea of Galilee and Nazareth.

The speaker stated that in this part of Jerusalem there is a group of very orthodox Jews. He said that it was a sin for anyone to drive through this area in a car after dark. This is against their beliefs and it is common for them to overturn an automobile passing through the area after dark.

Dr. Zimmerman related one experience a doctor had had with this group in Israel. He said the doctor had been called to a home in this area and made the mistake of taking his car in. The speaker said the doctor's car was stoned and he was very lucky injured.

In closing Dr. Zimmerman said to talk about the whole of Israel would be like condensing the encyclopedia into pocket book size; there is so much there.

Four Aldermen Going to Seek Re-election

Although voting day is still over a month away, election rumblings are being heard up and down Front Street as at less four current aldermen, whose terms are running out, have expressed themselves as intending to run for re-election.

Aldermen who say they will go to the polls on December 7th are Jack Ellis, George Brown, Enos David and John Deacon.

Two others, Norman Harrison and George Wishart, say they haven't yet made up their minds but Mr. Harrison said it was still "too early" for a definite decision on whether or not he will run, while Mr. Wishart said he would make his decision at nomination time.

Alderman Frank Murray has stated he will not be running for re-election.

DEC. 7 ELECTION DAY

Nomination day is on November 25th while residents will go to the polls on December 7th.

There is no election for mayor this year with Mayor Jack Ellis last year having been elected for a two-year term.

But seven aldermen will be elected for a two-year term and there will also be election for the public utilities commission and public and separate school trustees in the four wards.

Three different referendums will be before the people this year. These are reduction of council to 10 aldermen; fluoridation and the return of parks administration to city council.

Blame Hunters For Four Fires In Tweed Area

Careless deer hunters have started four brush fires already in the Tweed area this month. Only one fire was reported during the whole of November last year. Fires burning now cover a two-and-a-half acre area in Radcliffe township, an acre area in Matawachan township, a two-acre area in Faraday township and an undetermined area in Lake township. All four fires are under control.

Forest fire hazard was considered medium this morning, but rising fast as a clear day dries the woods. The hazard will be serious, a Department of Lands and Forests official said today, if there is no rain within 24 hours.

In three of four deer hunting areas reporting this morning temperatures are considered too warm for good hunting so far this year. Hunting at Plevna is about the same as last year, at Bancroft hunting reported is better than last year and in Gilmour hunting is considered poor so far this year. All three places are considered too warm for ideal hunting. At Parry Sound hunter is considered good and the hunting is better than it was last year. Hunting is dry and "noisy" in all areas.

Total of fires to date this year in the area is more than 150. Last year there were 120 fires in the same area through the whole season.

Friends Assist Disabled Farmer

On Friday last 30 farmers with plows and tractors gathered at the farm of Kenneth Lake, along Highway 14, and plowed 50 acres of land in approximately three hours.

Mr. Alton Hadley of Stirling, R.R. 1, arranged the bee and the men with a caterer from Belleville supplying the coffee and other food along with barrels of fried chicken. A service manager from Toronto, Mr. Ron Jonah, was on hand to set the plows correctly.

When the men finished the day they were asked to place their signatures on a card in order that Mr. Lake could read who had given their assistance.

Mr. Lake has been a patient in Belleville General Hospital, following an accident on Oct. 19th in his farm while he was operating a forage harvester and became entangled with the power take-off on the tractor. He received a fractured arm and leg, crushed ribs and multiple bruises.

Campaign

will undoubtedly tell the story here, the 300-member college of presidential electors — an archaic device established by the founding U.S. father—will formally pick either Johnson or Goldwater Dec. 14.

State party slates of college electors, equivalent to the individual state allotment of congressmen, will be elected by the popular vote today. Johnson needs at least 270 electoral votes to win and, if the polls are right, may sweep all but a handful of states.

There are also other major candidates—464 Democrats, 453 Republicans and 69 Independent or third-party hopefuls.

DEMOCRATS FAVORED

The Democrats, who have controlled Congress since 1954, hold in all three of the categories involved and are expected to hold or increase their margins.

At stake are half the 50 governorships, where the Democrats have 34 to 16.

All 435 seats in the House of Representatives are up for election for two-year terms. Forty of the seat. aren't contested and the Democrats hold a edge of 254 to 176, with five vacancies.

In the 100-seat Senate, whose membership is renewed in 33 seats are vacant. One isn't being contested. The Democrats have a 67-33 majority now and the Democratic edge in the Senate has been 66 to 34.

Besides that, a host of judges and other minor officers will be elected varying by state. In 46 states that, a host of judges dums of one kind and another lengthen ballots.

Johnson, who like Goldwater logged time in 44 of the 50 states, had a massive turnout Monday night in Houston and at Austin, where tonight he heard the results in the municipal auditorium.

'I HAVE COME HOME'

Tens of thousands trotted beside his motorcade at Austin where he said: "I have come to the city I love to be with the people I love . . .

Goldwater, after a rousing welcome at San Francisco, stopped at Scottsdale in good luck gesture prompted by previous conclusions there is unusually sentorial campaigns.

"To come back here where so much of me lives is a wonderful experience," Goldwater told about 300 at the Fredonia Airport en route to Phoenix. "This has been a wonderful experience for a little old guy born in the desert."

At Los Angeles and at Salt Lake City, Johnson's running mate, bouncy Hubert Humphrey, made his last remarks, saying to Republican charges of moral rot that the last four years actually were not a peak of good public conduct.

Republican vice - presidential candidate William Miller went to Lockport, N.Y., with no public statement.

NIXON DRAMAS

Over the campaign, much more drama appeared to surround some lower - echelon struggles.

Key sideshow, of course, was the campaign by Robert F. Kennedy to oust popular Republican Senator Kenneth Keating of New York. While Johnson and Humphrey worked hard for Kennedy, many Democrats and moderate Republicans backed Keating.

Governor George Romney of Michigan was another non-old-water Republican fighting to win by himself.

Robert Taft of Ohio, Republican senatorial candidate, Senator Hugh Scott in Pennsylvania and Republican governorship candidate Charles Percy, Illinois, were others cast to Goldwater. On men such as these, moderate Republicans were hoping to snatch back the party captured by Goldwaterites at San Francisco, given a heavy Goldwater defeat.

Their hazard was that a heavy trend for Johnson might defeat many of the moderates needed to realign the party.

Family of Seven Left Homeless By House Fire

A Shannonville family of seven was left homeless over the weekend when fire of unknown origin destroyed their home and contents late Sunday night.

The Belleville Fire Department received a call at 8:25 p.m. to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Bapiste. The home was in the process of being built.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance said the blaze started in a bedroom. Damage to the house, valued at $5,000 was estimated at $3,500 while damage to its contents was estimated at $600.

Mrs. Effie McCabe, chairman of the Red Cross Disaster Committee said this morning that the family had been supplied by the committee with new bedding, new clothing, etc.

The family will be staying temporarily with Mr Bapiste's brother Dwayne, until another dwelling has been secured for them.

Residents in the Shannonville area are taking up a collection for the family and anyone wishing to make a donation to the fund is asked to call Mr Reid at Reid's General Store in Shannonville at WO 8-7393.

He was a prominent Hamilton educator and was one of two men to receive honorary degrees. Dr. Cones is now a retired superintendent of Hamilton's public schools. He went to Hamilton in 1930 as principal of Cannon St. public school there. Altercation Cost 2 a Fine Of $200 Each

An altercation with a provincial police officer near his home today cost two Belleville men $200 each.

The alternative to the fine, imposed by Magistrate T. V. Wills on Constable Kenneth Fox, 23, and Douglas Norman Reid, 18, is two months in jail.

Detective sergeant Harold Reid said a fracas started when OPP Constable Howard Adamson heard a report on CFRA Victoria Avenue home. The officer, still in uniform, approached a car halted on the street and an argument developed with both accused.

Fox used abusive language and flicked the officer's tie. A bottle of vodka was knocked from the constable's hand as he took it from the car. At one point Reid tried to pin the officer's arms, but he broke free, and the incident ended with the arrival of a city police cruiser patrolling the area.

Both men pleaded guilty, Fox to disturbing the peace and Reid to obstructing the officer.

Crown Attorney John Pringle demanded both men be sent to jail for 14 days when he told the magistrate: "It's hard to separate the two when the pain from you see such stupid conduct on the part of adult persons."

Deadline Date For Applications Is Extended

The deadline for Centennial project applications has been extended for all Ontario municipalities it was learned today.

City Hall officials said a letter had been received from the provincial department extending the centennial project application date to August 5th, 1965.

Originally early November of this year had been set as the deadline date but Mayor Jack Ellis a month ago made a request that the date for Belleville's application be set back to allow the city to decide on a detailed plans for its Zwick's Island project.

The new deadline date will now give the city more time to complete its plans for the Island project.

Democrats Seem Assured Of Retaining Senate Control

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — There are 941 men and women seeking election to the United States Congress in today's actions.

No set of races below the presidential level is considered more important than those for the 435-seat House of Representatives.

Who wins here will decide how much leeway President Johnson has, if he wins as expected himself, in getting legislation through Congress and what kind.

Most experts predict gains by the Democrats to offset the conservative coalition formed from both Democrats and Republicans to slow the program backed first by President Kennedy and then by Johnson. But forecasts are hedged.

Democratic control of the 100-seat, Senate seems assured. There are 79 men and women after the 33 available vacancies with one already filled by acclamation.

Democrats held 66 of the 100 Senate seats in the last Congress and few expect them to lose any of the 35 seats they are defending. The other nine seats up for election were held by Republicans. The one already filled by acclamation is that of Democratic Senator John Stennis of Mississippi.

SERVE SIX YEARS

Senators serve a six - year term, with one-third of the seats per house up for election every two years.

The Democrats have controlled the Congress since 1954 but they are counting on Johnson's inflated lead to bolster their effective margin in the House of Representatives.

These members, elected for only two years against six for Senators, totalled 254 Democrats and 176 Republicans with five vacancies going into this election.

There are 862 House candidates and 40 seats filled by acclamation. There are 435 seeking re - election, 10 of them women, plus nine newcomers. Women held 13 House seats last time.

Forecasts of Democratic party losses gains range as high as 35 depending on these factors:

The extent of Johnson's "coattail" support for the candidates; the degree of Democratic revolt in the South; whether Democratic losses there only transfer the conservative element to the Republicans; how much regional and personal issues bedevil national trends.

HAVE SWUNG DISTRICTS

The control of the House will be settled in about 78 "swing" or marginal districts held by small margins.

If the House of Representatives is the more critical section of Congress this time, the Senate as usual is the more glamorous. These are some of the contests:

Robert Kennedy is seeking to oust Republican Kenneth Keating in New York. This is the main single attraction before the presidential and vice-presidential level.

Pierre Salinger, former president Kennedy aide, has his hands full against George Murphy, Hollywood star of yesteryear, in California.

Another contest with deep portents for the future, particularly the ability of moderate Republicans to regain control of the party, exists in Ohio where Robert Taft, Jr., son of the Midwest conservative who lost the nomination in '52 to Dwight D. Eisenhower, seeks to oust a Democrat. Taft is regarded as likely "focal point for an anti-Goldwater cleanout.

Former football coach Bud Wilkinson is running as a Republican in Oklahoma, attempting to unseat a Democratic senator.

Republican Senator Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, another moderate, is in trouble and has been cool to Goldwater support.

Charter Member Of Auxiliary Is Honored

TRENTON — Last Saturday afternoon, several ladies from the Trenton Legion branch auxiliary motored to Belleville to hold a surprise party at the Maple Haven Rest Home for a charter member of the auxiliary, Mrs. Jesse (Lena) Baker. The ladies presented Mrs Baker with a birthday cake presents and cards. A card shower had been held at an auxiliary meeting and Mrs. Baker was delighted that so many of her old friends had remembered her. At 76, Mrs. Baker is fairly good health and enjoys visits from her family and friends at the home.

Known as one of the most active and untiring members of the auxiliary, Mrs. Baker had a hand in almost every activity pertaining to Legion work, and was very active in the fund now being raised to build the new Trenton Legion Hall.

Those from Trenton attending Saturday's get-together were Mrs. L. Leeman, Mrs. M. Weese Mrs. E. Weese, Mrs. Vena Mccarl, Mrs. M. Newman, Mrs. W. Gainforth and Mrs. E. A. Roberts.

Mrs. Watts, the owner of the home, and a nurse, helped serve coffee to the visitors.

CURLING SEASON ON

Curling was off to a start for another year last night at the Trenton Country Club. There was no official "throwing out of the first rock." It is expected Mayor James MacDonald will do this Friday night to mark the start of industrial curling and official ague play for the country club members starts next Monday.

WANT SEWERS

Twenty Roscoe Ave. residents appeared before Trenton council last night, not to "give council a bad time," but to ask, "when are we going to get sewers?"

A Mrs. Elworthy, initial spokesman for the delegation, said she has resided and moved to the street 10 years ago, and the life of their septic tanks was at an end. Most need to be replaced, but if the householder goes to this expense, only to have sewers installed next year, "be prepared for plenty of noise from the street," council was warned.

While council made no hard and fast commitments, the Roscoe Ave. delegation was told there was a possibility the town might tie in a sewer for the area with one going up to the new land assembly area, Burtidale Heights. This will be installed next spring.

SENEGAL GETS LOAN

PARIS (Reuters)—The Soviet Union has granted a long-term loan about $6,730,000 to Senegal, the Senegalese embassy here said Tuesday. The loan was contained in an agreement signed last week in Moscow by Senegal's foreign minister, Doudou Thiam, and Soviet officials.

EFFICIENCY SHIELD to Belleville St. John's cadet division was presented last night by Mrs. C. B. Ashley, provincial cadet officer. Patsy Dawkins accepts award while looking on (from left) are Bonnie McQuaid, Mary Jane Scott, Lynne Jobey,, Susan McReavy, and Mrs. Harold Reid. Belleville cadets have won award four times in past six years.

Swimming Pool Would Be for All Residents

TRENTON — Trenton voters, entitled to vote on money bylaws, will probably get a chance to say whether or not they want the town should contribute $29,000 towards the cost of a $101,000 swimming pool in the high school at the December 7 elections.

Whether the question will appear on the ballot depends on the Trenton Board of Education agreeing that the administration of the pool would be shared jointly by the board and the recreation commission . . . with council acting as mediator, should a dispute about the pool break out between the two governing bodies.

Council told school board representatives Walker Steerie and Eva Baker (board secretary), that this arrangement must be agreed to on a non-cancellable basis.

The pool would be available to all town residents, with Red Cross and Royal Life Saving activity at both lunch and on certain days; and others, children and adults, swimming at various times under recreation committee supervision.

It was carried on a motion that this year, the Trenton Lions Club will donate $25,000 towards construction costs, andgo government grant of $31,000 will be available, because the pool is being built in a school building. The Quinte Disabled Persons' Club has pledged $1,000 and a committee of responsible businessmen in the town has agreed to attempt to raise $25,000 by public subscription. The sown would debenture for $101,000 and recover $72,000 as outlined above.

Town in Sound Financial Condition Says Comptroller

TRENTON — At a meeting of Trenton council last night, clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry told the councillors that newspaper reports that the finances of the town was in a sound condition financially, and that the affairs of the corporation were being managed well within the borrowing limits set up by the Ontario Municipal Board.

The town has an estimate debenture debt of $3,352,, 181 but this is within the 20 per cent of total assessment for the town, and is approved by the OMB.

His remarks were challenged by Councillor G. A. Weaver who suggested that the town's inability to finance capital works for the next four years because of school construction costs bebied the phrase "sound financial condition." With one new public school, a new high school and two school additions on the books for 1965-66, debenture borrowing will be pushed to the limit, and council has planned to forego other capital works. This is in order to keep the mill rate around 15 mills, and taxes around the point where they are now.

"Do you expect the town will go on for the next four years without any expenditure at all on anything but school?" the councillor asked Mr. Larry.

The clerk-comptroller said if council proceeded in selling industrial land, and realized a recovery of $50,000 from the government on the acquisition of land for approaches to a new bridge, the town would have around $100,000 to devote to capital works . . . $25,000 a year for the next four years.

Meanwhile, the Ontario Water Resources Commission has written to the town asking that the sewer installation program be reviewed, and suggesting that a $500,000 enlargement to the sewage treatment plant is imminent . . . if not overdue.

In the final analysis, council decided to adopt a suggestion advanced by Mr. Larry last week that representatives of the OWRC and the OMB be called in to discuss the situation.

pact binding the 10 provinces and the two main ethnic groups.

If confederation was to prosper it required "recognition of the Quebec presence." Without autonomous attitude by the provinces "Confederation couldn't exist for one minute." Since that war the provinces had taken on new responsibilities and they needed special resources to cover them.

On other subjects Monday Gene Rheaume (PC — Northwest Territories) said it is "illogical" for the territories to have jurisdiction over the offshore islands near Quebec. It would be geographic sense to give the islands to Quebec.

Mr. Cassette accused the Conservatives of "imposing a sort of gag" on Parliament.

"Let them go on with their filibuster," he said. He described it as "shameless" political partisanship."

List of Eligible Voters Is Now Available

TRENTON — A list of eligible voters for the Dec. 7 election in Trenton has been printed and is now available to the public in the office of clerk-comptroller, O. W. Larry, at 15 Dundas St. East. Anyone who thinks he should have a vote, may check the list, and launch an appeal before Nov. 13, if his name is not on the list. Property owners, and those who rent self-contained units, are eligible to vote, if they are British subjects or naturalized Canadians.

Lists of eligible voters are also to be found in the post office and at the town hall, in the market square.

HIT BY CAR

Mrs. Sadie Pregent, 58, was taken to Trenton hospital by Rushnell Ambulance shortly after 3 p.m. yesterday after she had been struck by a car on Dundas St.-W. She suffered a cut to her left eye and a bruised left knee and was kept in the hospital overnight for observation.

Mrs. Pregent was reported by police to have stepped from between two parked cars, directly into the path of a car driven by Mrs. Marjorie Hillis, 262 Byron St.

BIG SUM COLLECTED

Trenton children who collected for UNICEF Saturday night raised $272.26 for the Save the Children Fund. At Glen Miller, $100 was raised.

Scandi-Canadian Axis In Play Again With Visit

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The "Scandi-Canadian Axis" comes into play again this week.

Foreign Minister Halvard M. Lange of Norway will come to Ottawa Thursday for a round of talks with an old friend, Prime Minister Pearson, and with External Affairs Minister Martin and government officials.

Canada and the Scandinavian countries have been so closely associated in the United Nations and other bodies for so long that Howard Green, former Conservative external affairs minister, used to refer to the association as the "Scandi-Canadian Axis."

This association is well illustrated by the presence in Ottawa of delegates from Norway Denmark, Sweden and Finland to the 23 - nation meeting on United Nations peacekeeping operations which opened Monday.

DISCUSS CHINA

Mr. Pearson and Mr. Lange, former co-workers in NATO as well as the UN, are likely to discuss how Communist China can be brought into the UN without leaving the United Nations out in right field by itself on the issue.

Mr. Lange in a speech to the Storting (Norwegian parliament) on Oct. 23 strongly urged the admission of Red China to the UN.

Mr. Pearson said after the recent explosion of a Chinese atomic bomb that mainland China must be brought into disarmament discussions His clear implication was that this can't be done without first bringing China into the UN.

Indications are that Canada at the coming session of the UN General Assembly will vote in favor of Red China's entry. But Canada wants to do this without antagonizing the U.S.

KREMLIN SHIFT

Mr. Pearson and Mr. Lange likely will compare notes on the extent to which a former General Assembly vote on Chinese membership now is indicated.

They will also discuss the subject of this week's Oslo conference — UN peacekeeping service—and particularly as it relates to the Cyprus situation.

Another major topic will be the power switch in the Kremlin and its likely effect on the affairs of the North Atlantic alliance.

Mr. Lange's visit originally had been scheduled to take place just before the Nov. 10 session of the UN General Assembly.

The UN meeting has been postponed to Dec. 1 but Mr. Lange hasn't put off his meeting with Canadian leaders. There have been plenty of important world events since his visit was announced Aug 21 to provide subjects for any number of meetings.

Leaflet Raids Again

Malaysia has taken its first retaliatory reaction against Indonesia for the latter's policy of "confrontation."

It has used its own and RAF planes to drop leaflets on Indonesian territory.

Technically, this is an act of war. There can be no valid ground for criticism of Malaysia on this account. Indonesia's actions have long ago shattered the peace. Still, since the leaflet raids provide Sukarno with an opportunity to attempt to load the Malaysians with the blame for any deepening of the already existing struggle, there rests on Malaysia the responsibility for defining what it hoped to gain from these leaflet raids.

From this distance, they appear like an exercise in foolish optimism, comparable to that which prevailed in London during the days of the "phoney war," before Hitler's panzer units swept over the Low Countries and into France. In those months, RAF planes were despatched fairly regularly to fly over the Third Reich with their bomb-bays carrying nothing more deadly than pamphlets. Many of their flights were to Wilhelmshaven and Kiel, German naval bases which in the early months of Hitler's purge units swept over the Low Countries and into France. In those months, RAF planes were despatched fairly regularly to fly over the Third Reich with their bomb-bays carrying nothing more deadly than pamphlets. Many of their flights were to Wilhelmshaven and Kiel, German naval bases which in the early months of Hitler's rule had seen dockers defy the Fuehrer with clenched fists and choruses of "Red Front." Perhaps the British hoped that these men, deserted by their Russian comrades when Stalin divided Poland with Hitler, might be stirred to revolt. But nothing came of it. The raids were useless. There appears even idle justification for hope that Malaysian leaflets dropped in Indonesia will produce any useful results.

Leaflets dropped over an enemy's homeland can have one of only two possible themes—appeals to reason or efforts to arouse fear. Either method may prove effective in the late stages of a war and leaflets at that time may hasten the end. But only in exceptional cases will either bring much reaction before the fighting has really begun. Indonesia has no reason to fear Malaysia unless Britain or the Commonwealth are prepared to support her on a major scale. Sukarno can probably persuade his people they are safe, though the presence of enemy planes above them may alarm some. As for appeals to reason, nothing we have read of the temper of the Indonesians suggests that these will prove effective.

Leaflet raids over occupied territory are something else again. By promising aid to the inhabitants, they can toughen resistance to the invaders. The very fact that their friends are able to communicate with them encourages the resistance. But, though there is no indication as to precisely where the leaflets were dropped in Sukarno's many-islanded nation, there is no reason to suppose that the raids were aimed at those areas of Sarawak and Sabah where Indonesians have infiltrated Malaysian territory.

Horrible Example

On both sides of the Atlantic, trade officials frequently preach the desirability of increased trade between Canada and Britain.

Sometimes these appeals have brought protests that what is needed is not preaching by governments but a little initiative by businessmen. Specifically, we in Canada often hear charged that British firms refuse to accommodate themselves to the demands of the North American market.

From what we have read, we believe some improvements have been made in recent months in eliminating the reasons behind this criticism.

Unfortunately, judging from a letter we have just received from a London firm, the situation has not been completely corrected.

This firm offers us a weekly series of cartoons. "As these are syndicated," we are told, "it is possible to offer them to you for only 50 dollars per week."

This firm has apparently made no effort to discover the going price for similar features marketed in Canada by U.S. syndicates.

It does not know that the price it quotes, and precedes with the world "only," is five to ten times what U.S. syndicates would ask.

There is no indication that it is even aware that, in America, the prices a newspaper must pay for syndicated material vary in ratio to its circulation.

"It may be that the 'Englishness' of these (cartoons) is attractive to you," the writer suggests hopefully.

It is not.

Never argue at the dinner table, for the one who is not hungry always gets the best of the argument.—Whately.

Shocked Tourist Gives P.M. And Martin Laugh for Day

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — In those days of seeming continuous political crisis, when the "best," as Prime Minister Pearson well puts it, mounts hitherto or in will be calls the Federal Cabinet, rare moments of relaxation in laughter must come almost as a therapy, relieving the terrible tension.

What with the not-so-quiet "revolution" in Quebec and the other provinces flexing in the nibbling at Federal power, with trade troubles, railway difficulties, defence problems, pension plan complications and all the other multiple and multiplying woes and worries that go with being prime minister, there's is scarcely ever a moment free of the mounting pressure.

So when they come, the release from this squeeze-of-the-top-national-responsibility must be all the more wonderfully relaxing.

Former Prime Minister Diefenbaker liked to use a joke or an anecdote — and he is the master spinner of yarns — as a way of letting off steam. Such fun stories were his own personal kind of safety valve.

Prime Minister Pearson extracts humor from the events of the day, the little things that often go unnoticed, but in their way, ease the load.

Prime Ministers, you'll know if you've watched them, simply must have some sort of release or they blow sky high.

LIKE TWO JACK-KNIVES

In retrospect, former members of the Diefenbaker Ministry now don't mind telling you it was largely the unrelieved pressure, the mounting tension unbroken by precisely rare moments of humor that brought on the Cabinet crisis two years ago and toppled the Conservative Government.

Things became so tense that Dief forgot how to crack a joke — lost the happy faculty of slitting back and laughing at himself and his troubles.

Such a moment of relaxation in quiet laughter came to Prime Minister Pearson the other day.

Things were going well — the flag . . . the Canada Pension Plan . . . the Hal Banks scandal . . . the continuing uproar over the CBC and its oddball sense of the fitness of things . . . a dozen other teasing current problems.

When up to the door of the Hill charged an assistant, wild-eyed, curiously decrepit British-built mini-car.

You know the kind. . . room, but just barely enough, for the driver, and maybe a small-dimensioned passenger in the front; and people with no knees in the back.

Then out of it, slowly and carefully, climbed the prime minister.

"Goodness gracious," exclaimed a woman tourist, from Edmonton, if so happened — her husband, in the meantime, having hurried on: had just retired and they were off to see Canada first — "I had no idea there was a prime minister this desperate. And who is that man with Mr. Pearson?"

Who was with him was External Affairs Minister Martin, unfolding out of the mini-car like a second jack-knife.

NOT THAT FAD, LADY

Scrunched up, knees around their ears, the prime minister and Right-Hand-Man Paul Martin had ridden up The Hill in the back seat of the sweat-up, vest-pocket size English-made jalopy.

A goodly car in its day and for its uses, with room, but hardly one for the nation's leader.

The prime minister and his External Affairs Minister, it turned out, had been to lunch, and Mr. Martin had asked a young man who is off-duty a happy-go-lucky junior, to pick them up and drive them back to The Hill for the afternoon opening of the daily Commons session.

So, with a bang and a rattle, a cloud of blue exhaust smoke, the so-ready-to-oblige young man rolled up with the pint-size fugitive from an auto-wrecking lot, little more than waist-high, and took the two most senior men of the Federal Cabinet precariously aboard.

Then was wasting, and it was either walk or climb in, so the prime minister and the External Affairs Minister jack-knifed themselves inside amid a pile of golf clubs, a scuba diving rig, a pair of ski boots, a couple of cartons of pop bottles and the assorted accumulated debris of a year of back-seat disorder.

Up they wheeled to the "Special Entrance," where the RCMP guard was all set to wave off the road-weary mini-car, when goggle - eyed and all but unbelieving, he saw who was inside.

With a fine flourish, enjoying the occasion, he spaned the sagging door and snapped off a corre.' and very pukka salute as Mr. Pearson and Mr. Martin, straight - faced, climbed awkwardly out and mounted the House, over-hearing to their delight, the Edmonton lady's dismayed, "Goodness gracious, I didn't think things were this desperate!"

PS: Lady, they're not, and the thanks of the prime minister and Paul Martin for giving them a most enjoyable chuckle.

Bridge Street United Church congregation at this time is bidding farewell to the Rev. James Semple, Th.D., who has been the devoted pastor and minister of the church for just 21 years, the longest pastorate in its history, and also to Mrs. Semple and their family who, with Dr. Semple, hold a place in the hearts of the worshippers of the congregation. The official farewell on Friday evening was marked by the evidences of mutual regret at the severing of the relationship of the minister and his family with the congregation after the long associations which have borne good fruit.

Rev. Dr. Semple's service in the church has been marked by tireless effort in the work of the religious life and by close attachment to his people. No more devoted and loyal pastor could minister to a congregation than he.

Negative Medical Report Means Disease Not Present

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My sister says that when a person has had syphilis, even after being cured, the disease will still show in a blood test and that a marriage license will not be granted. I say she is wrong.

I got a health card to be a waitress and under the word "results" it stated "negative." Recently I got a new card that says "non-reactive."

Does that mean I had the germ? If so, I didn't know it.—B. H.

Your sister is mistaken.

In most cases after treatment the blood test will be negative, meaning that no sign of the disease remains.

I perhaps five cases out of 100, a positive test may result from causes other thay syphilis. In such instances, further tests and medical examination will be necessary to arrive at the true answer.

And in a few others, but not very often, the more common blood tests will still show positive even though the patient has been treated successfully and is, in fact, cured and no longer can transmit the disease. Here again further tests are necessary.

In any of these instances, the cured patient can get a marriage license.

The terms negative and non-reactive state the same thing. Non-reactive is a newer one and, from the scientific standpoint, a shade more precise.

Negative means that the disease is not present. Non-reactive means that a test does not produce a reaction which would occur if the disease were present.

Dear Dr. Molner: My 80-year-old husband has cirrhosis of the liver. He has a lot of fluid in his stomach. He weighs 240 pounds.

He is a heavy drinker — a fifth of whisky a day. The doctor told him not to drink and gave him pills to get rid o' the fluid. He is headstrong and won't do anything but eat and drink.

What is going to become of him? — Mrs. M. S

Please don't ask me what is going to become of him You know and I know that such a quantity of whisky will destroy anybody — and when there already is serious liver disease, the end will be that much sooner. Facts are facts. Even unpleasant ones, I am sorry.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read a book stating that the wearing of glasses is not necessary if you are willing to do a few simple eye exercises every day. The book did, however, exclude those whose poor sight is due to disease or infection. Please give me your opinion. — C. A.

I think that the statement is a percent nonsense, and hope that nobody will struggle along with faulty vision because of following it.

It is true that in a small proportion of cases faulty muscle balance can be corrected by eye exercises. But this is an intricate problem and requires expert diagnosis and advice in learning the right exercises.

Where glasses are present, glasses can't cure any more than exercises.

The commonest reasons for needing glasses — near-sightedness, astigmatism, and far-sightedness as we grow older — are readily corrected with glasses but do not respond to exercises.

Anyone old enough to have difficulty reading the fine print in a phone book will testify to this.

You can exercise indefinitely, but still can't hold the book far enough away for the eyes to focus on the print.

Strictly Personal

Politicians Attack One Another

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The intemperate, vicious, and often asinine attacks made by political figures upon one another in the dwindling days of the campaign have reminded me of a passage in "Gulliver's Travels."

On his voyage to Laputa, Gulliver learned that all legislators in that land were attended by doctors whose job it was "to open a few mouths which are now closed, and close many more which are now open; curb the petulancy of the young, and correct the positiveness of the old; rouse the stupid, and dampen the pert."

Dean Swift was anticipating Freudian depth-psychology by more than a century. Today we recognize that his satire contains a large element of nonsense truth. In the next century, it is not impossible that all political candidates will have to undergo some rigorous psychological tests as part of their professional training.

It is manifestly absurd to entrust the running of the country to men of either party who are emotionally unstable, full of hidden — or overt — hostilities, and loaded down with unresolved guilt feelings which they take out on the public. Even a man who happens to be "right" for the wrong reasons can do his own cause much more harm than good.

A man's political convictions are, at bottom, not nearly so important as his emotional makeup. If he is calm and self-contained, and executes what he conceives to be his duty with a sense of honor and responsibility there should be little fear that he will abuse his power or betray the broad consensus of public feeling.

An alarming number of politicians however, enter the arena for exactly the wrong reasons: to create dissension, because their compulsive drive for power, and overcome their private frustrations by public exhibitions of arrogance and caprice.

The halls of Congress an the of law are filled with sick self-willed infants, whose motivations and behavior are a shameful parody of the oaths they have taken. I am not saying that a larger percentage are worse than other men; I am merely saying that they have more opportunity to do widespread mischief than other men.

Eventually, if the human race persists, all persons whose positions so profoundly affect the lives of others will be compelled to qualify, both intellectually and emotionally, for the jobs they aspire to. Meanwhile, we might bear in mind Plato's art observation that, "The only men who can be trusted with power are those who do not especially desire it."

Typical Tory Bit of a Pet

Ottawa Journal

"This has been a garden for 900 years," said Sir Douglas Marshall, the Conservatives candidate seeking re-election in Bodmin, Cornwall, to the reporter who came to see him.

Sir Douglas, 58, appears from this distance to be a good example of what Canadians expect British Tory candidates to be—son of an Indian Army officer, acceptable school, good showing in business, commander, RNVR, in war, election to Commons in 1945 and "fishing, shooting and travel" his reactions.

Labor never gets within range of this Tory in this country of open moors where the archaeologists find traces of Roman occupation, 1,900 years ago. Sir Douglas, we gather, would be as permanent as a memorial to the Romans were it not for a Liberal candidate who challenges him in this general election. The Liberals, after all, took 14,053 votes to the Conservatives' 18,833 in 1959 when the tide was clearly very strongly for the Tories. Labor, it should be added, garnered only 3,769 votes.

The London Times' man who went to see Sir Douglas called him a Conservative of the old school, and noted he was a liesseed reader of the Diocese of Truro and amateur actor to the best sense of the word." We are not quite clear from this what Sir Douglas was being amateur at but we were intrigued by his accommodation:

"His operations centre for the campaign is in a room which exudes haphazard benevolence Everywhere books and photographs abound. There are two swords on the wall, and a table littered with papers on which is placed, like an island in a raging sea, a paperweight made of stone from the blitzed House of Commons. There is a showcase of trinkets of sentimental value, including a spanner made by a prisoner in a Khartoum jail, a bit of the Bronze Age from Kowalt and a Remembrance Day poppy. 'I can't remember why that's there,' he says."

The Liberal Candidate, Mr Peter Bessell, owns a Cadillac and tries to live down the accusation by saying his campaign ad as if he were in a U.S. presidential election. There may be speaks from a Land Rover equipped with a loudspeaker to shine on him by night. Such a brief introduction does not make Mr. Bessell sound much to any Canadian or American candidate, but we assume that the Tory men of either party are high for that "bit of a pet."

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The stock market showed only scant faith in the predicted outcome of the U.S. general election today, as industrials took small gains in moderately heavy morning trading. Some industrials lost more than a few pennies.

On the plus side, Canada Wiring was ahead a point to a high of 26½, while General Motors, which began production Monday at its U.S. plants, rose 3/4 to 108¾.

Speculatives were higher generally with Key Anacon and Anglo Rouyn ahead seven and 19 cents respectively to $2.94 and $1.34 among small mines.

In senior base metals trading, Matagami Lake rose ¾ to a high of 30, while Falconbridge added ¼ to a high of 83¾ and Orchan 25 cents to $7.10.

Gold trading was weak with Hollinger off ⅛ to 30.

On index, industrials rose .52 to 168.57, the TSE index .02 to 152.36 and western oils .69 to 94.21. Golds fell .64 to 150.21 and base metals .07 to 71.62 while volume at 11 a.m. was 837,000 shares compared with 1,254,000 shares traded at the same time Monday.

On Monday the market leaped ahead in a last-minute burst of trading.

The 97-stock industrial index gained 1.05 at 168.55, largest jump since April 21.

Youth Given Week in Jail, Seek Record

Crown Attorney John Pringle today argued against a possible seven-day sentence for a 20-year-old man charged with dangerous driving during a police chase.

Instead, Gerald Edward Wilkes will spend the next week in jail, while the court seeks out his driving record.

The Crown protested when Magistrate T. Y. Wills mentioned the seven-day sentence as part of the penalty after Wilkes pleaded guilty to what Mr. Pringle called "exceptionally idiotic behavior."

As recounted by Detective sergeant Harold Reid Wilkes was guilty, among other things of:

Taking off at high speed on Station Street when a police cruiser approached; driving through a red light at the Upper Bridge; failing to observe stop signs in the St. Charles-Strachan streets area; after dousing his car lights swerving across the sidewalk at College Street, narrowly missing two young girl pedestrians; driving up College at 80 miles an hour; swerving past traffic in the path of an oncoming car on Sidney Street.

The officers lost the chase, but later that night the same automobile was reported nicking a car on East Dundas Street and cutting off a city bus and Colonial Coach at Pinnacle Street. Police found the car parked behind a hotel on Dundas and arrested Wilkes when he returned.

Wilkes told the magistrate a companion had also been driving the automobile part of the evening.

Mr. Pringle said the incident justified a "fairly severe sentence."

"I have seen persons maimed and disfigured over this sort of thing," he added.

United Appeal Total Is Near $75,000 Mark

Campaign total this morning for Belleville United Appeal was about $74,400, with more than $70,000 already turned in to the Appeal's office. About $4,000 is known to have been collected by in-plant campaigns at Wilson Concrete Products and Canada Cement, and both campaigns continue. Other in-plant campaigns are being conducted at Bell Telephone, Black Diamond Eaton's, Elliott Motors, Trudeau Motors, Moira Schuster and the New's Queen's Hotel. No reports have been received from these campaigns.

Last of the dozen major private employers in the city to report, Union Carbide turned in a corporate gift yesterday 12 per cent higher than the firm's gift last year. The business canvass continues among some smaller firms. Total collections for the same campaign-time last year were $43,876.

A major portion of the total was in residential construction with permits for 31 new single family dwellings at $354,000 and four permits for six-plex apartments at $120,000 being issued.

Games of Chance at Fairs Under Fire at Convention

TORONTO (CP) — Games of chance at fall fairs came under fire Monday at the Ontario Federation of Agriculture annual convention, but a resolution to investigate them was tabled when a delegate said the games are necessary to help meet expenses.

William Kell of Churchill Ont., said fairs have some operators trying to swindle people out of their money. He said it did not help the image of agriculture to have them at county fairs.

But R. R. Stewart of Peterborough said farmers like to take a chance just as well as anyone else.

Mr. Stewart, second vice-president of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies which advises fall fairs, said that without midways it is difficult to get enough persons to the fairs to meet expenses.

The resolution urged the federation to investigate games of chance because they cause hardship for many persons.

Charles Munro of Woodstock said each fair has the power to remove the games. It was not the business of the federation to take care of the problem.

IS DISTURBED

In other business, federation President A. H. K. Musgrave of Clarksburg said his organization is disturbed by the apathetic attitude some farmers have toward rural developments.

Mr. Musgrave said in a prepared address that committees under the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Agency have been appointed in Ontario counties during the last year but their activities have been extremely disappointing.

ARDA was created by the former federal Conservative government to help marginal farmers use their land more productively or aid them in moving to other occupations. The agency works in co-operation with provincial governments.

The federation's hunting, fishing and wildlife committee said in a report to the meeting that it has dealt with numerous complaints from farmers in the last year about careless hunters trespassing, damaging farm machinery and, in some cases, wounding farm animals.

The committee said development of public and private recreational facilities under proper management should help eliminate many of these problems.

Favorite Light Fruit Cake

By MARY MOORE

Good-natured arguments are undercurrents to all of our Christmas baking. This light fruit cake I am giving you today is the result of testing and judging by me and my most dedicated helpers and tasters. After tasting it Peady said "I'm going to throw out all my other fruit cake recipes and make this one". Another beloved taster said "How will you top this in 1965?"

I would recommend this cake to career girls who have little time at home but who want to have the fun of Christmas baking. Besides the beating in your electric mixer and cutting the pineapple and separating the Muscats there is nothing more to it but assembling and mixing the ingredients.

It is a combination. I lifted all the best features from 3 previous light fruit cakes that were popular with you and what follows is the result.

(Next week I will give you the recipe for my tested, tasted 1964 Dark Fruit Cake.)

TUESDAY
(Guests)

Dinner Menu

Pot Roast of Beef; Horseradish; Mashed Potatoes; Parslied Carrots; Sliced Cucumbers in Dill Sour Cream; Peter Pan Tarts (see Monday); Old Cheddar or Tilsit Cheese; Tea.

1964 ALL-TIME FAVORITE LIGHT FRUIT CAKE (excellent for freezing and slicing thinly)

(These amounts make a little more than 4½ lbs. cake).

½ lb. butter (room temperature),
1 cup granulated sugar,
5 large eggs,
1¾ cups unsifted flour,
½ teaspoon baking powder,
½ teaspoon salt;
1 lb. pecans (see below),
1 tablespoon vanilla,
1 tablespoon lemon extract,
½ lb. (four 3-oz. rings) candied pineapple, shredded or finely chopped,
½ lb. light raisins (2 cups not packed),
½ lb. dark seeded Muscats (1 cup broken apart but not packed),
½ lb. mixed whole green and red glace cherries.

In a large mixing bowl cream butter well, then cream sugar into it until light. Add eggs one at a time, while beating. Add vanilla and lemon extract. This mixture should be light and fluffy. Sift together into a big bowl the unsifted flour, baking powder and salt. Add the pecans (broken pieces are fine and are cheaper; do not chop whole or broken pecans) and fruits to the flour mixture and mix by hand to coat all the fruits and nuts. Add them to the creamed mixture and combine thoroughly. Have ready two loaf pans 4½ x 8½ x 2¾", triple-lined with wax paper which has been well-buttered on top sheet where batter touches. Turn in batter, smooth top, bake at 250 deg. Fahr. for 2 hours and 40 minutes, having waterpan below cakes during entire baking period.

Cool cakes on racks. Wrap in triple plastic bags and store in refrigerator or if to be frozen freezer-wrap the plastic-bagged cakes and freeze.

Church Groups

LATTER DAY SAINTS W.D.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Department of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints met Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. S. C. Else, 31 Northwood Crescent.

The opening period, using the theme "A Righteous Generation Shall Come Forth," was conducted by Mrs. Else.

The lesson, from the book "Needed — A Righteous Generation," by Irene Acres, was taught by Mrs. W. L. Canniff.

The business meeting was convened with Mrs. Larry Smith in the chair. Mrs. Jack McCurdy read the list of officers for the coming year as follows: women's leader, Mrs. Larry Smith; assistant leader, Mrs. S. C. Else; secretary treasurer, Mrs. Jack McCurdy, and class teacher, Mrs. W. L. Canniff.

The ladies decided to use the travelling food basket and money apron as money-making projects.

Following the meeting lunch was served by the hostess.

W.M.S. AND L.A

IVANHOE — St. Andrew's Presbyterian W.M.S. and Ladies' Aid met at the home of Miss Bessie Fleming on Wednesday evening with 12 in attendance. Mrs. Lindsay Sills presided. The Thanksgiving worship service outlined in the Glad Tidings was followed, conducted by Mrs. John McInroy, assisted by Mrs. Harry McInroy. The key word "Duty" was given by Mrs. Milton Shaw.

A nominating committee was appointed: Mrs. Harold Thompson, Mrs. Harry Benson, Mrs. Milton Shaw. A report from bale secretary was read stating a bale of new material weighing 12 lbs. valued at $22.35 was shipped to the Kenora region early in October.

A musical number was given by Mrs. Harry Benson. Readings were given by Mrs. Harold Thompson and Mrs. Barton Haggerty. Mrs. William Donnan rendered a solo.

A chapter in the study book was reviewed. Those taking part were: Mrs. John McInroy, Mrs. Ross Donnan and Mrs. Thomas Dodds.

Women's Institutes

CARMEL W.I.

Carmel Women's Institute held its October meeting in the form of an interesting tour of the Bell Telephone Company, with Mr. Ron Christianson conducting the tour which was educational and interesting. The business part of the meeting was held in the cafeteria with the president, Mrs. J. Lucas in charge. The November meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Russel Ritz. Plans were made to have Mr. McMurray of Gilmour Studio take pictures on the Moosonee district on Nov. 30th in Carmel United Church.

Mr. Christianson gave an illustrated talk on the telephone. He said that the telephone will become less personalized with the dial service only when long distance and repairs are needed we will need the operator.

The expenses are half to the operators and half to the employees. Mr. Christianson compared the telephone system with water in large centres. In the earlier years the boys were the operators and now they have been replaced by girls; 936 dial services are in effect in North America. In 1910 it took one half hour to connect a call with Belleville and Los Angeles at a cost of approximately $9.00, today it takes about 10 seconds with a cost of approximately $2.30. Bell Telephone Co. of Canada is owned by the Canadian public and is financed by shares in stocks with 97 per cent of the shareholders Canadian. Money is also gained through research, scientists and sales of equipment. Mr. Christianson demonstrated different types of telephones including a hand set and the touch tone service.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Christianson and was presented with a small gift from the members. Refreshments were served by the staff of the Bell Telephone Co. in their cafeteria and a social period followed.

Will May Be Purchased After It's Been Probated

DEAR DORIS — How could I get a copy of a will? This person passed away six weeks ago. Also, I would like to know the cost. — AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

DEAR SUBSCRIBER—Once a will has been probated, it becomes a public document. You may then go into the circuit court clerk in the county where the person died and, for a small charge, be given it to read. If you want a copy you may have it made for you by paying a few dollars.

Before probation, it is not available to just anyone, but a beneficiary is entitled to a copy and may request this of the executor of the estate.

Notes were on planning supper menus, why use vegetables? pressure cooking, frozen vegetables, salads and salad seasonings.

Group work was making a salad dressing which was used on an egg salad made by Mrs. Lazier. Mrs. Cook made a green tossed salad and used a French dressing. Mrs. McFarlane had made a jellied vegetable salad. The group enjoyed eating the salads.

The next meeting will be held on November 3rd at the hall. It is expected that Miss Munroe, home economist, will be a special guest.

Bazaar Bonanza

It's open season on Bazaars once more . . . as women's groups in the Province of Newfoundland prepare to stage fund-raising drives in this time-honored, talent-selling manner. If your group would like copies of our "Bazaar Folder" or "Bazaar Favorites", just drop us a note.

Quality Counts

Why is the bake table usually sold out long before closing time? Because buyers know that only choice offerings are displayed for sale. And others know that only the best of ingredients, time and labor went into their making and/or baking. For there's a feeling of pride or love in specialties for whatever Bazaar we're involved in, and something quite revelling about bringing forth creations of flavor and beauty to donate to the good of the cause.

Best Butter Cakes

Here's an idea for those big beautiful butter cakes that sell so well. If you're making up several "batches" of the same recipe, vary the results a bit by adding different flavorings to each batch of better . . . you might try lemon or almond flavoring for white cake, coffee or rum flavoring in chocolate cake. Then carry the accent along by adding a little of the same flavoring to the butter frosting.

Extra Hands

How about having a Cookie Bee, just prior to the big bake sale? Either have your small group meet in one kitchen for a morning or afternoon of cookie baking—or plan to have everyone arrive, complete with cookie dough ready to be made into cookies. Many hands make it more fun, as well as more efficient.

A Note To Freezer Owners

Most butter cakes and cookies will freeze well. Which means you can make them up in advance, saving time and the storage problem, in those busy last days before the sale.

Finishing Touches

Be sure to use a tasty butter icing on the cakes you plan to freeze. It stands up best to the rigors of the freezer . . . and it's easy to make too! Once the cake is iced, try putting it in the freezer for a short time to "firm up" the icing before wrapping. Then those pretty swirls won't come off on the wrapping paper.

Utility Is Byword in '65 Raincoats

By LINDA CRAWFORD

MONTREAL (CP) — Utility turned to a fashion highlight in a showing of raincoats for 1965 here. Variety was a keynote.

On the whole, the raincoats shown by designer Lydia Sperlich paid attention to details—sets of pockets, several zippers, collar and hipline stitching.

A coat of synthetic material in yellow with black stitching had a high collar and full-length zipper, along with four pocket zippers. Another pale gold coat fastened with three large side buttons, but had a full length zipper hidden in the centre.

The majority of coats were double-breasted with knob buttons, often in brass. A wide low-set belt, sometimes in back and sometimes all the way around, was repeated in many of the coats, along with the new lowered V neckline.

A navy poplin coat with a young look combined this new stretched neckline with another fashion feature, cotton piqué—used here for a dickie. Charcoal pin stripe boy coat had a cap and detachable collar in white cotton piqué.

HEADPIECES MATCH

The rain coats came with matching headpieces. One pattern consisted of a triangle of matching material gathered on a wide, straight band. This was worn in a variety of ways—under the chin in bandanna style, tied in back for a gypsy effect or tied in back and tucked under to make a little cap.

Some coats came with a small two-cornered hat, worn at the back of the head. Others came with a wide, matching band.

The "wet look" created by a new chemical finish that makes the coat waterproof and washable makes luminous and shiny acetate silk raincoats look wet before they really are.

Raincoats without a raincoat look were shown in houndstooth and larger checks and in the camel coat. These coats are water-repellent and stain-proofed and can be worn every day.

Several coats were Reversible travel coats, checked textured knit on one side and poplin on the other.

USE VELVET

Water - repellent, crease - resistant and stain-proof velvet looked especially smart in a blue - green loosely fitted raincoat. Black velvet appeared frequently, often with pure silk trim.

New demi - longueur length raincoats are stretched to come within three or four inches of the ankle, and were shown in pale green and gold waterproof brocade, in black velvet with white frills and in dail blue Italian lace.

The wet weather fashion picture for spring was completed by raindrop and other patterned stockings worn by the models.

Women Make Up 51 PC of Electorate

TORONTO (CP) — An observation of voting habits shows when the roll of women in political leadership is assessed, says Dorothy Downing, national director of the Progressive Conservative Women's Association of Canada.

Mrs. Downing told the Conservative women's annual meeting Monday the reasons for the vacuum probably are general indifference and the failure to recognize the ramifications of political issues.

"Arising from this is perhaps the failure of conference in ourselves as political leaders," she added.

Mrs. Downing said the place of women in elected politics would be assured if voting power alone were the answer, for women made up 51 per cent of the Canadian electorate.

If the voting age were to be lowered to 18, she said, 1,000,000 more females would be eligible to cast ballots.

Mrs. Downing described these young persons as her party's greatest challenge. She urged Conservative women to move quickly into the "great vacuum" left by women's non-participaten in politics.

Woman Goes 6,000 Miles To Have Baby

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — Mrs. Erik Thorberg, who travelled 6,000 miles to have her baby outside the confines of socialized medicine, says it was worth it.

Her first child was born under Norway's "security from the cradle to the grave" and, she says, she didn't care for the impersonal treatment she received.

Mrs. Thorberg says she and her husband decided it would be worth their time and money to make arrangements for their second child to be born in Canada.

She returned to her former home here where her baby was born in mid-September.

Explaining her unhappiness with childbirth in Norway, Mrs. Thorberg said that when she visited the doctor in her village, Fredrysvn, early in her pregnancy, she was identified by a metal tag.

"If you think you have to wait a long time for the doctor here, you should go to Norway," she says.

The charge per visit was the equivalent of 30 cents, Mrs. Thorberg says, but the doctor has a large area to cover and prefers women to consult the midwife who shares his offices.

She arranged to have her first child in the hospital at Drammen, a four-hour ride from her home, but says conditions there were not much better. During her 48 hours in labor, she says, she was first placed in a "cold" room and later moved to a corridor where she received little attention from nurses. In the ward afterward, she says, there were no curtains for privacy when the doctor came to examine her.

Susanna's Family Fare

Gather up all his garden tools and remove any rust spots. Crumpled felt and water, or car rubbing compound and light grease will take care of most of it. The deeply rusted stubborn places will probably require fine sand paper.

For storing, dry them well and apply a light coat of petroleum jelly. This gives a protective covering that helps prevent any further rusting over the winter.

When my special fellow came home, and saw them all cleaned and neatly stashed away he said it was the best birthday present he ever had — Sally S.

Well done Sally, but watch it! Don't hang up that rake quite yet, because I still see a few leaves out front and just back on to what the Department of Agriculture says about them: "If large leaves such as maple are left lying on the grass all winter the grass may be smothered and bare patches will occur."

Now we wouldn't want any topless lawns next summer would we?!? — SUSANNA

C FOR TWO

Dear Susanna: My very favorite gift for a young bride is a cook book and a pot of parsley. The reasons for the cook book are apparent and the price range is open. The parsley I grow myself from seed as I transplant it from the bed into pretty flower pots for the newly weds. Since it is a biennial, the young homemaker will have a good two year's supply of this tasty greenery for flavoring when she cooks and for decorating her prepared dishes for the table. — Margaret Bell

Parsley's great in the nutrition department too! So if you missed your orange juice this morning, catch up on your vitamin C later on the day by nibbling a sprig or two of parsley from the sandwich plate - — SUSANNA

PLEASE LEAVE!

Dear Susanna: If you really want to give your husband a pleasant surprise it doesn't have to be expensive. Do what I did.

'Lively Look' Introduced at London Show

By LYNNE EDMUNDS

LONDON (Reuters) — Buyers from more than 40 countries were introduced to Miss Europe 1962 Monday at the opening of the London fashion week.

They applauded a swinging young woman reported worth around £2,000,000 a spot anywhere between 14 and 40, who buys her stylish outfits off the rack from any of the 36 British firms that make up the London Fashion House Group.

The "lively look" introduced here is likely to draw export orders worth £2,000,000 from the United States, Scandinavia and Japan.

More than 1,000 buyers were expected in London this week to view the spring ready - to - wear collections.

Miss Europe swings into spring 1965 in culotte and trouser suits for any hour of the day—and for any occasion, however formal. She starts the day in a tailored suit in creamy beige cape suede by leather specialists Denis. The bulky four-pocket look of the pocketed jacket emphasizes the slender cut of the pants.

For a long town wear, she changes into a classic blazer suit in cream worsted, chalk striped in navy and white, replacing the usual skirt.

Alternatively, Miss Europe can slip into a gay two piece of red flannel blazer and matching waistcoat over full, white culotte skirt.

A beach date means a slick three-piece of sand-colored linen trimmed with navy by Reldan —its cut-away middy top buttoning on to slender slacks. On a stroll at a fashionable resort would turn "into a parade if Miss Europe donned a cotton trouser suit in vivid orange and red flower pattern.

And for evening, she wears the most striking combination of all—a shell pink tunic in mas-made fibre, slashed to the waist to show saucy, tight-fitting, lace-trimmed knickerbockers.

'Image Makers' of Women On Television Under Fire

By BRENDA LARGE

OTTAWA (CP)—Betty Friedan, author of a controversial book on the role of women in modern society, attacked the "image makers" of television for perpetuating the idea of American woman as "dreamy, mindless drudges."

Mrs. Friedan, whose book The Feminine Mystique has sold nearly 700,000 copies, told a lecture audience of more than 700:

"The current image of the North American housewife on television is that of a dreamy, mindless little drudge whose greatest ambition in life is to get the kitchen sink clean and white.

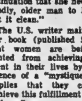
"And even then, there is the insinuation that she needs some kindly, older man to help her get it clean."

The U.S. writer maintains in her book (published in 1963) that women are being prevented from achieving fulfillment in their lives by the existence of a "mystique" which implies that they can only achieve this fulfillment as wives and mothers.

Mrs. Friedan said she had questioned "the image makers" of American television before writing her book to find out why there weren't more feminine actors, teachers, doctors and lawyers in TV dramas and family shows.

"They said women only wanted to watch men on television.

'PAINT PICTURE'



"The producers painted a picture of thousands of housewives across the country sitting in front of their television sets with repressed sexual needs which could only be satisfied by the appearance of young, kindly doctor from the young married women who were bored with being alone all day in suburbia and needed pats for the middle-aged housewife."

This sort of an image is the cause of the "fantastic self-denigration of women while it keeps them from achieving what they could and what she said.

"The major thing that the women of today have to fear is their own fear of the new role in the community of their lives."

Mrs. Friedan, during the wide-open question session at the end of her talk, answered queries on a wide variety of problems.

On "intellectual superiority" of women, she said: "I doubt very much if we are ever going to prove superior to men. It

Women Rise up in Arms Protesting Ann's Advice

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Your reply to "Brick Wall" set my teeth on edge. You must be a nut.

Have you ever gotten up at 3:00 a.m. to cook a man supper? I know darned well you haven't. So quit telling other women to do it.

ANN LANDERS

I was married to one of those lunatics who turned night into day. He worked every cock-eyed shift in the book and I was supposed to adjust my life to it. As if that wasn't enough he'd go on fishing trips, come home at 4:00 a.m. half-crocked and expect me to get out of bed and clean the fish "so they won't spoil."

Most men who work graveyard shifts have a screw loose. They live by night and sleep by night. I say "Fine" if that's what they want, but they have no right to impose their nutty ways on others. Then you come along and stick up for them. Why don't you write a travel column and take a nice long trip? — MAD AT YOU.

DEAR MAD AT ME — You aren't the only one. I haven't received such a pasting since I told the women to pick up their husband's socks and wet bath towels and stop nagging. Even some men wrote to tell me I was crazy.

I still say a husband is entitled to a hot supper and his wife's company when he gets home from work no matter what the hour — if he wants it.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — My steady boy friend just gave me my engagement ring. This means I must go to a doctor for a pre-marital physical examination within the next several weeks.

I don't mind going to a doctor to have my throat painted or to get a flu shot, but the thought of a complete physical exam by a man makes me sick to my stomach.

Please, Ann, don't tell me that I'm afraid of men and to get over my prudishness before I marry or I will be in trouble. The truth is, my boy friend and I have already done things you don't approve of — so it isn't that.

And don't tell me to go to a woman doctor. There is no woman physician in this city.

I want to overcome this terrible feeling, Ann, because I'll be faced with it again when I have children. Can you help me? — THE SHAKES.

DEAR SHAKES — I don't know who you think you are or what you think you have that is so special, but this I can tell you — to that doctor you are just about as sexy as the cadaver he worked on in med-school.

A nurse will be present, plus several sheets, and you will discover the anticipation is 1,000 times worse than the actual experience.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I was appalled by the letter from "Corky" the farm wife who rattled off the long list of things she accomplished between dawn and dusk.

"Corky" casually told you she puts the baby on her lap when she drives the tractor. Please, please, please, Ann, tell her to stop taking such terrible chances with her child. Any farm safety expert will tell you it is a risky practice.

If you only knew how we farmers are pestered by visiting kooks who want to give their small children a tractor ride — as if it were a feature at an amusement park. I hope you will print this letter for one and all to see. — SPRINGFIELD.

DEAR SPRINGFIELD — Here's the letter, and now all you folks who may be giving kids tractor rides — cut it out. The man says its risky — and I would take his word for it.

They'll Do It Every Time

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

THE GRACIOUS RESTAURANT HOST

We talked recently about the Perennial Check-Grabber who insists on paying for everything in sight and usually steps on other people's toes in his rush to prove his generosity. He's a prime example of how not to be a gracious host.

On the other hand, there are times when you are expected to pay. The following examples might serve to help you know when and how to do the honors.

The most frequent situation arises when you have invited someone to lunch. In extending the invitation, the implication is plain that you plan to pay for the meal. Unlike the check-grabber, you must let the other person foot the bill on alternate date. If you lunch together frequently.

Like many rules, this one has an exception. Many people regularly meet friends for lunch and either split the check or pay for the food they've ordered and contribute to the tip.

Recently, friends of mine drove into the city to shop. They met their husbands later for cocktails at a private club. The husband who was a member signed the check and the four went off to a favorite restaurant for dinner.

When the dinner check was presented, the other husband determined the tip, divided the total in half and subtracted the amount the club member had signed for at the club. The latter then made up the few dollars difference.

The transaction was completed quietly, which is the best way of handling the expense bit when you're having dinner with another couple.

One day we invited a couple to lunch at a nearby restaurant. We had been dinner guests in their home on several occasions. I made it obvious over the phone that this was an invitation. There was no question about who paid for lunch. My husband did.

Frequently I receive letters from women in business who complain that lunch is a problem and are vexed by the problem of paying the check. Their usual complaint is that the waiter doesn't know the lunch is all business and usually acts surprised when the woman asks for the bill. The man, sensing the waiter's reaction, is embarrassed.

The solution is simple. The woman should open charge accounts at various restaurants. When she gets the check, she signs it — a more comfortable procedure than paying in cash. If asked, some restaurants will not even present the check.

Knowing when it's your turn to pay, and how to do it, is no big trick. The secret ingredients are good taste and common sense.

Peggy Cass Got Her Start As Regular on Paar Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Peggy Cass, the blonde on the To Tell the Truth panel show, was not in top guessing form Monday night. In three tries, she missed the non-lying contestants three times.

It is not, however, a statistic that worries her. Almost from the beginning of the program, Bostonborn Peggy has been a regular on the show which for several seasons has started CBS' powerful Monday night television comedy line-up. Her longevity is based on the sparkle she injects into the panel and for the enormous fund of extraneous information she has stored away — locations of obscure Irish pubs, names of German castles and champions in obscure sports.

A lot of viewers have forgotten that Peggy, a serious actress, got her TV start as one of Jack Paar's favorite Tonight guests.

She would prefer that they forget that she once co-starred with a family of trained chimpanzees in a short-lived comedy series called The Hathaways.

"I haven't been able to force myself to go to a zoo since we finished those 26 shows," she said.

Time, however, does heal wounds. A year or so ago Peggy was still shuddering every time a new TV series was suggested. Now she thinks one might be interesting.

She believes her popularity as a TV panelist is "because I'm sort of like the woman next door, somebody you sort of half know and someone you wouldn't be surprised to see with her hair in rollers."

Picton Decides to Proceed With Annexation Proposal

PICTON — The Town Council has decided to proceed with plans to annex part of the Township of Hallowell.

Minutes of the planning and development board were submitted to the November meeting of Council Monday night. Purpose of the board's meeting, held Oct. 20, was to consider and make a recommendation to the Council respecting annexation.

Mr. Hepburn reminded the committee that Council had met with representatives of Hallowell Township Council in the later part of July at which time the Hallowell Township Council indicated its desire to get independent advice from an expert planner with respect to the proposed Picton annexation plan. He told council that to the best of his knowledge Hallowell had taken no steps with respect to obtaining such independent advice. After some discussion a motion by Clapp and Hepburn was carried unanimously "that this committee recommend to council of the Corp. of the Town of Picton that the solicitor for the Corporation be instructed to proceed an application to the Ontario Municipal Board with such supporting documents as may be deem necessary to annex that portion of the Township of Hallowell recommended to be annexed by the report of the General Prince Edward Planning Board."

CONSIDER BUILDINGS

Four building permits were submitted to the council, in the totality: $15,200. One was a permit for the erection of a dwelling on Paul St., for Miss Audrey Minaker, cost $12,000. Another, which is being investigated by council's solicitor because of zoning laws, is for the erection of a new building for United Auto Body. The property on which the firm is located is a commercial property but is located in a more recently zoned residential area. Value of the building to be erected is $1,800.

Following a reading of the report from the fire commissioner Councillor Bird said that he was very pleased with the efficient operation of the fire department. He said the townspeople and taxpayers were recognizing that the town was getting efficient results from fire department. The way they have handled recent fires in the town has been most commendable, he added.

There were six fire calls during the month of October with a total damage of only $735. From the inspections made during this week it was noted that there was much room for improvement—lax-labtering fire hazards. This was particularly noted at the rear of many of the main street establishments and apartment buildings. Unsafe wooden stairs and back porches, blocked in some cases by oil drums make it nearly impossible for tenants to escape in an emergency. The back lanes allow for very poor passage for the fire trucks. They are not of sufficient width to permit proper handling of the vehicles.

The annual salary of a town foreman was set at $5,200.

Two letters of complaint were read regarding the passing of heavy trucks through the town's main street. Mr. E. Pearce and Louise Cook were the two complainants who requested that this traffic be re-routed. It was moved by Bird and seconded by Clapp that consideration be given to the matter of re-routing the trucks. Other members of the council felt that this could not be done as the main street is a direct link and part of Highway 61 and therefore cannot be interferred with as it is controlled by the Department of Transport.

Of three proposed new candidates running for council in the coming election only one Mrs. George Elson, was present at Monday's meeting of council.

Mr. Diefenbaker gave reporters no hint of the strategy that he went to the party leaders' conference or afterwards.

25 SEATMATE

Mr. Balcer is Mr. Diefenbaker's seatmate in the Commons and the leader of Quebec's 10 Conservative MPs on whose behalf he called last week for a decision without delay on the flag committee's recommendation.

Gordon Fairweather (PC — Royal) told a Toronto audience during the weekend recess of the last summer's protracted flag debate or an election on the flag issue would be intolerable and tragic for Canada.

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC — Peace River) followed Monday with a statement agreeing with Mr. Fairweather. A third Conservative, Ward Jorgenson (PC — Provencher), was quoted as saying he didn't think more than half a dozen of his party colleagues were willing to press th. flag issue into an election.

These stands were labelled a rift in the Conservative party but whether it was serious remained uncertain until the MPs hold their regular caucus behind closed doors Wednesday.

UN Peace

and the length of UN service in trouble areas, the possibility of war or border clashes has been temporarily overcome.

They contend that the presence of UN forces in Cyprus and Egypt is worth the peacekeeping price no matter how long they have to stay there.

This is obviously the view of the Canadian government since External Affairs Minister Martin has said that Canada has no intention of pulling out of the UN force in Egypt.

As another example, Canada this year doubled the strength of its contingent with the UN mission in Kashmir. This UN operation has been going on since 1948 at a cost to Canada of $981,000 a year.

The problem comes down to finances. The UN cannot run an unlimited number of peacekeeping operations all over the world if the UN would support them financially.

The UN pulled out of the Congo after four years because of lack of money. If the Congo situation sorts itself out, sources said, the UN may be less willing to keep peace forces in other trouble areas for long periods.

Bob Steele, After 40 Years In Films, Still in Westerns

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Who was the greatest star of west-ern movies?

It's like asking who was the best all-time boxing champion. It can stir up a storm of argument among advocates of Bronco Billy Anderson, Bill Hart, Tim McCoy, Buck Jones, Hoot Gibson, and others.

There remains a hard core of Bob Steele fans who claim their hero was the best rider, actor, fighter and the fastest draw of them all. They will be pleased to know that after 40 years in films, Bob is just as hard-nosed and flint-eyed as ever.

He has never really left the movie business, though for quite a while it has left him. Right now he is appearing in a pair of westerns for producer Alex Gordon, doing a brief role in The Bounty Killer and a full-scale villain in Requiem for a Gunfighter.

"I've been billing people for 30 years," he grinned. "When you're not doing your own scenes of films, you get heavies to do. That's all right with me. You can get a lot of character into a heavy, and that makes the greatest star of west-ern movies."

BORN IN OREGON

Bob (real name: Robert Bradbury) was born in Pendleton, Ore., 57 years ago, appeared in vaudeville with his parents, but spent much of his early youth on ranches in Oregon and Washington. When his father became a Hollywood director, Bob started acting in outdoor films.

He became the star of western series and made 186 films over a 20-year period.

Bob still presents a striking figure with his narrow hips, broad shoulders and barrel chest. A recent attack of bursitis interrupted his pushups, so he has lost seven pounds of muscle, down to 150. But the ailment has gone away and he plans to return to his fighting weight.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carven, Sports Editor

For the past two weeks I've been bending an ear to what I thought were the wild fantasies of two doughty musky hunters—both members of this newspaper tribe—and if what they tell me is true, the whale that used Jonah for a chaser, is a piker in comparison.

They told me hackle-raising stories of a pair of man-chasing muskies, one ruling the musical roost up around Campbellford way, the other presiding over the piscatorial domain of a river-fed lake a few miles north of the city.

The funny part is I checked on both stories and except for a few changes in dimension their yarns carry a large modicum of truth.

The Campbellford story of the famous "Moby Dick" of the Trent-Crowe rivers is probably "old hat" to veteran muskie mongers. And Old Moby has either extended his empire or he has a twin brother who has muscled in on his territory north of the city.

Their eyes dilate and their faces whiten as they tell of the experiences they've had with this Clay-Liston duo of the musky tribe.

"Catch them? Th'ell with that," they chorus, "we wouldn't touch 'em with a ten-foot pole."

They have something in common. Both Moby Dick and Moby Don boast approximately the same length from six to seven feet—and the same weight—up to 90 pounds. Both are tough, ferocious, and afraid of nothing. A man and boat is something to get rid of: man-made bait is something to toy with. They've got heads as big as buckets, eyes that glare murder and teeth that can strip a half mile of solid hooks as clean as you would a chicken bone.

The Campbellford monster has been around since 1948, it is claimed—and a recent magazine article stated he has a price of $100 on his head. In fact so has any other muskie that is six feet and 70 pounds plus.

"Dick" was hooked once and won out after a five hour battle while spotlighted with several searchlights from bootside spectators who gathered to watch the duel.

The northern "Moby" is no less timid," says my informant. "An American friend hooked him once on a 45-pounds test line with three sets of treble steel hooks. The fish dragged him up and down the river just for the hell of it, then leaped out of the water and stripped the hooks as clean as a pin."

"An hour later," the story goes, "the Moby sidled up to the boat like a big log and flipped its tail in a Can-Can gesture of derision."

A more recent story is that a muskie hunter on the prowl for big game had scarcely gotten his bait ready when the big Moby suddenly appeared from the depths, turned sideways and slapped the boat with two terrific swipes of a powerful tail. "It sounded like two gunshots," said the teller. "The boat sprung a leak and that was the day for the would-be hunter."

This newspaper's vice-president in charge of muskie fishing also told me that one brave hunter actually brought the northern Moby alongside. He saw a head at least a foot long emerge from the surface—and that was enough for him. He tossed tackle, bait and everything away and scuttled for shore.

Both shudder when they think what will happen if either of the "Mobys" are hooked. "He'd wreck anything up to a 60-foot schooner and you'd need a machine gun to quieten him."

I haven't met anybody yet who wants to go swimming in Moby waters and possibly play Jonah to these miniature whales. Personally I prefer the quietness and solitude of the Saturday evening bath.

I do not know if these monsters will attack a man, as there is the case of a young lady down Cornwall way who dangled her rod-clasped bemalled feet in the water and had her little plankies badly mauled by a curious muskie.

Nor do I believe they are as ferocious as the famous giant pike of northern England, which, a British outdoors writer claims, have been known to grab a small fawn by the nose while it was drinking and drag it into the water.

The only way I can suggest to capture the Mobys is by miniature submarine or using minnows tipped with nuclear warheads.

Crozier Hottest Goalie In League

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Roger Crozier, Detroit Red Wing coach Sid Abel's big gamble, has become the hottest goalie in the National Hockey League.

Official NHL statistics released today reflect Crozier's steady playing since his rather shaky season start when he let in 11 goals in three games.

He has been beaten only three times in the last five games and was instrumental in Detroit's current six - game unbeaten streak which has lifted them into a three-way tie in NHL standings with Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens.

Crozier leads goaltenders with an average of 1.75 goals against in eight games and is also shutout leader with three.

The sharpest changes in the individual scoring race were caused by the 12-goal performance of Toronto's big line of Frank Mahovlich, Andy Bathgate and rookie Ron Ellis.

Mahovlich picked up five points to move from fourth a week ago to second place with four goals and seven assists in 11 points. Stan Mikita of Chicago remains individual leader, picking up a goal and two assists to leave him on top with 15 points on four goals and his league-leading 11 assists.

Bathgate recovered his high-scoring ways, picking up two goals and four assists in the week to put him in third spot with 10 points. A week ago he was tied for 11th. Ellis had three goals and an assist.

Chicago's Bobby Hull scored twice and had two assists, lifting him to a tie for fourth place with Toronto's Kent Douglas from a seventh-place spot a week ago. Hull has nine points, including his league - leading seven goals. Doug has slowed down from his sizzling pace set in the first few games. He picked up a goal and his nine points are made up of a goal and eight assists.

Dickie Duff has also scored any points after joining Toronto from Montreal but he's tied with Mikita with 28 minutes as league bad man although he has started only five games to Mikita's eight.

Sword Over Wirkowski's Head?

They Call Lou Angotti

Rangers Hot-Shot Rookie

NEW YORK (AP)—New York which has had less than its share of ice hockey heroes in recent years, is warming up to a hot-shot rookie with a lunging-type style. He has helped the Rangers get off to an unexpectedly fast start in the National Hockey League.

He's Lou Angotti, a dark-haired, 26 year - old forward from Toronto.

Because he is of Italian descent, Angotti reminds some of leapin' Louie Fontinato, a Ranger defence favorite of a few years ago. Only the new Louie is a player with a low-striding skating pattern that seems to have thoroughly confused the opposition.

The Rangers were picked to finish last in the six-team circuit in most pre-season polls and coach Red Sullivan insists Angotti is among those responsible for the 3-3-3 record which puts his charges only two points out of first place.

"He's been a most pleasant surprise so far," Sullivan said Monday, "and he certainly seems to have the crowd with him. I haven't seen a first-year man become a favorite so quickly."

So far, Louie has forged opposing forwards and defencemen into numerous errors while scoring three goals himself.

Angotti, obtained from Rochester of the American League last June, didn't turn pro until two years ago because he shot for a bachelor of science degree at Michigan Tech. He played three years of varsity hockey at the Houghton, Mich., school, scoring 29 goals and being named to the first college all-American team in his final season.

TORONTO (CP) — Lew Hayman, managing director of Toronto Argonauts, said Monday no decision on the fate of Argo coach Nobby Wirkowski will be made until the board of directors can be brought together for a meeting sometime next week.

Charles Burns, one of the directors, is out of the country at present and will return Friday, Hayman said.

Speculation has surrounded a possible replacement in the head coaching post since Argos finished a dismal 1964 season in the Eastern Football Conference Saturday with a 36-0 drubbing at the hands of Ottawa Rough Riders. Toronto won four games and lost 10 during the 14-game schedule this year.

Hayman, said he has not talked to Frank (Pop) Ivy, former coach of Edmonton Eskimos who now lives in the United States, and to the best of his knowledge no other Argonaut director has approached Ivy either.

Other speculation that Toronto might approach Ottawa coach Frank Clair or Bud Grant head coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, is also being discounted here because under Canadian Football League rules, Argos would first have to obtain permission from Ottawa or Winnipeg to discuss a move with the coaches.

Meanwhile, Wirkowski and his assistants, Cliff Speegle and Jimmy Dunn, spent the day packing away their coaching gear at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium.

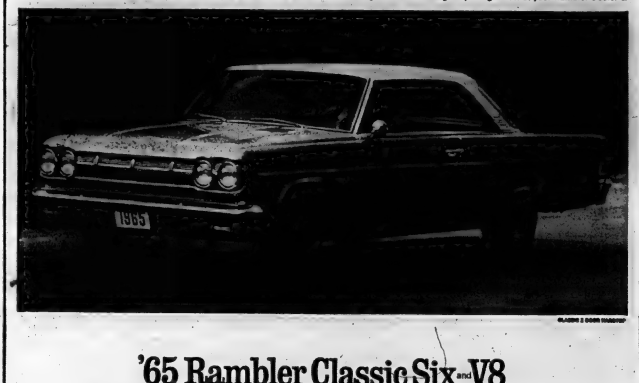
The Public Works powerhouse lost no time in displaying their scoring punch as the city Inter-departmental Hockey League opened the 1964-65 schedule here last night.

Works thumped the Ontario Intelligencer 15-3 in one of two games played.



In the other contest, Public Utilities shaded the Police Department by a 4-2 count.

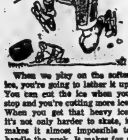
GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE



I've often heard players say they like the ice in Detroit's Olympia better than any rink in the National Hockey League. Yet it'll surprise some to know that the ice is little more than a quarter of an inch thick.

Of course, this is true in most major arenas, where they have eight to 12 miles of pipe that carries the freezing solution buried in the cement floor.

However, Red Tonkin, Olympia superintendent, has a knack of giving us a real good, hard surface. Yet it isn't chippy. It has a freer flow, he makes it easier to skate and definitely makes for a faster game.

Maybe he has learned the knack of shaving the ice just so with his automated scraper that also floods the ice at the same time.

It also is a matter of the temperature he maintains. Because when we come in for a game in the middle of an ice show run, the temperature definitely is higher. The ice is softer so the skaters can do their spinning routines.

When we play on the softer ice, you're going to lather it up. You can cut the ice when you stop and you're cutting more ice. When you get that heavy ice, it's not only harder to skate, it makes it almost impossible to handle the puck. It makes for a bad game.

They're getting better at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens. There were times when the ice there was chippy. You'd dig in and throw out a chunk three or four inches long. Then you'd have bare concrete.

I think the reduction in the number of trains has improved the ice at Boston Gardens. The rink is on the floor above the North Station. They had little ripples in the ice from the vibrations caused by the trains. The shaking also brought down dust flamenta.

Montreal has gold ice. I think one reason is because of the temperature of the city itself. They could open the door and freeze the ice half the time. However, the big crowds they have there raises the temperature and they have to turn up the freezing unit. They have thicker ice there, too.

Nicholson Wins 'B' Grid Title

Nicholson Catholic College captured the Bay of Quinte OSSAA "B" senior football championship yesterday by dumping Campbellford 22-6.

The victory was Nicholson's fifth in succession and advanced the club into the Bay of Quinte district finals, against either Tweed or Stirling.

A sudden-death championship game will be played on Wednesday.

Teams in the southern division were O.S.D., Albert College, Nicholson C.C. and Campbellford. The northern division consisted of Norwood, Tweed, Stirling, Marmora and Centre Hastings.

Nicholson's scoring power was well distributed yesterday against Campbellford, with three players scoring touch downs. The majors went to Jim Bonar, Frank Farrell and Mike Cook. Farrell added the other four points with a convert and a field goal.

LONDON (CP)—Manchester United, the club which lost eight of its star players in the 1958 Munich air crash, is emerging again as the greatest force in English soccer.

Before the disaster, the youthful, red-shirted United team was known throughout the soccer world as the "Busby Babes"—a tribute to manager Matt Busby.

They had won the English League championship in 1956 and 1957, and were being strongly tipped to become the first English winners of Europe's glamor tourney—The European Cup. Then came the disastrous February day in 1958 which tore the heart out of the great Manchester United side.

United struggled bravely to the final of the English Football Association cup that year but, almost inevitably, was injured at Munich, had the pain of first of rebuilding and had tired team.

First signs of a revival occurred at the end of the 1962-63 season when United reached the English Cup Then last season it looked as though they would go all the way. United had travelled much of its old glory and in fact was on top of the first division. It took over the pace setter last Saturday by beating reigning champion Liverpool 2-0 to knock Chelsea off the top rung where it had been since the end of August. The "Red Devils" from Manchester have dropped only one point in their last ten matches.

Inspiring the club in its comeback is Scottish international Denis Law, whom United bought from Torino of the Italian League in 1962 for a reported fee of $110,000

The little fair-haired inside forward shot into brilliant form recently when he scored 10 goals in a fantastic 11 days.

Law didn't score last Saturday, but he was the star performer in Manchester a victory over Liverpool.

Reported to be Britain's highest paid soccer star, he is guaranteed about $150 a week plus extra bonuses if his team does well.

The Manchester club should consolidate its positions at the top next Saturday with a home win over Sheffield Wednesday.

Will Press For MLG Extension

TORONTO (CP) — Maple Leaf Gardens Limited intends to "reapply to the authorities for permission to proceed with its extension to the Gardens," president C. Stafford Smythe said Monday in the company's annual report.

Approval earlier had been obtained from city council, but later was rejected by the provincial legislature.

Th. Gardens management announced last year it wanted to spend $2,000,000 — more than the depression-built sports palace cost originally — to provide an additional 4,000 seats by erecting balconies over a couple of streets in a busy sector of mid-town, Toronto. The Gardens now seats 13,715 persons and has been sold out for every National Hockey League game since 1947.

Before the Gardens can carry out its plan, the Ontario government must pass a special bill.

Harold Ballard, executive vice-president of the Gardens, said the application will be made after the civic elections here next month.

"We want those 4,000 seats and we can't hang the people from heaven," Ballard said. The Gardens was willing to make any practical alterations necessary to meet the original concept of the extension, although an overhang would still be necessary.

Stamps, Riders On Spot

REGINA (CP) — Calgary Stampeders will be reminded of another year ago another West ern Football Conference semi final Saturday when they move into Taylor Field to meet Saskatchewan Roughriders in the first game of the two-game total-point series.

Last year, Stampeders whipped Sask tchewan 35-9 in Calgary and went to Regina to wrap up the series for the right to meet B.C. Lions in the western final. They didn't recover count on the determination and fire of the Riders who won the game 29-12 and took the series 47-47.

It was Ron Lancaster the hot shot Saskatchewan quarterback who spelled disaster for the Stamp ders that year he was injured Oct. 6 in a game against Ottawa.

He returned Saturday, however, to lead the Riders over to a narrow 23-20 victory ver Ed Montone Baltimore in the last game of the season for the two teams.

The Tracks

GREENWOOD (CP) — Etmonia, chestnut daughter of Rico Monte, bobbled back to her barn Monday as trainer Frank Merrill examined it, shaking his head dubiously.

"It looks as if she looks as sore as a boil," said Merrill.

Minutes before, however, she had run away from her field to win the featured seventh race.

"She loves this track but she'll probably only run here once more then head for New York and the $25,000 added Firenze Handicap, Merrill said. "If fact, I just mailed the nomination blank."

The four-year-old filly is as sound as any trainer could want for horses. Her lameness is an act.

Her race proved the point. She came around the field on the outside with Paul Maxwell simply steering her, rolled past Royal Spirit and scored the wire three-and-a-quarter lengths in front.

It was Etmota's third victory in her last four outings. Last time out she finished second to Brother Leo at Woodbine.

MONTREAL (CP) — Ted Workman, owner of Montreal Alouettes, has until Nov. 27 to raise enough capital to convince the Canadian Football League his proposed stadium will be ready for the 1965 Grey Cup game, Alouette coach Jim Trimble said Monday night.

Trimble said there isn't much doubt the CFL will re-schedule the 1965 classic to another city unless they can get a firmer commitment from the youthful Alouette owner on his plans to build a 40,000-seat stadium in east end Ville d'Anjou by next fall.

"They need a year to plan for the Grey Cup game" said Trimble, "and they'll need to be convinced of our plans at their meeting in Toronto this month." The meeting on Nov. 27 comes on the eve of this year's Grey Cup classic.

The 1965 national final was awarded to Montreal last spring on the understanding that the stadium would be ready in time.

Trimble indicated that the possibility of Montreal losing next year's cup game were touch-and-go.

Workman went to New York Monday and conference in that he is there to seek public backing for the stadium "on behalf of management." He denied earlier Montreal reports that he was a member of a syndicate negotiating to buy the Alouettes outright.

Trimble said the CFL became disenchanted with the Alouette's stadium proposals because of "subsequent developments" following the awarding of the classic to the city.

The reference was to Workman's announcement last month that he needed more capital because of a change in plans.

Construction didn't start as scheduled during the summer because the Als decided to build the stadium parks underground, pushing the cost to $5,700,000.

Nationals Win Sixth

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's national hockey team scored the winning goal while one man short Monday, as they defeated Omaha Knights of the Central Professional League 2-1 before about 1,500 fans.

The win was the sixth for the Canadian team in eight starts. They have one loss and one tie.

Canada opened scoring early in the first period when Gary Aldcorn beat Omaha goalie Jean-Guy Morissette at the 7:13 mark on a pass from defenceman Paul Conclin.

While Roger Bourbonnais served a five-minute major penalty for highsticking, Omaha forward Norm Dennis tied the score at 9:03 on a pass from Bill McCreary and Norm Schmitz.

Canada scored the second period strong and while Ron Farnfield served a minor penalty, Ray Abbott scored what proved to be the winning goal at 8:36.

Low prices, with the introduction of new brand designs, we decided to discontinue the WINTER EXPRESS, which had proven so reliable for almost a decade. So many people asked for it, and so many good years combined to demand the WINTER EXPRESS for replacement purpose that we simply could not afford to discontinue it.

Now the WINTER EXPRESS is ... the "old fashioned" ... in tough to full production. Better still, on a special manufacturing offer, prices are as ALL-TIME LOW. Remember the cost of the tubes has already been removed, you pay only for materials and labor. The result ... GREAT SAVINGS for YOU

Youthful Track Star Barred

TORONTO (CP) — Brenda Mah, 11-year-old Toronto track star, who has proven in the past she belongs in a calibre of female athletes twice her size, will not be allowed to compete in the Canadian women's cross-country championship in Hamilton later this month.

Brenda ontran girls twice her size to capture the Ontario open women's cross - country title in Ottawa Saturday and placed second in the Quebec championship in Montreal the same afternoon.

However, the Women's Amateur Athletic Union has ruled that no girl under 14 years of age can compete in the Canadian championships—a rule that is printed on the Hamilton entry form.

Brenda, daughter of a Toronto high school physical education teacher, ran in a three-quarter-mile event Saturday in Montreal, finished second. Her suburban North York Track Club team-mate, Maureen Wilton, 20, placed third.

The girls were then rushed to the airport by Brenda's father and caught a flight to Ottawa where Brenda ran 1.3 miles in 20 minutes, 1.6 seconds to finish ahead of Penny Werthner of Ottawa. Maureen ran third.

Hockey Or Lacrosse?

OTTAWA (CP) — Two sports-minded members of Parliament have opened a battle into whether hockey or lacrosse should be Canada's national sport.

Last week Jack Roxburgh (L—Norfolk) introduced a bill that would declare hockey the national game and Robert Prittie (NDP — Burnaby-Richmond) is following now with one that would make lacrosse the legal national game.

Mr. Prittie admits his bill was a direct result of the move by Mr. Roxburgh, former president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

When doing research on his bill Mr. Roxburgh and the Commons law clerk expected to find a statute designating lacrosse as the national game. But there was none.

With tongue in cheek Mr. Prittie says this was an oversight on the part of the Fathers of Confederation.

In his bill Mr. Prittie says lacrosse was originated in this country and was played by the native Indians, and unlike other popular sports it was not imported.

ANNOUNCE TROPHY PLAN

TORONTO (CP) — The Bert Warwick Trophy, donated by the family of the late Canadian football pioneer, will be presented to the most valuable player in this year's Canadian intermediate final, Bill Fry of Toronto, registrar of the Canadian Rugby Union's intermediate committee, announced Monday. Warwick, who died last year in Edmonton at the age of 61, was a player, referee, coach and executive during a 45-year football career.

TORONTO (CP)—A grade school quarterback, exposed as a girl midway through her first and only football game, has decided to hang up her cleats in favor of a musical career.

Bonnie Silver, 13, won the Royal Conservatory of Music silver medal as the outstanding Grade 7 pianist in Ontario last year. She is currently studying at the conservatory, following in the footsteps of her father, Harvey Silver, a well - known Toronto pianist-arranger.

She had her first introduction to football a couple of years ago when she practiced tossing the pigskin around with her football - enthusiast brother, Lorne, 14.

One day last year, her teacher saw her throwing passes during recess and invited Bonnie to quarterback the team in a clutch game that afternoon.

HELMET HID HAIR

Her new teammates gave her a quick run-down on the plays, helped her tuck her long, hair up under a football helmet and she donned the uniform. She was quickly transformed into the team's new quarterback, George.

Bonnie tossed three touchdowns en route to a 20-0 triumph, but was forced to make a quick exit from the field at half time when the opposition found out she was a girl.

"I got tackled hard toward the end of the half," she said. "A long lock of my hair fell out of the helmet and the other team found out I was a girl. Boy, were they ever mad. They chased me and I ran for the dressing room. They didn't dare follow me into the girls' dressing room.

"I slipped into a skirt quickly and then came out to watch the rest of the game. They never knew who it was."

SIGN COACH

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds signed Frank Ocsak Monday to the coaching staff for the 1965 season. At the same time, President William O. DeWitt announced that present coaches Reggie Otero, Jim Turner and Ray Shore are being retained under new manager Dick Sisler.

Second Scoring Title

Sutherin Shatters Conference Record

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Tiger-Cats, winners of the Eastern Football Conference championship for the last four years, have seldom picked up individual honors on the way. But this year they have Don Sutherin.

The 23 - year - old defensive halfback, who missed half the 1963 season with injuries, returned to capture the 1964 scoring title, the second of his six-year EFC career and shattered a conference record in the process.

Sutherin's 96 points, 36 more than Moe Racine of Ottawa Rough Riders, included 15 field goals, eclipsing the mark of 12 reached by both Sutherin and Racine two years ago The Ottawa booter kicked 11 this year.

Sutherin also topped Racine in converts, 34 to 33, and was deep enough with 15 of his 20 unsuccessful field-goal tries to pick up single points. Only three of Racine's unsuccessful efforts went for singles.

Sutherin's place - kicking consistency—and the protection he gets from his teammates—showed up in another column of the EFC statistics for the season that ended last weekend. He missed only three converts in 37 tries, a record that hasn't been matched since Bobby Jack Oliver of Montreal Alouettes booted 34 in 36 attempts in 1963.

The Tiger-Cat veterans showed up well in two other categories, sharing the lead for pass interceptions with teammate Garney Henley and Bob O'Billovich of the Riders at six and finishing second behind Ted Page of Montreal in punt runbacks with 274 yards to Page's 428.

Offensively, Hamilton settled for the third place in rushing and the No. 2 passer and pass-receiver.

Ron Stewart and Dave Thelen of the second - place Rough Riders topped the rushers with 867 and 777 yards gained over the season. Art Baker of the Ticats was third at 726.

Russ Jackson of Ottawa piled up the biggest passing yardage, 3,156 from 118 completions in 230 attempts. Bernie Faloney, the Hamilton veteran, completed 106 of 221 tries for 1,941 yards. Eighteen of Jackson's passes went for touchdowns to 17 for Faloney.

Dick Shatto of Toronto Argonauts was the leading pass-receiver for the third year in a row, catching 52 for 825 yards and nine touchdowns. Hamilton veteran Tommy Grant caught 44 for 1,029 yards and seven touchdowns.

Joe Zeger of Hamilton was the most effective punter with an average of 42.8 yards and George Hughley of Toronto led in kickoff returns, running back 19 for 602 yards.

An oddity in the team statistics was that the last - place Toronto Argonauts picked up the most passing, 2,594, and yield the lowest passing yardage to their opponents, 2,140. The Argos, who missed the playoffs by four points and won only four of their 14 games, also picked up the most first downs, 262.

FORD'S OPERATION SET

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Whitey Ford of New York Yankees will undergo a shoulder operation Nov. 9 at St. Luke's Hospital in Houston, Tex., the club announced Monday. Ford's ailment was described as material blockage of his left shoulder.

The Gals Won't Ignore These Whistles

HAMILTON (CP) — Women invaded another formerly restricted area of the "man's world" Saturday when 25 young university co-eds and housewives attended the first course here for women hockey referees.

The girls, who now will officiate at intercollegiate girls' hockey games, had several reasons for their invasion in the referees' class.

"We got fed up with snickering fans who'd giggle when we fell," said Kay Vasara of the University of Toronto.

"Also, with their officiating, they spoiled the game for the girls."

Miss Vasara said that one strict rule male referees ignored is that no body checking is permitted in female hockey.

"They'd say 'what the heck's wrong with a little bump?' and they wouldn't call a penalty," she said.

Other girls were suspicious that male referees pay more attention to the girls than the game. One even suggested that the team on which a ref's girl friend played was better treated.

Co-eds from universities in Toronto, Hamilton, Kingston, Montreal and New York were taught the fundamentals by referee Hugh McLean, who has officiated in the National Hockey League, Wilmer Olympics and international tournaments.

That's balance!

The feel of that baseball bat standing straight as an arrow off his nose is the proudest sensation he's ever had. Perfect balance. And he did it. One day, he'll learn how very important balance is to the prosperity of his nation. He'll recognize that balanced trade means security, employment, a future to be happy about.

Balanced trade results from the realization that it is as vital to sell as many goods and services to the world as we buy from the world. It comes from businessmen working to open up and broaden overseas markets. It comes from Canadian manufacturers and workers taking deep pride in the quality and workmanship of their products, so that people abroad will look for things Canadian.

Balanced trade also comes from you, the Canadian consumer, making a point to look for products "Made in Canada". When you buy goods manufactured at home, you help our industry grow. You help create new jobs for people you care about. You help keep our living standards high. You help keep Ontario the Province of Opportunity.

Lively Western Influence in Leningrad

By JOHN BEST

LENINGRAD (CP) — Cradle of the Russian revolution and symbol of its ordeal under fire, Leningrad today wears a look of quiet contentment.

It used to be called Russia's window to Europe but the shade was drawn 47 years ago.

Nevertheless, Western influences is still buoyantly alive in this northern metropolis of 3,000,000 which looks toward Sweden across the Gulf of Finland and the Baltic Se..

You can detect it in the neon signs that spangle the edges of bustling Prospect Nevsky. It shows in the stylish hats worn by Leningrad women—"In Moscow you hardly ever see women wearing hats," said a visiting American housewife."

It is also suggested by the fact that Westerners fi:l more at home here than in most Soviet cities, though they can't explain precisely why.

To the foreign visitor it may seem absurd that the 1217 revolution, with its anti Western overtones, should have been hatched in the most Westernized of Russian cities instead of, say, Moscow which has more of a brooding and inscrutable flavor of the East.

SEAT OF POWER

Yet Leningrad—or Petrograd as the city was then called—almost had to be the focal point since it was the capital and hence seat of power.

As both an industrial centre and an important transportation hub, Leningrad plays a vital part in the Soviet economy.

"We take our economic problems very seriously," says Boris Feld, assistant secretary of the newspaper Leningrad Pravda. "We can't solve them by jokes."

But Leningrad citizens are not above making the occasional wry joke at the expense of its system. Such as this one now making the rounds:

As American, a Frenchman and a Russian leader were held up by bandits on a secluded road. The American gave in to threats and handed over $1,000. The Frenchman gave up 1,000,000 francs. The Russian wrote something on a piece of paper and handed it to the bandits, whereupon they fled. Asked what he had written, the Russian replied: "This is the path to communism."

Mischievous young Leningraders accost English-speaking tourists on the street (they seem able to spot a foreigner a block away) to tell them such stories. But there's no reason to believe the yarns reflect disloyalty; they're just jokes.

SOME SNOBBISHNESS

Leningrad citizens—those the foreigner is likely to meet on an official level—show a peculiar reluctance to admit that people here are better dressed than those in most other Russian cities, and that generally

Leningrad looks more attractive and prosperous.

They give the impression they don't want the word to get around, perhaps for fear that Moscow will get wind of it and do something to bring Leningrad into line.

They do, however, allow themselves the luxury of occasional snobbishness. The Leningrader, says Feld, is a "cultural man, with a love of his motherland, a man of quality."

"The cultural level is higher here than in Moscow," said my English-speaking guide Western artists find Leningrad audiences more sophisticated than Moscow audiences, she added. Leningraders also think the city's ballet is better than Moscow's famous Bolshoi.

Politically, the city is not so sophisticated.

Official literature lays great emphasis on the revolutionary past of Leningrad, founded by Peter the Great in 1703 at the mouth of the Neva River and named St. .Petersburg . (The name was changed to Petrograd in 1914 and to Leningrad in 1924.)

IGNORE EARLY REVOLT

"The Great October Revolution" of 1917—it occurred Oct. 25 under the old Julian calendar then in use in Russia but Nov. 7 under the Gregorian calendar since adopted—gets most of the historical spotlight.

That was the uprising that swept the provisional government of Alexander Kerensky out of power and installed Lenin's Bolsheviks in its place.

Only the occasional grudging reference is made to the February revolution of the same year which toppled the Russian monarchy. Yet far more Russian patriots paid with their lives in the first than in the second, which was really a Bolshevik coup d'etat and virtually bloodless.

Nor is anything ever said about Leon Trotsky, Lenin's close collaborator, who was killed by Stalinist agents in Mexico early in the Second World War.

Landmarks associated with the revolution are plentiful. They include the 1,050 - room Winter Palace, occupation of which capped the Bolshevik insurrection; the Smolny Institute, an elegant structure that was once a school for girls of noble birth but used by the Bolsheviks as their command post, and the Finland Station, where Lenin returned from exile in April, 1917, to take charge of the Bolshevik drive for power.

RELIC OF PAST

There are also landmarks of the city's pre - revolutionary past, such as the Astoria Hotel Once the haunt of Czarist army officers, its rooms still glitter with the opulence of a bygone era.

The room keys, big and heavy, are inscribed—for some reason in English — "Hotel Astoria St. Petersburg" and are engraved with an eagle symbol of Czarist Russia.

During the Second World War Leningrad gained fame as a beacon of resistance to German armies. For 900 days it was besieged. The Russians say 632,000 people starved or were killed.

Today, there is no sign of the wartime destruction. Whole streets and avenues have been laid out with new apartment blocks.

Ten miles from the city's centre, in a southwesterly direction, stands a simple obelisk. It marks the high-water point of the invaders' advance on Leningrad.

SOVIET CITY — Western influence is still alive in Leningrad, a Northern Russian city of 3,00,000 which looks towards Sweden across the Gulf of Finland and the Baltic Sea. Once called Russia's window to Europe before the shade was drawn 47 years ago, Leningrad plays a vital part in the Soviet economy as both an industrial centre and an important transportation hub. JOHNSON LANDSLIDE WINNER

President Sees 'Mandate For Unity'

Johnson Feasts As Goldwater Finally Concedes

'Bind up Our Wounds' Urges Election Winner

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)— President Lyndon B. Johnson in a joyous Texas-style reunion with his election running mate today, and asked all Americans to "bind up our wounds and to make this nation whole."

Vice-president-elect Hubert H. Humphrey and Mrs. Humphrey were to fly from Minneapolis, where they spent election night, for a huge mid-day barbecue at the LBJ ranch on the banks of the Pedernales River.

Riding the crest of votes that swamped Republican opponent Barry Goldwater, Johnson made as early-morning appearance at the municipal auditorium in nearby Austin.

The main note he sounded, in a voice hoarse and soft, was that "there are many more things in America that unite us than divide us."

He took the opportunity to praise his "happy warrior" running mate as a self-starting candidate who stumped 40 states and "made no mistakes."

"I know that this is more than a victory of party or person. It is a tribute to the program that was begun by the late beloved president, John F. Kennedy . . . a program that he carried on until he was taken from us."

He asked Americans to "face the world as one" and called the election result "a mandate for unity, for a government that serves no special interest—no business government, no labor government."

"I do not know what happened in every hamlet or voting box in America today, but I think I discovered what happened in all America today.

"I don't think there has ever been so many people saying so many things alike on decision day. And with that understanding and with the help of all of them we will be on our way to achieve peace in our time and our people."

Elected overwhelmingly and in his own right, Johnson pledged his administration "will be a government that provides equal opportunity for all and special privileges for none. It is a command to build on those principles and to move forward toward peace and a better life for all of our people . . . This is to be our work.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — His Conservative challenge crushed, his political future clouded, Senator Barry Goldwater clung to the privacy of his home early today before emerging to face the world after a landslide election loss to president Johnson.

Later, the Republican nominee for president came to a posh desert resort to read a telegram of congratulation he wired to Johnson.

He sent his gratitude to the voters who favored his cause, "all of you across this nation. . . .

"Congratulations on your victory," he wired Johnson.

"I will help you in any way I can toward achieving a growing and better America and a secure and dignified peace.

"The role of the Republican party will remain in that temper, but it also remains in the party of the opposition when the opposition is called for.

"There is much to be done in Viet Nam, Cuba, the problem of law and order in this country and a productive economy.

"Communism remains the number one obstacle of peace and I know all America will join with you in an honest solution of these problems," Goldwater said.

Goldwater went, to bed Tuesday night as the size of the landslide mounted. Defying tradition, he chose not to concede.

But his campaign director, Denison Kitchel, went to the brink of concession.

"It doesn't look like we're going to win this first round," he said. "We have to wait for four years but we're going to get this government back where it belongs."

Kitchel was among the top aides Goldwater summoned to his home today to talk about the defeat—and decide what to say about it.

As the size of the landslide mounted Tuesday night, crowds gathered at a desert resort a mile from the Goldwater home, hoping to see him come to the spot where he would make a statement.

At first, press secretary Paul Wagner said Goldwater planned to withhold a statement until 60 per cent of the returns were

Supply Debate Rolls On

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP)—The French network of the CBC was accused of spreading subversive ideas and of indecency in the Commons Tuesday by two Quebec MPs.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said the government should purge Radio-Canada of supervisory personnel who fill the airwaves with Communist, socialist, separatist and terrorist ideas.

Theogene Ricard (PC—St. Hyacinthe-Bagot) said some Radio-Canada dramas are "absolutely indecent . . . an invitation to misbehave."

They spoke as debate on a $740,000,000 interim supply measure rolled on for the eighth straight day. The resolution preceding the bill was passed just before adjournment and today debate continues on second reading stage.

Unless the bill is passed within a week, the government will be unable to pay ordinary expenses and a general election would become virtually inevitable.

Most of Tuesday's speakers were Conservatives, who ranged over such issues as the flag, federal - provincial relations, bilingualism and broadcasting.

Mr. Caouette said Radio-Canada should reflect Canada as it really is, but instead disproportionately gives time to subversive elements in news and public affairs programs.

Mr. Ricard said pro-Liberal slanting of news and commentaries and political patronage are rampant at Radio-Canada.

John Turner (L—Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George) accused the Conservatives of carrying on a filibuster, or obstruction. He said 76 of the 182 sitting days this session have been spent discussing supply and pointedly estimates. Entering supply bills alone had consumed 26 days, compared with 4 bills of 22 days in the nine previous sessions.

Robert C. Coates (PC—Cumberland) said it is difficult to say how the country would vote if an election were held tomorrow.

There were too many parties in the Commons and the provincial governments were extracting too much power from the Liberals.

Few Outraged Cries Over Disbandment of 58 Units

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Defence Minister Paul Hellyer looked 58 major militia units into virtual oblivion Tuesday but his announcement, overshadowed by the United States presidential election, drew few outraged cries. More may turn up when election excitement dies down.

Among the best-known regiments to go on the "inactive list" —that means they can be reactivated without a naming proceedure, but otherwise they are disbanded—are the Irish Regiment of Toronto and the Winnipeg Grenadiers. both won high honors in two world wars.

Mr. Hellyer ordered reorganization of the reserve army as part of the government's economy move to cut defence spending. In another statement, he announced that five naval reserve units will close.

Other militia units will be amalgamated and some companies of regiments will be relocated. All militia group headquarters and manning depots are also being eliminated.

The Irish, who wore their green bonnets in face of World War service in Italy, Holland and Belgium, carry 22 honors from the First and Second World Wars on their regimental colors.

These include Ypres, Vimy, Amiens, Liri Valley, Gothic

Robarts Critical Of Que.

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Robarts of Ontario said Monday that Quebec emphasis on provincial independence, if taken to the extreme, would lead to separatism.

"I am . . . convinced that French - speaking Canadians must accept the primacy of the national government in our federal system," Mr. Robarts said.

The premier was speaking to about 750 delegates attending a final-day banquet of the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association's annual meeting.

Departing from his usual conservative approach to national unity, Mr. Robarts named Quebec throughout his address, stating that he recognized Quebec's desire to preserve its language, customs and culture.

"The survival of our country and its future development is also a matter of people—individual people who think of themselves as Canadians," he said.

Only In South Is Democratic Tide Checked

LBJ Has Record Edge Over GOP Opponent

By CARMAN CUMMING

WASHINGTON (AP) — American voters gave Lyndon Baines Johnson a massive vote of confidence in Tuesday's election, decisively rejecting the Republican right wing of Senator Barry Goldwater.

Johnson's triumph built up quickly in the east and middle south as the polls closed there, then picked up momentum as it swept through the Republican middle west, the prairie and mountain states and on into California.

Only in the south, where he lost five states — apparently on the racial issue — was Johnson's steamroller seriously hampered.

He also appeared to have lost Arizona, Goldwater's home state.

In New England he carried Vermont, which had never before gone for a Democratic presidential candidate, and Maine, which had done so only once before, in 1912.

It was the greatest presidential victory of modern times—and the largest ever in terms of votes rolled up and margin over his opponent.

HAD 486 VOTES

With 270 electoral votes needed to win, the president had collected 486 from 44 states and the District of Columbia, which was voting in a presidential election for the first time.

Goldwater had won five states — Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina — with 67 electoral votes and led in one other state with five electoral votes.

The landslide victory that Johnson had pleaded and fought for apparently carried over into the congressional races to some extent, promising a smoother path for the president's legislative plans.

Early today, the Democrats seemed to be strengthening their control of the House of Representatives while at the same time holding on to their margin in the Senate.

REFUSED CHOICE

Goldwater had offered the voters a choice, not an echo." They turned down the choice.

In effect, they turned down Goldwater's plan to reverse the Democratic administration's policy of seeking more avenues of contact with the Communist world.

They rejected his view that racial integration cannot be promoted by legislative acts such as the Civil Rights Act passed earlier this year.

And they turned down his thesis that the federal government is getting too powerful and that some of that power should be turned back to the states.

The liberal tone of the victory was heightened by the fact that the new vice-president-elect, Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, is considered one of the country's leading liberals.

Relief Voiced by World Leaders Over Defeat of Barry Goldwater

By REUTERS

The world appeared in unusual agreement today that the American people had made the "right choice" in overwhelmingly returning Lyndon B. Johnson as president of the United States.

In general, many world leaders expressed relief that Republican candidate Barry Goldwater and his extreme right-wing followers didn't make it to the white House.

The only voice of dissent at the results came from Nationalist China where officials privately expressed disappointment at the Republican senator's defeat.

Many Nati-nalist Chinese favored Goldwater because they felt the Chiang Kai-shek regime might have had a freer hand to strike against Communist China if U.S. voters had put in a Republican administration.

While Russian and other Eastern European officials said they welcomed the U.S. choice, Western leaders saw the results as strengthening free world unity when a continued international detente.

Governments round the world cabled Johnson congratulations.

Pope Paul wished Johnson "as abundance of heavenly blessings" in a message of good wishes.

Radio Moscow broadcast to the Russian people that an "overwhelming majority of Americans have resolutely rejected the program of the leader of ultra-right forces, Senator Goldwater, the implementation of which would have been fraught with extremely dangerous consequences."

The London Evening News said the American people had spoken "not only for America but for millions who know that upon the outcome their whole way of life, or even their very lives, might depend."

Chinese Delegation Will Attend Moscow Anniversary Celebration

MOSCOW (Reuters) — China announced tonight Premier Chou En-lai will head a seven man delegation of the Chinese Communist party and government to the Moscow celebrations of the Soviet revolution anniversary Nov. 7.

A brief announcement in Peking gave the names of the delegation and said it was going to Moscow at the invitation of the Soviet Communist party and government.

No date was given for the departure of the Chinese

The implications of former premier Khrushchev's removal from power and the Soviet-Chinese ideological problems were certain to be the major items for any discussions had here, observers here said.

It was learned the sending of the Chinese mission was the direct result of Khrushchev's removal. It is widely said here that Sino - Soviet relations reached a new low during the last months of his regime and that this was one reason for his removal.

(Hungarian Premier Janos Kadar will head the Hungarian delegation, the Hungarian news agency MTI said.

(A Warsaw announcement said the Polish Communist party leader, Wladyslaw Gomulka, would head the Polish delegation.

(The East German news agency ADN said East German Communist Leader Walter Ulbricht would head a delegation including Premier Willi Stoph and Foreign Minister Lothar Bolz.)

Observers said it appeared the occasion would be turned into a summit meeting of Communist leaders.

HUMPHREY FOR VICE-PRESIDENT — Senator Hubert Humphrey from Minnesota, President Johnson's running mate in yesterday's U.S. elections, was chosen vice-president of the United States.

CNR Industrial Agent Sees Quinte Area Entering Period of Great Expansion

Addressing the regular weekly meeting of the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday, L. Durrant, Industrial Agent of the Bidean Area for the Canadian National Railways, told Kiwanians that he "believed the lakeshore between Oshawa and Cornwall is entering a period of industrial growth and expansion.

"As leaders of the community, (referring to Kiwanians), you can be of great assistance. As business men you are constantly in touch with others in such cities as Toronto, Montreal, New York and Chicago. "It is in those centres," he said, "that the decisions to establish a new plant is made. You can have an influence in these decisions."

Mr. Durrant stated that in 1961 it was announced that the Canadian National Railways would decentralize its operation, that day to day matters of the company would be dealt with on an area basis.

There are to be 18 of these areas across the country, he said.

Mr. Durrant said the past year has been a busy one in that it has been necessary for him to become familiar with some 20 communities, 16 counties and numerous townships.

The speaker said he was located in Belleville by the Industrial Development Branch to produce results and therefore had to work with industries seeking new plant locations and negotiate the installation of private sidings for those companies requiring this facility.

Mr. Durrant predicted that the next 15 years would be a period of growth in the population of the city and industrial expansion. The city of Belleville has recognized the trend of the area and last year established an Industrial Commission which is composed of local business men.

CITIZENS CAN HELP

Mr. Durrant stated that citizens could be of great assistance to the Industrial Commission by being a booster for your city. He urged members during their telephone conversations and correspondence to tell their contacts what a nice place Belleville is in which to work and live.

The speaker went on to say that after the very successful railway week in June, "I think that both the city and the railway are now much more aware of the impact that one has on the other.

He said "while it is certainly our intention to keep Belleville and grow with this city, you can see some of our proposals for the physical and upgrading of our plant and equipment."

Plans are now underway for a new Express Freight Terminal which may be constructed in 1965 "as the needs and of the station. Buildings at the station are receiving a face lifting. Work is presently underway which consists of rebuilding and extending the yard office.

Mr. Durrant said that phase four in the redevelopment of the CNR property in Belleville may see the construction of a modern two-storey Area Headquarters building. He said the construction of this building will be followed by the demolition of such buildings as the three-storey converted tea house and the building immediately to the west of the station.

In closing Mr. Durrant said he "forecasts a very prosperous future both for the city and the Bidean Area of the CNR which serves it; based on full cooperation, that a great effort and commitment is required.

Forest Fires Blamed on Careless Hunters

It looks like a bad year for forest fires. Four fires were reported in the Tweed district alone by yesterday morning, four more were reported by this morning and several suspected fires are being checked. All are blamed on careless hunters.

The fires are bigger this month, too. Of the four reported since yesterday morning one in Aglesea township covers 50 acres, one in Madoc township covers 14 acres, one in Bedford township covers 25 acres and one in Marmora township covers about 10 acres.

The woods are tinder-dry, a Department of Lands and Forests official said today, and forest fire hazard is considered moderate to high. Total of brush fires this year now stands at 160 compared with 120 for the whole of last year.

It was decided by the local Chartered Accountants to promote the objectives of the Association, The Chartered Accountants of Eastern Ontario. The discussion which ensued brought forth opinions concerning public relations and dealt, among other things, with such matters as education and membership. Local groups which were given approval included joint meetings with other business or professional bodies, study groups and encouragement of attendance at meetings of the whole Association.

Messrs. Earle Elliott, R. Irving and Paul Fleming were appointed to head the local group and were given the authority to add others to their numbers as required.

Lack of Party Unity Cause Says Miller

LOCKPORT, N.Y. (AP)—Will iam E. Miller said lack of party unity contributed to the crushing defeat he and his Republican party running mate, Barry Goldwater, suffered in Thursday's U.S. election.

He said the refusal of many local and Republican candidates to support the national party ticket tended to weaken the Republican position from top to bottom."

Miller failed by 36,000 votes to carry his home county in Tuesday's election, losing Niagara County to Johnson-Humphrey ticket, 68,004 to 27,-906.

Miller represented the county, near the Canadian border, in Congress, for 14 years.

However, Miller, vice - presidential nominee, said he would make no official statement on President Johnson's landslide victory Tuesday until after word from Goldwater, the presidential candidate.

Miller said he talked by telephone with Goldwater Tuesday night and they agreed not to comment until Goldwater had an opportunity to "analyze the vote."

Goldwater was expected to issue a statement about noon EST, Miller said.

As aide said Miller a U.S congressman who did not seek re-election in the House of Representatives, would commence briefly and then fly to his home in Bethesda, Md.

Johnson Likely to Plunge Into Global Review of U. S. Foreign Policy in New Year

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP — The election behind him, President Johnson is to plunge into a global review of U.S. foreign policy in the next few days.

The war in South Viet Nam and a dangerous and growing crisis in the Atlantic alliance are his first concerns.

This policy review could reshape the pattern of U.S. relations with the European allies according to present thinking of administration policy makers, because of the disarray of NATO. It may also bring about a revision of Johnson's plans to make a start on foreign travel and personal summit - level diplomacy in the immediate future.

It was learned several weeks ago that the president hoped to address a NATO meeting in Europe and talk with French Premier de Gaulle before the year ends. Both are before the end of the year. His chief advisers now believe the pressing domestic duties of his trip should be delayed until next year. But the final word is up to Johnson himself.

The president is scheduled to meet here in a month or six weeks with the new British prime minister, Harold Wilson. Meanwhile, some consideration is being given to dispatching a special emissary abroad to take the White House look at European developments.

In a few days Johnson is expected to name a new Secretary of State to succeed Dean Rusk. Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara also is being mentioned for a change.

SEEN AS MANDATE

Johnson's triumph at the polls Tuesday was interpreted by administration officials as a mandate to carry on the basic lines of established bipartisan U.S. foreign policy and to improve relations with friends and reduce the risks of nuclear war.

Johnson's campaign and victories—among them the Kremlin shakeup last month and Wilson's recent election—were said to require decisions adapting basic policy to new U.S. initiatives.

Persons close to Johnson also regard the election outcome as vitally important to him and him in dealing with foreign governments. Not only has it provided evidence of widespread support for his general policies in the past three years, but it has also ended his temporary status as a successor to the late John F. Kennedy.

The president is said to be deeply concerned about taking whatever steps he can to help build Western unity as far as that may be possible. But there is little hope here that de Gaulle, whom officials regard as the central figure in the present turmoil over Western Europe's future, can be persuaded to co-operate.

TOP CONCERN

The war in South Viet Nam is a source of concern in the administration for two reasons. One is the new and new ways, if any exist, of moving toward a successful conclusion which would establish peace and security in Southeast Asia against Communist subversion. The other is a belief that North Viet Nam and Communist China may misjudge American decisions themselves on whether to intensify their efforts in the belief that officials are split and take over the area.

Related to this situation, but on a more distant plane, are the change in Kremlin leadership with the ouster of Premier Khrushchev last month, China's entry into the nuclear arms race and manoeuvres by Moscow and Peking to reduce the rift between them.

ELECTED GOVERNOR

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) Roberto Sanchez Vilella was elected governor of this U.S. island commonwealth Tuesday to succeed Luis Munoz Marin, retiring after 16 years. Sanchez, a 51-year-old civil engineer and Munoz' closest aide for two decades, was the governor's handpicked choice. His victory means the popular Democratic party will extend its rule to 20 straight years.

Auxiliary Lodge of Elks Formed in City

On Thursday of last week Supreme Honored Royal Lady Beatrice E. Holdstock of the Order of the Royal Purple of Canada visited Belleville for her official visit. Lady Holdstock's home lodge is in Weyburn, Sask., and her Belleville stop was only one on a trip that is taking her from coast to coast visiting the 226 Lodges of the Order.

The Order of the Royal Purple is the Auxiliary of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of Canada and has had an active lodge in Belleville for several years.

On Sunday Lady Holdstock accomplished the incredible feat of initiating a Lodge of the Order of the Royal Purple in Belleville after only three days of preparation.

OFFICERS INSTALLED

The Ladies of the new Lodge held their election of officers immediately following initiation and the following officers were installed.

Honored Royal Lady — Ruth Gordon; Associate Royal Lady — Ina Dulmage; Loyal Royal Lady — Rita Francis; Lecturer — Gertie Genova Brennan; secretary — Edna Hoelke; treasurer — Earla White; trustees — Mrs. Joyce Clarke; chaplain — Ann Symons; conductress — Gloria Bonisteel; assistant conductress — Sine; outer guard — Elsie Gilbert; pianist — Zella Dixon.

Following the installation D.D.G.E.R. Keith Gordon, Grand Organizer Dick Graham and Exalted Ruler Jim Brennan congratulated the Ladies and expressed their hopes for the future achievements of the two Lodges.

Ohio Senate Race Still A Toss-Up

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Republican Robert Taft, Jr., and Democrat Stephen M. Young battled toward a cliff-hanging finish today for Young's U.S. Senate seat even as president Johnson rolled up a record landslide in Ohio's election.

First Taft, 47, forgot ahead to a comfortable 100,000 major ity, then the Democrat made a overtook him with an avalanche of votes from Cleveland, his home town.

With 93 per cent of the vote count reported, the outcome in the race was still in doubt and cloudy. First, the Ohio state secretary's office, tabulating returns, reported Taft with a lead by 2,000. Then on the basis of returns from 12,970 of the states 13,426 polling places, Taft was back ahead by 2,000.

The Network Election Service, reporting on 12,970 polling places, had Taft ahead by 39,-000.

Then the NES put Young back ahead 1,833,450 to 1,816,721 on the basis of 13,200 precincts.

MAY BE RECOUNT

The complex election probably will lead to a recount regardless of the unofficial vote count. Young left for Washington not knowing whether he won or not, an aide said.

Johnson rolled up a record in a presidential race in Ohio by mounting a majority of more than 800,000 over Barry Goldwater, the Republican nominee. Four years ago, Republican Richard Nixon won by only 272,000 edge in the state.

Young, 70, accused Taft of riding on his father's name. a magic one in Ohio politics. The late U.S. Senator Robert A. Taft was known as Mr. Republican and the Tafts have a 105-year political history in the state. Taft's grandfather was President William Howard Taft.

Taft, however, backed Goldwater and the rest of the Republican ticket, insisted he had created his own image in the state.

Young rested his case on what he called his almost perfect record of support for the Kennedy - Johnson administration.

Robert E. Sweeney, Cleveland Democrat, was top Republican Rep. Oliver P. Bolton, 47, of Mentor, in the race for Taft's U.S. congressman - at-large seat.

IN CONTROL of the Q.E.M.O. radio net dropped over Hastings and Prince Edward counties Tuesday nights, Q.E.M.O. volunteer Arnold Duke logs contacts and volunteer Wally Clarke runs the control transmitter at Q.E.M.O. headquarters in Belleville. All Q.E.M.O. stations go on the air for an exercise Tuesday evenings.

13 Radio Stations Covering Two Counties Hold Exercise

A radio net drops over Hastings and Prince Edward counties Tuesday nights, to link 13 radio stations operated by the Quinte Emergency Measures Organization. The 13 stations, including a "control" station at Belleville's Number One Fire Station on Dundas St., are maintained by the organization for emergency communications. Between them they link all urban centres in the two counties north to Highway Seven. A station on Bancroft, in the north end of the county, is planned for the future.

The Tuesday night net is a training exercise, in which operators (all licensed), are familiarized with their equipment and with each other. Starting on the air at 7 p.m., the exercise normally lasts a half hour. For two weeks past however, and one week to come, the regular exercises have been lengthened to one hour per week for extra training.

Two channels are used for the exercise, usually one by stations north of Highway 401, and the other by stations south of the highway. An extra transmitter and receiver available at Q.E.M.O. headquarters in Belleville would allow ham radio operators to tie in to the net on different frequencies, in case of emergency. Two of the 13 stations now in use are mobile, one in Q.E.M.O. coordinator Col. Angus Duffy's car, the other in communications officer Ray Lancaster's car. Both vehicles are used in most exercises. Ten of the remaining 11 sets could be mounted in vehicles and used as mobile units if required. Only the control station in Belleville is fixed in place.

Use of the Q.E.M.O. radio network, and the value of the exercises are not restricted to time of war, Col. Duffy points out. The radio could also be of use in case of natural disaster, such as Hurricane Hazel in 1956, or failure of telephone and telegraph communications for any reason.

Aide to Banks Pleads Guilty To Assault

MONTREAL (CP) — An aide of deposed Maritime Union head Hal Banks pleaded guilty Tuesday to conspiracy to assault charges and was held for sentence Friday.

The surprise plea was entered on behalf of Eldon (Jack) Richardson, 38, accused with others of conspiring to beat up Capt. Henry Walsh in Owen Sound in 1957.

Richardson was a lieutenant of Banks, former head of the Seafarers International Union of Canada (Ind.), who jumped his $25,000 bail pending an unsuccessful appeal of a five-year prison term on the same conspiracy charge.

Richardson has been in jail here since the cancellation of his $2,000 bail Oct. 5. In charging the plea, defence lawyers referred to the case of co-accused Paul Gerol who recently received a one-year sentence after pleading guilty.

The maximum penalty is 14 years in prison, but the defence sought only an additional 10 months in jail arguing Richardson was less implicated than Gerol.

Judge Emile Trottier set sentence for Friday, saying he wished to examine the matter carefully and present a written report on the sentence.

Printers Don't Want Work With 'Strikebreakers'

TORONTO (CP)—Robert McCormack, president of Toronto Local 91 of the International Typographical Union, told a television interviewer he would not say "categorically now" that refusal to work with "strikebreakers" would be a union condition in settlement of the Toronto newspaper strike.

Appearing Monday night on a Toronto CBC program, Mr. McCormack noted that the ITU's international president, Elmer Brown, has said that members of the union "don't work with strikebreakers."

"Are you saying that that's a condition here?" he was asked.

"No, I'm not saying that categorically now," he replied. "But I'm sure that the vast majority of our members wouldn't want to work with those people."

The Star, Telegram and Globe and Mail have continued to publish since 600 union members walked out July 9.

Mr. McCormack was also asked by the CBC interviewer if he thinks a reduction in work forces at the newspapers could be agreed upon "over a phased period."

The CBC transcript of the interview gives his reply as:

"It's possible that there could be a reduction of the work force to what it was formerly because of the new equipment. I think that some people are jumping to the wrong conclusion in this respect. We don't really know the internal operation of these composing rooms. We do know that a lot of the work is being done outside. I would admit there will be a period of readjustment. How many less jobs there will be—I think that would be just a guess."

HITS AT MR. K

EAST BERLIN (Reuters) — Walter Ulbricht, East German Communist leader, said Tuesday night former premier Nikita Khrushchev had "violated and disregarded the collectivity" of the Soviet Communist Party leadership. In a speech, he said Khrushchev's contributions to world peace were well known, but disregard of the party leadership led to "mistakes and weaknesses."

New Democratic Congress Favors Johnson Policies

By STANLEY MEISLER

WASHINGTON (AP) —The American people have given President Johnson a heavily Democratic Congress that seems so snug behind his program it may evoke memories of those early New Deal congresses that whisked through the proposals of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The new Congress also will feature names that, come from the past but may augur power in the future—Democrats Robert F. Kennedy who took away New York Senate seat from a Republican and Republican Robert Taft Jr. who took away an Ohio Senate seat from a Democrat.

The creation of a House of Representatives that seemed to shed most of its obstacles to a Johnson program came despite some spectacular Republican gains.

They snared seats in the once-mighty Democratic Dixieland of Alabama and Mississippi. But for the most part, there were votes that rarely ended up on the side of Johnson legislation anyway.

The Democrats made spectacular gains of their own, upsetting Republicans, for example in their once-safe bastion of Iowa.

PUSH OUT KEATING

Kennedy, the 38-year-old brother of the late president John F. Kennedy, took a Senate seat by pushing aside the re-election bid of Kenneth B. Keating, a liberal Republican who steadfastly refused to endorse conservative Barry Goldwater for president but still fell under the Johnson tide in New York.

Joining Kennedy in the Senate was another young man who swept a Republican incumbent out of office—36-year-old Joseph D. Tydings of Maryland, a close friend of the Kennedy family and the stepson of former Maryland Senator Millard Tydings.

Kennedy, Tydings and Senator Edward M. Kennedy (Dem Mass.), the 32-year-old youngest brother of the late president who easily won re-election, could form a new, powerful Kennedy wing both in the Senate and in the Democratic party.

SALINGER MISSES

But this new wing will not include one whom some observers once considered a sure member—Pierre Salinger. The president's Kennedy and Johnson—already a senator from California by appointment—was defeated by George Murphy, the former Hollywood song-and-dance man, who stopped Salinger's bid to win the California seat by election.

The Republicans had more than Murphy to show as a new face in the Senate. Taft, the grandson of former president William Howard Taft and the son of three-time presidential aspirant Robert A. Taft, defeated the 70-year-old seat in Ohio by defeating incumbent Senator Stephen A. Young.

California's Fair Housing Law Rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) — Californians erased a law against housing discrimination in the hottest issue among hundreds of election proposals in 40 U.S. states Tuesday.

"I am disappointed," said Democratic Governor Edmund G. Brown. "but I do not regard th election as the end of California's fight against discrimination and segregation in housing."

The state constitutional amendment wipes out California's present fair housing law and forbids any further legislation on the subject. It gives property owners the absolute right to accept or reject any buyers or renters.

The measure passed despite opposition of many political leaders, church groups and labor unions.

In another vote involving the racial issue, Maryland extended a public accommodations law to require equal service for Negroes in motels, hotels and restaurants throughout the state. It previously applied only to the city of Baltimore and half of the state's 23 counties.

HIT GAMBLING IDEA

Proposals to legalize gambling were slapped down by voters in four states—California, Arkansas and Washington.

Californians rejected a state-franchised lottery, Arkansas refused to legalize gambling houses in the city of Hot Springs, and Washington voters said "no" to licensing bingo, card games, punch boards and pinball machines.

California voters in a busy day also approved a proposal to outlaw pay television and rejected a state law requiring railways to fill certain jobs on trains.

The railway train crew issue in California and other states is the centre of a bitter dispute between management, seeking to slash manpower, and unions trying to preserve jobs. North Dakota and Arizona also repealed train crew laws.

SETS ETHICS CODE

Louisiana voters established the country's first code of ethics for state officials. It was one of 41 state constitutional amendments crowding the state ballot.

New Hampshire voters appparently approved amendments to reapportion the state legislature, giving more weight to votes of urban residents.

But Florida voters thumbed down a reapportionment amendment which had already been ruled inadequate by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Johnson's Sweeping Victory

President L. B. Johnson has been elected President of the United States. We almost said "re-elected." But this is the first time the citizens of the United States have chosen him as their leader. They did it by a landslide vote. There can be no mistaking their overwhelming preference for him over his Republican opponent, Senator Barry Goldwater.

How much of this preference is due to Johnson's performance since he took over the office of the presidency almost a year ago, and how much the vote for Johnson was really an anti-Goldwater vote, is difficult to estimate. Experts in U.S. politics will be debating this point briskly for many days, perhaps for weeks or even months. We shall not attempt, from our limited knowledge and at such short notice, to offer an analysis, beyond saying that it seems fairly evident that both factors, a positive approval of Johnson's past actions and a lively fear of the policies which Goldwater advocated, played a part in the returns.

Though holding, and vigorously wielding, all the powers of the presidency of the world's greatest nation for the past year, Johnson had been in effect an "interim president." Now he holds office in his own right. It will be interesting to see whether this makes any difference in the policies he pursues, and the manner in which he pursues them. Probably the effect will be minimal, no more than would occur after any election, when the president was relieved of the necessity of considering what effect his decisions would be likely to have on the outcome of an imminent election. The thing that impressed most Canadians about Johnson, and the thing which probably proved a major factor in the support he won at the polls yesterday, was the vigorous and decisive manner in which he took charge of affairs of his nation at a time of crisis. Never for an instant was there any indication that the assassination of President Kennedy might result in a period of drift and confusion in the handling of the country's affairs.

As for the rejection of Senator Goldwater's bid for the presidency, most Canadians will find in it something reassurance that the so-called "radical right" in the U.S. is more talk than numerous. President Johnson's contention that every attempt should be made to negotiate with the communists was endorsed and Senator Goldwater's advocacy of a "tough" foreign policy line was rejected. Looking back over the years, it is surprising to find the change in public opinion, which facilitated public opinion in the U.S. in days of talk of "massive retaliation" are over; there is a growing realization that a nuclear war would inevitably bring appalling devastation to both sides. At least from this side of the border, this shift in U.S. opinion was not self-evident before the election, although we might reasonably have inferred it from the production of such films as "Fail-Safe" and "Dr. Strangelove." Hollywood seldom chooses a theme which it does not believe will be popular.

Besides Johnson's record and Goldwater's promises, there were other factors at work Tuesday. One of the significant ones was the manner in which the Negro vote went almost solidly to Johnson—a Harlem district went 9 to 1 for votes. This is not surprising in view of Johnson's endorsation, and Goldwater's opposition, to the Civil Rights bill. Nevertheless, it promises to remold regional allegiances in the future. The Democratic "Solid South" has disappeared. Goldwater won five southern states and, in contrast to Eisenhower's victories in the border states, Goldwater's was in the "Deep South," where Jim Crow laws are most firmly entrenched. This will make for a more liberal Democratic party—its support will no longer be divided between the liberal element in the big cities of the north and the South's conservatives. Eventually, as more Negroes register and vote, the whole liberals in the South may combine with the Negroes to return at least some of these states to the Democratic fold, but with vastly changed representatives.

President Johnson is said to be an ambitious man—ambitious in the best sense of that term. He not only wants to be president—but to be president of the U.S. everybody is. Men with high ambitions need great opportunities. President Johnson has them—he possesses not only the power but also he is faced with the necessary challenges. Both at home, where the coming years must provide some solution to the racial issue, and abroad, where some eventual settlement of the Cold War is essential to survival of the human race, he will have the chance to write his name large on the pages of history.

Follow Doctor's Advice In Caring for Babies

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am breast feeding my baby girl. Mother said that all my breasts for about six months, but my doctor started her on strained food at one month. Is he right? — Mrs. H. B.

Follow your doctor's advice. That's what you see him for.

It is true that babies can survive and sometimes thrive on breast milk alone for quite some months, but not always.

First, one must be sure that the baby is getting enough food. Sometimes, if there is not sufficient breast milk for a baby, supplementary bottle feedings are necessary. Weight is a clue.

There is an additional reason for starting strained foods. A baby can learn to like them early, and this avoids the "dieting problem" which sometimes develops if the child is quite some months old before having its first introduction to solid foods.

I do not say that your mother is necessarily wrong, but she might be.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have had a sinus headache for five months. At first I had a cold, sneezing, blood and pus come down in my throat from the nasal passages. Nose spray do no good and hot applications help only as long as the heat remains. Please advise if I should see a specialist and is it possible I may have a tumor? — M. M.

Yes, you should consult a specialist — or at least you should see your regular physician who may (or may not, depending on what he sees) advise going to one.

You say it is a sinus headache. It may well be. For one thing, it could be a lung problem obstructing normal drainage and thus permitting infection.

I rather doubt that it is a tumor (other than a polyp, which is a vegetation sometimes called "pachio" themselves) such as are disturbing as the blindness of the policy which authorized them. For only a few years ago the border guns are the vessels of one of the world's greatest coast guard organizations, and all its vast experience and assistance is available for the asking. After all, the sort of boat guarding successfully on the side of the border by the U.S. Coast Guard service should be expected to work equally well on the other side as well.

Britain's Royal National Lifeboat Institute is the world's oldest, largest and most successful organization of its kind. It, over an organization might be forgiven a certain smugness over its many experiences, it could be. Yet this body, always seeking to learn from any source, recently brought lifeboats over from Holland and Germany for testing. It chased a rescue boat from the U.S. Coast Guard for tests, before deciding on a British craft. It's tried and true organization will go to such lengths for such boats, and because, why cannot Canada's brand-new Coast Guard bring itself to the same door for its around?

We are building expensive yachts here in Canada to do a workboat job. Isn't it time we took advantage of the vast experience available to us from other nations, and built a coast guard worthy of the name, not a costly farce which is a burden to the taxpayer and a joke among shipping men? For all that money, who's laughing?

Union Carbide Stops Dollar

Watertown Times

An American subsidiary operating in Canada has prevented an upsurge in the value of the Canadian dollar in relation to U. S. currency by its decision to remit in the immediate future a dividend of $7,500,000 to its parent company. The Union Carbide remittance will result in stabilizing the Canadian dollar and preventing an upsurge which Dominion fiscal experts had feared was being developed.

At present the Canadian currency is fluctuating in a narrow range, slightly below 93 cents. That is where the Dominion seeks it to remain. The Union Carbide remittance will enable the Canadian dollar to hold its present price instead of strengthening and reducing the disparity between the two currencies. The transfer of the funds by Union Carbide will tend to weaken the Canadian dollar but not seriously; just enough to relieve the upward pressure, which have been operating on it in recent months.

The Union Carbide decision to step up Canadian ownership in its subsidiary to the 25 per-cent level and the shooting of the funds to the U. S. parent company shows the vulnerability of the Canadian currency to any large monetary transaction. Any chance that the Canadian dollar will have an upsurge is now believed out of the question; in fact government experts conceded that it is almost certain to weaken in the forseeable future.

A quantitative run on this currency would prove serious and there always is that chance the Canadian people will be forced to consider further devaluation. But the Union Carbide situation shows that operation by U.S. industry in the Dominion financially could prevent such an occurrence if the threat of a raid appeared.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Union Carbide owns the Bakelite plant in Belleville.

Coast Guard Boats Absurd

Griffin Packet and Times

Canada's Coast Guard is saddled with a number of luxury yachts to do the workboat job of search and rescue work on the Great Lakes, and the purpose hapes understandable when the RCMP were building glossy tops for the fast launches of the latter, after all police officials aren't expected to know too much about boats. But the fact that the Canadian Coast Guard perpetuated the tradition by building three expensive yachts for useless yachts for search and rescue work on the lakes, that is a much more serious matter.

The three 70 foot Canadian Coast Guard "cutters" built by Nicol-Scallon Ltd., are the last words of finish and now completing their first season on the lakes. They are complete bunk. Not only are they expensive to build and to operate, but they are quite unsuited for their intended role and dangerous for their crews. They are pleasure yachts on a workboat job.

Their hulls are wood when they should be steel. Instead of cheap, easily-maintained paint they flaunt costly, hard-to-maintain enamel and brightwork, while below decks they are fitted out as yachts and are as expensive to maintain as to keep up. Worst fault of all, they actually have varnished decks, not the steel deck that is maintain but a positive hazard when wet, as slippery and treacherous as glass.

Absurdity is piled on absurdity; the whole of the after deck is taken up by a well housing a small craft, which can open boat to act as a tender. Not only does this well render the after deck quite useless, but it also reduces the freeboard of the transom stern to practically nothing, a most dangerous feature in a following sea. There is no provision for lowering stretcher cases below-decks, an essential feature for boats intended for rescue injured men in rough seas.

Indeed, it must be said that the boats, for all their suitable, and a positive danger to crewmen ventoring out in them.

• • •

What is needed, of course, is not these costly, slippery deck-ed fragile, dangerous, useless, highly-specialized boats but a handful of sturdy, steel-hulled workboats with good engines, which would do the job in any weather, cost next to nothing to maintain and could be built at a fraction of the price of the toys which have cost the Canadian taxpayer so dearly.

It is not so much the extra-

"As the Home is — so is the Nation." too theme chosen by th. Belleville Area Women's Institute for this year's 19th annual convention was graphically and vividly painted to the delight of the large assemblage in the introduction to the two-day convention on Tuesday in the Collegiate Institute Auditorium.

The roll call of the districts was conducted in the form of three - minute talks on ways of promoting rural-urban relationship. From Colborne, the delegate was Mrs. Norman Northumberland W., said that for so long there had been a division between town and rural people. "I do think," she said, "that a good place to begin to promote a good feeling between town and country is to start with the children." If rural teachers could point out to their pupils the advantages which rural have and enjoy, they would not look with serious eyes on the town people.

The Gunpowder Plot, an attempt to blow up the British Houses of Parliament and kill King James I failed, 339 years ago today —in 1605. A number of Roman Catholics planned to destroy the seat of British government and the legislators in protest against repressive measures instituted against their faith at Parliament's opening on Nov. 5. But the day before, Guy Fawkes was found in the cellars of the Parliament building with barrels of gunpowder which he planned to ignite. The incident is commemorated in Britain still with bonfires and fireworks annually, on Nov. 5.

Strictly Personal
Review Might Be Garnished With Wit

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Reading a zesty and shallow review of a new novel I happened to like, I recalled a recent comment in "The Author, a journal put out by the British Society of Authors.

In a perceptive piece on book reviewing, John Rowe Townsend expressed the core of the problem in a simple paragraph, when he wrote:

"The great menace in reviewing is not the lazy or hasty man, but the one who is more anxious to write a lively piece than to deal fairly with the book under review. Literary editors can tell at a glance whether a review is lively; they cannot easily tell whether it is fair; and as the newspaper industry is highly competitive, this particular kind of meretricious reviewing is hard to eradicate."

As every professional writer knows, it is much easier to jeer or sneer than to make a balanced estimate of a book's worth; a calm or favorable review often sounds dull, while a panning review is always counted good, reprinted and enjoyed by people who have never read the book.

The desire to be "lively" is a laudable one in writing, for the author's first duty is to hold his audience. But what price, at what expense? Surely not at the expense of fairness, of reliability, of responsibility to the book reviewed and toward the public.

A review should be a kind of magnifying glass, in which the critic permits the readers to see the flaws and the virtues in the object under scrutiny, in two many cases, however, it's a distorting glass which the reviewer revels in his own expressions and attitudes, using the book only as a convenient peg for his own verbal acrobatics.

The problem is a human one, and not merely a literary one. It is a melancholy fact that critics are best remembered for their tests and judgments which are sober appraisals. When Benchley was reviewing plays for The New Yorker magazine, he was quite capably, he was invariably quoted in his attacks, never in his praises. The one book him — for he had an essentially kind nature — that he left the mold for good.

Acerbity and mockery are not only easier to write, they are easier to read, and they also serve as a substitute for judgment, and, most of all, they satisfy the mob that is latent in all of us.

But this kind of "liveliness" should be the very last quality used — and not the main course. A review might be garnished with wit, and perhaps even a soupçon of malice, but not when these become the main course, a meat which has imbibed his magnifying glass for a mirror that diminishes everyone, including in the end himself.

Ways to Stop Conversation

Hamilton Spectator

In Toronto, at a meeting of the Personnel Association, a visiting American lecturer pressed some tips on stamping a conversation. He had four he described as "tried and true."

1. Say something you know will surprise or shock people. Praise someone he admires. 3. Say something with which he's bound to disagree. 4. Ask him something about himself.

A good opener illustrating the use of gambit could be: "The flying fish swims five miles an hour faster than the bonito." One time to use this is when you've noticed your companion enjoying a tuna fish and an haddock.

"Is that soup on your tie?", is another good opening, but not a leading number. Four you should know the man fairly well before employing it.

Convenient, sensible conversation openers are essential to the modern businessman, according to Mr. Martin Block, a Toronto management development expert. But what about conversation stoppers?

The American expert provided three that could contribute enormously to stopping any kind of conversation and make life that much easier.

1. I wish I knew where I could get some ready cash. 2. Will you sign this statement please. 3. Shut up, dear!

Girl Awarded $15,000, Father Gets $10,959

BROCKVILLE (CP) — A 13-year-old girl and her father were awarded a total of $25,959 in damages Tuesday for injuries the girl suffered in a collision between a school bus and a transport truck March 4, 1963.

Cheryl Emily Booth of nearby Poole's Resort was awarded $15,000 damages and her father, John, another $10,959 for expenses and medical and court costs by the Ontario Supreme Court, after all parties agreed to the arrangements.

Miss Booth was burned in a fire after the school bus on which she was a passenger was involved in a collision with a transport truck and a chemical tank truck during a heavy fog.

Damages were assessed 75 per cent against the bus driver, John Bolger of Lansdowne, Ont., and bus owner Arnold Hill, also of Lansdowne, and 25 per cent against Provost Cartage of Montreal and the tank truck driver, Wilfred Fournier of Cornwall.

Mr. Justice J. F. Donnelly rules that the $15,000 be a trust fund to be turned over to Miss Booth when she reaches 21.

Area Militia Units Affected By New Policy

Fifty-eight major militia units have been placed on the inactive list—in effect, disbanded.

None of the major units is in this area.

But Defence Minister Hellyer's announcement yesterday involved changes of a less important nature for district units.

Brig. J. S. Ross, commander, Eastern Ontario area, Kingston, says "the six existing subunits of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will be reduced to "rifle strength" and relocated with the parent unit in Belleville."

The subunits are located in Norwood, Millbrook, Port Hope, Madoc, Trenton and Picton.

He said the 23rd Medium at Cobourg, including the Napanee battery will also be reduced to "rifle strength" and transferred to "a supplementary order of battle."

"A" battery at Cobourg will remain active but will be transferred to the 80th Field Regt. Royal Canadian Medium. Maximum strength of the regiment will be 350 men.

No. 13 militia group headquarters in Peterborough will be disbanded.

COLONEL RETIRES

Lieut-Col. K. D. H. Willcocks, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, said today that he had no immediate announcement as to how the situation will affect the new organization of the regiment.

Col. Willcocks said a statement will be issued as soon as matters pertaining to re-organization have been settled. This will probably take place within the next ten days.

Humane Killing Of Seals Will Be Enforced

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Robichaud announced Tuesday strict new regulations aimed at conserving seal stocks and ensuring humane killing methods.

He told the Commons that to police the new regulations, fisheries department patrols will be stepped up and representatives of humane societies will be invited to observe the sealing methods during the coming seal hunting season.

After a trial during the 1965 season, representatives of the industry and the humane societies will be asked to meet to see whether changes are needed to the new regulations.

New Political Future Looms For Sen. Robert F. Kennedy

By HERMAN HOSIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Robert F. Kennedy stands on the threshold of a new political future today, a potentially vast horizon opened to him by his election to the U.S. Senate from New York.

Inevitably, speculation will rise on three points—

1. How far will Kennedy go? Depending on circumstances, he could be in the presidential picture by 1968, and certainly by 1972. He will be approaching his 47th birthday no latter date. He has a powerful base from which to shape his future. And having been in and around the federal government for more than 10 years, he knows big-league politics.

2. What about a "Kennedy dynasty?"

His younger brother, Edward M. (Teddy) Kennedy—immobilized in a Boston hospital with a broken back—was re-elected to the Senate from Massachusetts Tuesday. They can be a formidable team.

3. Will there be more so-called "carpetbaggers" now, men who go outside their home state to run for office?

IS THE THIRD

Robert Kennedy is the third member of his family to be elected senator. John F. Kennedy was the first; Teddy the second.

Of the three, Bobby's victory is the most dramatic. He coolly took the long gamble of going outside his native Massachusetts to seek the seat from New York. In challenging Keating, he was opposing a well known and respected senator.

It was Robert Kennedy's first campaign for elective office.

And apart from winning the long gamble, the victory was particularly sweet.

Last July 30, President Johnson suddenly dealt Kennedy out of the race for the vice-presidency.

Douglas Cornell, veteran Washington Associated Press correspondent said the action was "a move which he (Johnson) certainly was aware would stir up immediate speculation that it was aimed at halting Kennedy and perhaps boosting Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota."

STUNS FAMILY

The Kennedys were stunned.

They had in hand a sheaf of reports on polls that showed Bobby well ahead of all other potential vice-presidential candidates as the choice of various groups of Democrats.

Nevertheless, Johnson had closed the door.

Kennedy probably could have had a high appointive office in the new Johnson administration. But a top adviser, considering this, said significantly:

"In an appointive position, he wouldn't be his own fellow. If he can win in New York, he will be his own fellow."

Hydro Poles On Sidney Street Moved Back

To allow for future widening of Sidney Street between Dundas St. West and Bridge Street, public utilities commission line-men have been busy the past several weeks moving hydro poles from the edge of the present roadway back to the fence line.

The new poles have new all heat set, and linesmen are completing the job of moving the power lines.

But the new set-back hydro poles will allow for more than street widening. They will allow installation of street lighting for Sidney Street, which has been badly needed in the area, because of mounting traffic.

Mr. E. H. Burnham, utilities commission manager, said there was no point in installing street lamps on the old poles only to have the poles moved back when the street was widened. Accordingly the poles were moved now so the street lamps could be installed.

NEW FEEDER MAIN

During the past summer a new 24-inch feeder water main was installed along Sidney St. to north of the railway tracks. This new feeder main will eventually be continued across the north part of the city to the eastern end.

Widening of Sidney Street to provide a north-south arterial traffic route, is in the planning stage at city hall.

The city Parks Board and Agricultural Society have indicated they have no objection to Sidney Street being opened through the fairgrounds and the works department has been directed to draw plans and prepare cost estimates for consideration in next year's roads budget.

Ann Landers

Wife's Problem Not Unique, Many Selfish Husbands

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Right now I am smoking myself to death, waiting for my husband to come home. He went to a football game this afternoon with "the boys." It is midnight and he's not back yet.

We've been married two years and have no children. We both work and our marriage is a happy one, except for this one bad habit. If he decided to have a few drinks with the fellows after work he'just goes without bothering to call and say he'll be late. When he finally gets home and I ask him why he didn't phone he says, "I didn't think of it."

ANN LANDERS

I'm sure I am not the only woman in the world who has this problem. What do other women do? —OUTA MY MIND.

* * *

DEAR OUTA — Other women do the same thing you do — worry themselves sick, walk the floor and ask themselves 1,000 times, "Where can he be?" and "Why doesn't he call?" The answers you know very well. He's in a saloon, slopped to the eyeballs. And he doesn't call because he's a selfish, inconsiderate heel. But he's your heel, and you must some how live through the agony of it until he grows up and begins to behave like a man.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — The person who signed himself "Cynic" should have signed himself "ignorant." The fact that you did not refute this statement that animals kill only for food and that they do not abandon their young, shows that you've got a lot to learn about animals, too.

Weasels will kill for the sake of killing. One farmer reported losing 40 chickens in a single night. The barracuda is another blood lust killer. Some tame animals are killers, too. A male hamster or rabbit will kill his offspring if he can get at them.

Frogs, fish and other aquatic creatures sometimes devour their young. Certain insects, such as the praying mantis and the black widow spider eat their mates.

The Cynic also said animals do not abandon their young. The cowbird will lay its eggs in another bird's nest. All reptiles abandon their young. It would please me if you printed this letter to set the record straight. — R.L.H. 164, CFO.

* * *

DEAR R.L.H. — Here it is and many thanks for the fascinating nature lesson. I learned from it and I'm sure millions of others did, too. (And now, will some of you please stop calling this a lovelorn column?)

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS — A very good-looking boy came here from another city and enrolled in our high school last week. All the freshman girls are going ape over him. Before I turn myself loose I want to ask a question.

This boy wears his belt buckle in the back. I have heard this means he is loved and "taken." Have you ever heard of this? Please tell me right away because I can hardly wait. — ON THE VERGE.

* * *

DEAR VERGE — Maybe he's just a backward kid. Or perhaps it's a local folk-custom in his former school. Why don't you ask him?

* * *

Confidential to NOT EQUIPPED — Anyone who can write a letter like the one you wrote to me is well enough educated to support herself. Get out of that squirrel cage and go to work. You will then be able to hold your head up and be a self-respecting woman.

* * *

Parents are people — they can be right and they can be wrong. To help understand their viewpoint and to promote harmony at home, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 25c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

When is a Young Man Ready for Marriage?

Is a girl making a mistake when she marries a "man" of 19? Is he still half a child as far as character development goes? What does he know about money—about himself? WEDDINGS

CHISHOLM — MacDONALD

A lovely wedding was solemnized recently in Point Anne United Church when Mary Elizabeth MacDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard MacDonald, Point Anne, was united in marriage to Douglas Wayne Chisholm, son of Mrs. Roy (Helen) Chisholm, Belleville, and the late Mr. Roy Chisholm. Rev. O. E. Wagar officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Miss Penny Hart provided traditional wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a four-tier gown of white lace featuring a fitted bodice and jacket of Chantilly lace with long "V" pointed sleeves. Her finger-tip veil of tulle illusion was caught to a crown shaped head dress and she carried a crescent bouquet of red roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Patsy Hart of Point Anne wore a dress of aqua taffeta and carried a nosegay of carnations and baby 'mums.

Mr. David MacDonald, brother of the bride, attended the bridegroom, while the ushers were Mr. Ronald Rosebush of Point Anne and Mr. George Johnston, nephew of the bridegroom, Belleville.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the parish hall, Point Anne, where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a teal blue sheath dress with matching jacket, black accessories and a corsage of pink 'mums. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a black and white polka dot dress with black accessories and a corsage of white 'mums.

The bride's table was appointed with white damask cloth centred with a two-tier wedding cake topped with miniature bridal couple and flanked with tall pink and white candles in silver holders. The colorful bridal bouquets completed the nuptial setting.

The Ladies' Guild of the church served at the reception.

For the wedding trip to Gananoque the bride chose a brown knitted suit with golden colored accessories and a corsage of golden colored 'mums. Upon their return the couple will reside in Point Anne.

Guests were present from Toronto, Cobourg, Kingston, Read, Belleville, Napanee and Point Anne.

Previous to the marriage the bride was entertained at a personal shower given by Mrs. George Johnston of Belleville, and at a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Barb Farnsworth of Belleville; also a community shower by friends and neighbors at Point Anne.

Friends Honor Neighbors On Departure

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Mr. and Mrs. William Linn were taken by surprise on Friday evening when neighbors and friends dropped in to bid them farewell before their departure for their new home in Trenton this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Linn have sold their home to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hazelwood after moving here from Stirling 41 years ago. They have made many friends in that time and it is with a deep feeling of regret that they make this change of residence.

After a pleasant social time Mrs. Fred Bowers who was her closest neighbor read an address and Mr. Fred Bowers and Mr. Frank Marvin presented Mr. and Mrs. Linn with a pair of step tables and a pair of table lamps from the community.

Although taken by surprise, Mrs. Linn responded, thanking all for their kindness and asked all to visit them in their new home.

The get-together was arranged by Mrs. Fred Bowers, Mrs. Frank Marvin, Mrs. Samuel Reid and Mrs. Lawrence Defoe.

U.C.W. Meeting

WHITE'S CHURCH U.C.W.

WHITE'S DISTRICT — The October meeting of White's United Church Women was held at White's Church on Wednesday afternoon with good attendance of members, several visitors and children present. Mrs. William Yeaman, past president, welcomed everyone.

The president, Mrs. Albert Jones, opened the meeting. The devotional service was taken by Mrs. Lorne Hunt, assisted by Mrs. Roy McGrath under the heading "God and My Purpose."

An invitation was received to attend a bazaar and tea at Wallbridge United Church in November. Members decided to attend after a short meeting of their own U.C.W. A letter was received from the supply secretary Mrs. Smith of Stirling, that all supplies were to be forwarded to her by June 1st, 1960. The treasurer's report showed $105 cleared on the turkey supper.

The Presbyterial regional president, Mrs. Edison Sine, of Scott's United Church was guest speaker. She stressed the point be on time and start on time." She gave a definition of Church: C is for Christ, the head of the home; H is for holiness; U is for U (you) the people; R is for reverence, C is for commitment and H is for hope.

Mrs. Georbe Bilham and Mrs. Garnet Dean rendered a duet accompanied by Mrs. William Jeffery.

Mrs. Lorne Hunt moved a vote of thanks to the guest speaker and to all others who had assisted in the meeting.

A dessert tea was enjoyed by all and a social time was spent.

Beware of Nystagmus. If You Plan to Drive After Couple of Drinks

TORONTO (CP)—Watch out for nystagmus if you're planning to drive a car after even only a couple of drinks.

Rita Charlebois, an expert on the effects of drinking, says nystagmus — an irregular and uncontrolled movement of the eyes — results from the consumption of only a small amount of alcohol.

"A driver with a few drinks may be all right as long as the road is straight and clear but it is when something sudden happens or he has to focus quickly on a moving object that this condition becomes a factor."

Mrs. Charlebois, a scientist who specializes in organic chemistry at the attorney-general's laboratory here, adds that there is also a five-to-10-per-cent decrease in hearing efficiency as a result of alcohol.

Her study of nystagmus, carried out with electronic equipment and the assistance of an engineer, was prompted by her belief that the accepted physical tests given by police to drinking drivers tend to overlook conditions produced by only a couple of drinks.

"The drivers have all the time in the world to do these tests and, besides, they are not a true test because they do not fix the abilities required for driving.

"A driver may be able to walk or touch his nose but that does not mean his reaction is good to something unexpected. This is one thing that is important in driving."

Mrs. Charlebois, who says she confines herself to one drink at parties "because she has a very low tolerance" for alcohol, travels thousands of miles a year to lecture on her specialty and is often called as an expert witness in auto accident cases, sometimes by the Crown and sometimes by the defence.

WEDDING

BLACKBURN — COTTEN

ELDORADO — A lovely October wedding was solemnized in St. Mark's Anglican Church, Rosseau, when Shirley Isabella Cotten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Cotten, Harold, was united in marriage to Hartley Clayton Blackburn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Blackburn, Eldorado.

Rev. Robert Stewart officiated at the ceremony before a background of white carnations and Pinnochio 'mums. Bouquets of pink gladioli and carnations decorated the church.

The organist, Mrs. Carl Pitman, rendered traditional wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Mrs. Burton Woodhead, in her selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length bridal gown of white peau-de-soie featuring a fitted bodice and scoop neckline with long lily-pointed sleeves. The bodice and bouffant skirt were delicately appliqued with Alencon lace. A large bow at the back waistline complimented a short chapel train. Her tulle veil was held with a white rose headdress and she carried a bouquet of pink Delight roses and Pinnochio 'mums.

Miss Joy Cotten, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor, and the Misses Janet and Joan Cotten, twin sisters of the bride were bridesmaids. They were identically attired in Montago blue peau-de-soie street-length dresses featuring short sleeves, scoop necklines and bouffant skirts with floating panels falling from the shoulders. They wore white accessories with white bow hats and each carried a bouquet of white Shasta 'mums, centred with blue Delight 'mums.

Mr. Wayne Blackburn, brother of the bridegroom, was the groomsman, while Mr. Clayton McComas, uncle of the bridegroom and Mr. Douglas Cotten, brother of the bride, were ushers.

The reception was held in the church parlors, where the bride's table was most attractive, centred with a three-tier wedding cake and flanked with tapering candles. The bridal bouquets added to the nuptial setting.

The bride's mother received the guests, wearing a red and black wool boucle suit with black and white accessories and a corsage of white 'mums. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother wearing a beige satin brocade dress and matching jacket with cranberry red and brown accessories and a corsage of pink 'mums.

For the wedding trip through New York States and Western and Northern Ontario, the bride chose a brown and beige wool suit with beige and brown accessories and a corsage of brown and yellow 'mums.

Guests were present from Harold, Eldorado, Belleville, Peterborough, Chatham, Bonarlaw, Carleton Place, Arnprior, Kitchener, Stirling and Madoc.

Previous to her marriage the bride was honored at a miscellaneous shower given by Miss Ann Sutherland at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. G. Sutherland. The bride's co-workers at the Bank of Montreal, Stirling, presented her with a steam iron.

Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn are residing at Eldorado, Ontario.

MAIL CALL

QUESTION: Is it rude to leave a party before the guest of honor does? My husband and I went to a party recently that was supposed to end around midnight, but even at that late hour the main guest still hadn't made a move to leave. We had to get home, as we just slipped out. I called the hostess next day to explain and got the impression she felt we were a bit impolite to leave without saying goodnight. Actually, since the party got still in full swing, we didn't want to make others feel they should leave, also. Were we rude to leave as we did? — Mrs. C. R., Providence, R. I.

ANSWER: Correctly, guests should leave only after the guest of honor does. If one has to leave earlier, it should be done without attracting attention, but the departing guest should stay a quiet good-night to the hostess before doing so. If this can't be done without taking her away from other guests, the leave-taker should say his adieu through the host, or possibly someone else in the family, rather than slip out without saying a word to anyone.

Genuine and Informal Said of Muriel Humphrey, Wife of Vice-President

By MARTHA COLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The last time Mrs. Hubert H. Humphrey was at her home here in July between campaign trips, Telephones were ringing, typewriters were clacking and workers were scurrying through her house.

She simply went into the kitchen and started making soup for everybody.

Muriel Humphrey is that kind of person — genuine and informal, a friend said.

The wife of the vice-president-elect of the United States helped him climb up the political ladder. She once said she had been a doorbell pusher since 1943, when her husband ran for mayor of Minneapolis.

WENT TO 25 STATES

In this election campaign she went to 25 states for the Democratic ticket. Her husband said she was such a good campaigner she was the one selected to go to Alaska and Hawaii to represent the two top candidates.

She says she isn't a politician — "I just try to get out and meet people and let them get to know me. I'm not serious, tell them about Hubert."

Campaigning, she said she liked it—"It's nice to be useful."

She doesn't look grandmotherly at 52. Her silver hair is cut in a short bob, with bangs, and she has a petite size.

The Humphrey home in suburban Chevy Chase, Md., is obviously one where children grow up—a basketball net over the garage door, a concerts shuffleboard on the back lawn. The children's juke box has been removed from the recreation room, for they're older and away now.

DAUGHTER MARRIED

Daughter Nancy, 22, is married, with two young daughters.

Robert Jr. (called Skip), 22, and his wife are students at American University here. Robert, 20, is a sophomore at Mankato State College in Minnesota; and Douglas, 16, is at a preparatory school in Minnesota.

Mrs. Humphrey was born and grew up in Huron, S.D., and met her husband there. She is the accomplished pianist and takes great pride in her sewing. She is also one of those wives who helped her husband through school in depression days by working.

For a while she made sandwiches for Humphrey to sell to fellow students at a dime apiece.

Bringing Up Baby
HINTS COMPILED BY MRS. IRMA HOOKER, MOTHER OF 5
When your baby begins to creep he may rebel a bit at the playpen but you will be glad to have it when you'll want baby to stay put. How to keep your semi-school happy after he's had a taste of freedom? These tips may be helpful:
• Three elements. If you reserve playtimes for baby's most contented times, he probably won't resent it.
• Toy tricksery. A few different toys for each session help keep baby's "learning development" on forward pace. Move to some house on. A covered saucepan with a Gerber Teething Biscuit inside adds a nice surprise.
• Position counts. By placing the playpen where baby can watch your comings and goings, he won't feel neglected.
Most of the matter. A baby with crawl privileges needs protein to help develop those muscles he's using more and more. Gerber Strained Meats are excellent sources of protein in the smoothest form that ever surmounted up a baby's smile. Made from government-inspected meats they're low in fat for easy digestibility, contain no cereal or starch for easily accomplished. Like all Gerber Baby Foods, they're now in glass jars with re-closable Twist-Top caps for safe refrigeration of opened portions.
Safety measures for fearsellers. Crispers make a bonine for bright objects to be near your baby to scan the floor for dangerous items like pins, buttons, etc., from and tootsier cole should not be left accessible. Plexi-type fans or electric heaters are a hazard.
Sunny-side up for crispers, hot-sitters or the high-chair set. Gerber Strained Egg Yolks are bright as a sunny-side up and have a splendid custard-like texture that's hard to beat for downright delightful eating. As for nourishment, Gerber Egg Yolks are excellent sources of vitamin A and iron and a good source of protein. Gerber Baby Foods, Niagara Falls, Canada.

In California, former actor George Murphy defeated Democratic Senator Pierre Salinger, the former White House press secretary who was appointed to fill a vacant Senate seat earlier this year.

Romney, 57-year-old former head of American Motors, and Taft, 47 - year - old veteran of Ohio politics and the U.S. House of Representatives, both emerged from the election with considerably stronger positions within the party. Both have been talked of as possible future presidential candidates.

But it was a different story in New York State where one of the leading Republican moderates, Kenneth B. Keating, 65, lost his Senate seat to 36-year-old Robert F. Kennedy.

Kennedy's victory made him the third brother of the family to sit in the Senate.

The youngest, Edward M. (Teddy) Kennedy, 32, easily retained the Massachusetts Senate seat once held by the late president.

tion, that will be mutually acceptable."

Mr. Roberts said that Quebec's concern traditionally has been with the political relations between the provinces and the federal government.

"By this I mean that there is a general feeling in Quebec that the province, as an entity, should be in a position to exercise control over its own affairs independent of the policies of the federal government."

He asserted that such an assumption would create the conclusion that Canada is nothing more than the sum of its parts.

Earlier in the day, Provincial Treasurer James Allan indicated that the 1965-66 budget will be presented to the next session of the Ontario legislature and will approach $1,800,000,000.

For the current fiscal year the budget called for expenditure of approximately $1,250,000,000. It was forecast that revenues would fall about $100,000,000 short of this amount.

HERDED FOR RECORD

TORONTO (CP) — Department of transport statistics released Tuesday indicate Ontario is headed for a record number of injuries in traffic accidents this year. In the first nine months, 38,806 persons suffered injuries, up 12 per cent from the 34,671 injured in the same period last year. Total accidents in the same nine months jumped to 76,974 from 73,808 in 1963. Motor vehicle registration rose five per cent.

Speaking Personally

By Gladys Ward

The following essay was written by Miss Sharon Walker, a student in 12B at Quinte Secondary School at the time. It is a perceptive "personal" essay and a simple kind of love that only a child can give. The popular conception of a boy depicts a wild tornado roaring from room to room in a mad attempt to wreck the entire house all at once.

But what about the other aspects of boyhood? Brothers are a study in contrasts. That one figure that only you can like better is just as much a part of him as those healthy beings which bellow "You're a fink" when he's provoked. No one but a sister can realize that the clenched fist which healthily offers a bouquet of dandelions can also offer a punch that would knock over an elephant.

Take, for example, my own brother Bradley . . . please take him ! Day and night for his full three years, he has been a very interesting study. One typical day with him would easily exhaust a whole platoon of baby sitters. Being a wandcver at heart, he can disappear and stay hidden with the skill of a trained spy. After hours of calling and searching for him, he inevitably re-appears in his own backyard, looking the picture of innocence and contentment with his favorite toy. Of course I couldn't possibly relate all of his tricks of the trade to you. Who knows, you may have the opportunity to discover them for yourself, some day!

Little sisters differ from brothers in more ways than gender. Coy and coquettish from the day she first smiles, she can spin Daddy around her little finger when she doesn't get her own way. One sorry tear sends the family into bedlam; a soft kiss goodnight melts the heart of each recipient. Every little girl, like my sister Lori, has her share of ginger, but that sugar, sweet exterior and endearing smile seem to make all her mischief forgivable.

No single being could be composed of so many different moods, tricks and devilitry than a certain little brother named Brad. One could ordinarily rest assured that time would change him into a fine healthy man; but that is where our story diverges from a typical family. Bradley, who was once my favorite monster, is in hospital with leukemia.

I have written this to tell him, and you, that most of all, little brothers are made of love.

At 4:30 p.m. on Friday, October 2nd., 1964, in his 3rd year, Bradley Joe Walker died of leukemia in the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

Drug Addiction Is Subject Of Discussion at Meeting

The October meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held at the home of Mrs. R. G. Coulter, with Miss M. Barnum presiding and Mrs. Moyers conducting the devotional part of the meeting. Mrs. T. F. Townsend was pianist for the hymns and contributed a piano solo.

Mrs. Finlay reported on the Dominion convention of the WCTU held at Niagara Falls. The report was filled with human interest stories, and the work on the national level.

Mrs. Keith, national president, and Mrs. Watson, national field secretary, attended the convention.

DRUG ADDICTION

Mrs. Way presented the clip sheet on addiction which said "Drug addiction is a state of periodic or chronic intoxication produced by repeated consumption of drugs. Drug addiction has four characteristics: an overpowering desire or need to continue taking the drug and to procure it by any means; a tendency to increase the dose; a psychological and physical dependence on the effects of the drug; an effect detrimental to the individual and to society."

Drugs are classified according to effects: sedative, hynotic, tranquillizer, stimulant, narcotic.

Jacobson suggests five properties that induce people to use them; they may constitute fatigue, stimulants such as caffeine, cocaine and amphetamine. Drugs may raise a person's spirits (or mood) such as alcohol, tobacco, morphine and barbiturates. They may banish worries, such as alcohol, tobacco, morphine, meprobamate, barbiturates. They may induce sleep as barbiturates, chloral, hydrate alcohol, deridex. They may bring dreams as morphine, Cocaine, marihuana, mescaline, lysergic acid.

MEDICALLY DANGEROUS

The term tranquillizer covers a multitude of drugs which are rapidly growing in numbers. Some of them are dangerous medically and are already known to be addictive. With others it is not known as yet what the long range effects will be.

Tranquillizers should not be resorted to for the treatment of anything less than an incapacitating illness.

Numerically the problem of narcotic addiction is not as large in Canada as in the United States and some other countries. There are at least 2,656 narcotic addicts in this country. These addicts are found in the Vancouver area, Toronto, Hamilton and Windsor.

Of the total number there are 2,126 criminal or street addicts, 306 medical addicts, and 134 professional addicts.

TWO PHASES

Generally speaking the legislative history of Canada's policy on narcotic drugs is stated by a member of the medical advisory board of the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation, and divides itself into two phases: from 1908 to 1961 the Opium and Drug Act was in force in Canada and had been for 50 years to protect the public against the improper use of narcotics. This statute curtailed the right of physicians to distribute narcotics. It made it impossible for the addict to acquire drugs legally for his addiction, and it punished him when he acquired them illegally. This ignored the view that the addict was a sick person.

In 1961 the Narcotic Control Act was passed in the House of Commons which contained recommendations for suppressing the illicit traffic. In this new legislation, the responsibilities are shared. Part is that of the Minister of Health, and part that of the Minister of Justice.

This new legislation provides for the committal to custody for treatment. Eventually there will be new institutions under federal-provincial co-operation.

TREATMENT CENTRE

This year a narcotic treatment centre was begun at Matsqui, B.C., some 80 miles from Vancouver. This is the first of its kind to be developed by the penitentiary of Canada. It will provide private accommodation for treatment and training for 300 male addicts and 150 females, who have been sentenced to imprisonment for two years or more by the criminal courts. This institution will be opened in the fall of 1965. At the present time some 250 male addicts are confined to the B.C. penitentiary at New Westminster and about 30 female addicts in the federal prisons at Kingston, Ontario. These are from western Canada.

APPLE HARVEST

The U.S. anticipates producing a total of 14,000,000,000 apples in 1964, 12 per cent greater than the 1963 crop.

St. John's Guild Sponsors Tea

STERLING — Last Thursday afternoon a large group of ladies attended the bazaar and afternoon tea sponsored by St. John's Guild.

The president, Mrs. Frank Harding and her convenors, Mrs. Jos Whitehead, Mrs. Alfred Wagner and Mrs. Frank McGee were in charge of the successful event.

The Parish Hall was decorated in the Hallowe'en theme by Mesdames Edgar Moore and Reid. Mrs. Howard Farnsoun was financial secretary. The reception lists were Mrs. Frank McGee and Mrs. John Villeturte, while Mrs. Wagner invited the guests to the tea room. Those who poured tea were: Mrs. Joe Whitehead, Mrs. Ernest Carr, Mrs. R. B. Belshaw and Mrs. Edgar Moore. Other members of the Guild assisted in serving and replenishing the tasty refreshments. In charge of kitchen duties were Mrs. F. Houchin, Mrs. Jim Reid and Mrs. Charles Pritchard.

SALES TABLES

The bake table was filled with a large assortment of delicacies with convenors Mrs. Ritchie Green, Mrs. Wilfred Greves and Mrs. Burgess Demorest. The sewing table contained aprons, knitted goods and various odds and ends of kitchen accessories. Those in charge were Mrs. Stanley Bateman, Mrs. Kenneth Cooke and Mrs. Peter Briggs. The small gift table filled with Hallowe'en novelties was convened by Mrs. Everett Cooke. A table filled with an assortment of homemade candy and a selection of Christmas cards was in charge of the president.

During the afternoon a draw was made for the travelling hostess with Mrs. Kenneth Ray, the lucky winner.

Guests were in attendance from all parts of the village and from Eggleton and Mount Pleasant Rawdon in the county.

The rainy weather did not deter the attendance, and the ladies of St. John's were pleased with the results of the event.

For a beautiful dinner, ready for the table with a roll of dimes, add to the family's meals when baking.

Money Makers For Bazaars

By MARY MOORE

Our kitchen looked like a church bazaar these wet, yesterday—but by ten o'clock at night all but a few crumbs were gone.

I have no space for a long foreword just believe me when I tell you that the frosted chocolate cake and oatmeal cookies below are sure-fire and will sell like hot cakes at your Christmas bazaar.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Glazed Baked Pienic Ham; French Toast with Butter and Honey; Creamed Spinach; Sliced Bananas with Milk; Bream Bars; Coffee.

DOUBLE RICH CHOCOLATE CAKE:

6 tablespoons butter, 3 oz. (2 sq.) unsweetened chocolate, 1½ cups sugar, ¾ cup water, 1½ cups sifted cake flour, ¾ teaspoon baking powder, ¾ teaspoon baking soda, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 egg, 1-3 cup buttermilk or sour milk, 1½ teaspoons vanilla.

Melt butter and chocolate in top of double boiler, over boiling water. (Note: If you have a large double boiler use it to melt the baking chocolate and butter. It is then handy for mixing the batter.) Remove from heat. Stir in sugar and water. Cool to room temperature. Sift together the sifted flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Add egg to chocolate mixture and beat in. Add sifted dry ingredients and combine lightly. Stir in buttermilk or sour milk and vanilla. Pour batter into double paper-lined and buttered 9 x 9 x 2" pan. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 40 to 45 minutes. Cool in pan on cake rack. Frost when cool with Double Boiler Chocolate Frosting: One-quarter cup butter, 1 oz. (1 sq.) unsweetened chocolate, 2 tablespoons boiling water, 3¼ cups sifted icing sugar, ¼ teaspoon vanilla. Melt butter and chocolate in top of double boiler. Gradually stir in boiling water. Remove from heat. Add icing sugar, a little at a time, until mixture is of spreading consistency. Stir in vanilla. Frost top of cooled cake in pan. If desired sprinkle top with ¼ cup chopped walnuts. Deliver cake to bazaar where convenors can cut it from pan holding paper edges.

ROLLED OATS COOKIES:

¾ cup butter, melted, 1¾ cups sifted all-purpose salt, ¾ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1¼ cups rolled oats (or ¾ cup rolled oats and ½ cup whole wheat flour — an excellent variation), 1 cup granulated sugar, ½ cup lightly-packed brown sugar, ½ cup flaked cocoanut, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Melt butter first. Sift together into large bowl the sifted flour, salt and baking soda. Mix in oats, sugars and cocoanut. In small bowl beat egg well. Add melted butter and vanilla. Make a well in dry ingredients and add egg-butter liquid, all at once, then stir and mix well with spatula and hands. Place by teaspoonfuls (1½" when flattened a little) onto buttered cookie sheets and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 8 minutes. Do not burn. Cool on cookie racks. Makes 6 dozen 2¼" cookies. Lovely and crisp and buttery. Wrap in lots of one dozen each in red cellophane packets, tied with Christmas ribbon if for bazaar.

Girl Advised to Stop Playing Second Fiddle

DEAR DORIS — I like this boy who is going steady and he told me he liked me a lot but he liked the other one (his steady) more. But every time he goes to her house they quarrel. He does everything for her, walks her to school, buys her clothes for her birthday, carries all her books to and from school, just to name a few. And she just expects it from him.

He sees me every chance he gets and when she finds out she'll have his head. At school, when he isn't with her and he sees me, he looks at me as if I'm a criminal or prostitute or something. This bothers me quite a bit. He told me that I was a lot of fun and he wanted to see me as much as possible without her knowing.

DORIS CLARK

1. Why does he act that way at school towards me?
2. Should I politely tell his girl friend what a wonderful guy she has and that she should appreciate him more?
3. What do I do in the meantime? — BOTHERED AND HEARTBROKEN.

* * *

DEAR BOTHERED —

1. Maybe he thinks Precious is looking over his shoulder.
2. Not unless you're willing to let her have your head.
3. Stop playing second fiddle to a henpecker. Find a boy who won't be afraid to show he likes you.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — After 19 years of a good marriage, my husband (through no fault of mine) had an affair with another woman. As far as I know this only happened once.

At first I thought I could forget about it, but each day I seem to think about it more. Do you think a clergyman could help me with this sordid affair? I have been thinking of talking it over with one. — TROUBLED.

* * *

DEAR TROUBLED — Yes, or a social worker. Or your husband. Your hurt is festering and could ruin things for both of you. And once you've talked it out, make a new beginning in sharing with each other your heart's concerns and joys.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I was married at 16 and my husband is ten years older than I. I have two children and am still only 19. My husband is very kind and sweet and I love him very much.

I go to dances very often and my husband baby sits. He doesn't mind as he doesn't dance. A week ago I was to a dance and a fellow I liked a lot before I got married asked to take me home. I said yes and nobody saw us leave.

While I was with him he told me he liked me very much and if my husband found out I could turn to him.

If my husband found out I would die. I don't know what to do. I love my husband and don't want to hurt him. I want to keep going to the dances. What can I do? — MIXED UP.

* * *

DEAR MIXED UP — Either get a proper baby sitter and go to the dances with your husband — who could learn to dance and enjoy it — or look for some spare time fun with the girls. What makes you exempt from the penalties that go with being single when you are married?

* * *

Susanna's Family Fare

TOUGH PUFF

Dear Susanna: Quite by accident I just discovered the ideal way to remove wax and jam, etc., from the outside of jars, when putting down preserves. My beautiful little nylon net pot scrubber is the perfect answer! Wax disappears as quick as a wink. — Bea Wickham

Step right up folks and learn how to make your own! I'll be more than glad to send you the know-how, all you have to do is ask. In fact I'll even include a copy of the following delightful po that a thoughtful reader sent in. She makes these fluffy scrubbers for shower gifts and sales, and tucks the poem in th package:

"I may look rather fragile,
But I'm really very strong.
On sticky dish , pots and pans
I never can go wrong.
A rub, to swish the food away,
A rinse, and I am clean,
I'm always pretty, sweet and fresh,
So place me where I'm seen.
Or in the bathroom every day,
I'll shine up tub and sink,
By taking off the soapy ring,
And do it in a wink.
My uses are twofold you see,
So let me lend a hand
To keep your house all shining bright,
The cleanest in the land!" — SUSSANAS

If you have any hints for running a successful household—or any problems — write to Susanna, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope when requesting pamphlets.)

Manitoba Builds Itself Mighty Lake

WINNIPEG (CP) — Creation of a massive lake is under way in northern Manitoba in a long awaited prelude to the first transmission from the $140,000,000 Grand Rapids hydro-electric project.

Manitoba Hydro, the provincial public power agency, says first power is due in December from the station 235 miles north of Winnipeg. Construction began in 1960.

Final stage in a flooding program that will back up Saskatchewan River water into a 3,000-square-mile reservoir is well along. The lake will be 55 miles long when it is completed next year.

Holding back the water are 16 miles of dikes made of rock and earth. They actually form a huge dam which, from the air, resembles a big V with the river entering the open end.

At the point of the V water will be channelled through a reinforced concrete intake structure to drive the turbines in the powerhouse below.

Only one of three 110 000-kilowatt generators in the powerhouse will be put into operation in December. The other two will be activated next year. Space has been left for a fourth unit to be installed when needed.

ADJUSTABLE GATES

The reservoir buildup began June 27 when steel gates in a spillway dam in one wall of the V-dike were gradually shut, choking off the river's natural course to Lake Winnipeg a few miles away.

After the water from the new lake is pressured through the powerhouse it will be channelled into the old river course which loops around the bottom of the V from the spillway at one side.

In the future, the electrically operated spillway gates will be adjusted to regulate the level of the artificial lake which will be 97 feet at deepest point. Each spillway gate is 42 feet high with an interior heating system to act as a de-icer in winter.

A number of Indian homes had to be moved to higher ground to avoid the floodwaters that will eventually absorb several big and small lakes as well as considerable land in the rugged bush country.

Some Indians didn't believe it was possible to manufacture a lake and were reluctant to move. Manitoba Hydro built a 10-foot scale model of the project to help convince them.

The work force at the project is dwindling to a few hundred as it nears completion. The peak employment was 1,900 in September, 1963.

Manitoba Hydro and its contractors overcame everything from strikes to natural barriers in the task of planting the facility on the remote site. Supplies were brought in by barge. A 112-mile gravel road was finally built, and an airstrip was carved.

There were occasions strikes for more pay and better working conditions. And in the legislature the Liberal opposition charged that water backing contractors made excessive profits. But work went on, and the result is to be a new lake that will be third largest in Manitoba, after Lake Winnipeg and Lake Winnipegosis.

LAKE FOR POWER — The creation of a massive lake is well under way in Northern Manitoba by a long-awaited prelude to the first transmission from the $140,000,000 Grand Rapids hydro electric project. The lake, formed by backing up the Saskatchewan River, will be 55 miles long when completed next year. Manitoba Hydro says first power is due in December from the station 235 miles north of Winnipeg. St. Joseph de la Rive, 97 miles northeast of here.

Three crew members were lost when the Leeclifte Hall sank.

Dufour told the Canada Shipping Act inquiry, which has power to make recommendations and suspend certificates of officers or pilots, he "twice relayed messages offering assistance from the Desoto County to "the captain of the Leeclifte Hall."

OFFERS REFUSED

Both offers were refused, he said.

Another witness said the 236-ton harbor tug Foundation Vibert was struggling unsuccessfully to get the Hall, loaded with 24,000 tons of iron ore, to shore.

Capt. Duncan Flander, 43, of Fairview, N.S., the tug captain, told the commission he had doubts his vessel could do the job, though it managed to get the bulk carrier to within 200 yards of shore at one point.

The collision occurred at about 8:15 p.m. EDT in rain and fog. The tug, about 12 miles away, went to the scene after hearing a distress call.

The tug, with Capt. Walter Bowen and pilot Paul Emile Theriault of the Leeclifte Hall aboard, tried towing and pushing the 86,000,000 bulk carrier off.

Francis Gerity of Toronto lawyer for Capt. Bowen, asked whether the tug "had enough power for the job."

"Oh no," replied Capt. Flander.

He said he believed other ships were standing by but weren't asked to help. He believed Capt. Bowen at one point asked for another tug to help but it never arrived.

COULD OFFER HELP

Dufour testified that after hearing the distress signal the captain of the Desoto County asked him to advise the Leeclifte Hall that the naval vessel could offer help in about 90 minutes.

The offer was twice refused he said.

About 11 p.m. EDT, the Desoto County picked up a call for help.

"After refusing our offer of aid several times, they're asking for help now," Dufour quoted the U.S. captain as saying.

Capt. Flander testified that the Leeclifte Hall was being towed off Cape Gouse, 65 miles northeast of here, when it suddenly went down with a long, thunderous roar.

Capt. Flander said he could see men jumping from the stern of the sinking ship and in the next 90 minutes rescued six of them from the dark, foggy waters.

A search for three miners had to be given up to get a seriously injured man ashore for medical help.

The tug's log indicated the Leeclifte Hall sank at 10:10 p.m.

The inquiry continues.

Johnson

tallied. The count reached that point, and Goldwater security men gathered to clear the senator's way through the crowd that packed the walled walkway of the desert vacation spot.

Then Wagner took the rostrum.

"Senator Goldwater has asked me to announce that he will not make a statement tonight," the press secretary said.

In early evening, with the television networks forecasting his defeat, Goldwater clung to a slim hope.

"He never believed that the polls were accurate and as a result does not believe that this election is a true test of the projection," Wagner said.

But by the time Goldwater went to bed, that hope had evaporated. It showed in the eyes of his followers and friends, who lounged around the palm trees and the cactus plants at the headquarters resort, watching TV and sipping drinks. Champagne never was uncorked.

It also showed starkly in the press room, where nobody even bothered to post a figure on the 26-foot blackboard that was to have shown the presidential tally. It remained blank.

Goldwater himself? "He's feeling fine," Wagner said.

The defeat seems certain to shake or snap the grasp of Goldwater and his conservative allies on the councils of the Republican party.

Goldwater once said he did not think he would get another shot at the presidency in 1968 if he lost in his bid against Johnson.

But Kitchen's statement seemed to indicate the conservatives had no intention of letting go.

Goldwater's argument in the first place was that Americans given a clear-cut choice between a Republican conservative and a Democratic liberal would rally to the Republican. That was the theme he stressed in 10 months ago.

"I am convinced millions of Americans share my belief in those principles . . . ," he said. "I will offer you a choice, not an echo."

The devastating loss left Goldwater's own future — political and personal—clouded.

SENTENCED COMMUTED

OTTAWA (CP) — Kenneth Lloyd Meeker, 31, sentenced to hang Nov. 10 for the 1963 sex slaying of a 13-year-old girl near Mission City, B.C., had his sentence commuted by the cabinet to life imprisonment Tuesday night. The announcement was made by the solicitor-general's office. Meeker was convicted at New Westminster, B.C., on Nov. 29, 1963 and sentenced to hang. Appeals to the British Columbia Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court of Canada had been rejected.

KENNEDY WINS U.S. SENATE RACE — Former Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy speaks to campaign workers at rally at Statler Hilton Hotel in New York early Wednesday after Republican Sen. Kenneth B. Keating conceded defeat. At his side is his wife, Ethel. With them is his brother-in-law, Stephen Smith, and Mrs. Smith. TUESDAY, Nov. 3, 1964

The Commons went into its eighth day of debate on the government's request for the funds needed to pay November and December bills totalling more than $740,000,000.

Jack Bigg (PC—Athabasca) said Liberal support of the flag committee recommendation for a single maple leaf flag indicated a lack of faith by Liberals in their own leadership.

Creditiste leader Real Caouette said there should be removal of "socialist and Communists" who control CBC programming.

The day's debate ended with approval of the government's pre-bill resolution for the needed funds and first reading of the money bill.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 4

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to continue debate on second reading of interim supply. The Senate meets at 3 p.m.

Life Insurance Firms Given More Leeway

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—The number of Canadian corporations whose shares could be purchased by the life insurance companies would be increased by an estimated 44, bringing the total to 185 under the new investments rules proposed by the government.

Richard Humphreys, federal superintendent of insurance, told the Commons banking and commerce committee Tuesday that this estimate was prepared for him by the investment officers of several large Canadian life companies.

He said the main purpose in changing the investment rules is to allow the life companies to purchase shares of foreign subsidiaries which, under the government's tax and other inducements, offer some of their shares to Canadian investors.

Mr. Humphreys said that even under existing investment rules the life companies were able to make "substantial investments" in the recent $95,000,000 offering by Union Carbide of Canada, previously a wholly - owned subsidiary of an American firm.

Replying to MPs, he said he believes that the shares of Alas Steel, Canadian Oil Companies and Labatt Breweries probably were eligible for life insurance company investment under the rules as they existed when these firms were subject to foreign take-over bias.

HUGE ASSETS

The 38 Canadian life companies at present have assets of about $10,500,000,000 at the end of 1963. They thus represent one of the largest investment pools in the country.

Federal legislation now allows them to invest up to 15 per cent of their assets in common stocks with a seven-year dividend record. In addition, they can buy any securities they choose up to a limit of five per cent of assets. This is the so-called "basket."

Under the proposed change, the life companies would be able to invest in the common shares of any corporation which for five years has had sufficient earnings to pay a four-per-cent dividend, regardless of whether the dividend is actually paid. The overall limit would be raised to 25 per cent of assets. The basket would rise to seven per cent.

Mr. Humphreys said that at the end of 1963 the Canadian life companies had about four per cent of their combined assets in the form of common stock, although the percentage ranged widely among individual companies. Some would likely take advantage of the proposed new freedom but he did not expect any "startling change."

Two Charged With Theft Of Jewels

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A justice of the peace sat November 13 for a preliminary hearing Tuesday for two men charged with the theft of jewels from the New York Museum of Natural History.

The two, Jack Murphy, 27, and Allen Kuhn, 26, both of Miami, remained free under bonds totalling $20,000 set on federal and New York State charges.

Justice of the Peace Hugh Duval Jr. set the date after the two were formally charged Tuesday with being fugitives from New York. They face burglary charges in that state.

They also were charged with interstate transportation of stolen property. However, the jewels, which include the priceless Star of India sapphire, as large as a golf ball, the 100-karat DeLong ruby, have not been recovered.

Also charged in the burglary was Roger Clark, 28, arrested in New York and released under $12,000 bond. He admitted being the lookout for the burglary and said Murphy and Kohn were the ringleaders.

Sidelights on Election

PIKEVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Nobody stayed around the voting booth at John Creek school longer than necessary Tuesday.

The polling place had an unmistakable aroma—despite the use of fans and deodorants.

Someone turned a skunk loose in the school Monday.

It was cornered in the cafeteria and used the only defence at its disposal.

BOSTON (AP)—Noel Day, a Negro independent candidate opposing House Speaker John W. McCormack for Congress, said he will file a complaint with the city election division about a number of voting-machine levers under his name which did not work.

NEW YORK (AP)—Some 350 Bronx voters voted Tuesday for the wrong candidates for Congress because of a voting-machine error.

The faulty machine was impounded after eight hours of voting when it was discovered that the machine listed four candidates for Congress in the 23rd district.

The machine was being used in the 24th congressional district.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A. P. Dunton, determined to vote, outwaited a power failure to cast his ballot.

The power failure cut off the electricity at his voting machine moments after Dunton entered the booth. He waited at the machine for 25 minutes until power was restored.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Republican presidential nominee Barry Goldwater says U.S. election campaigns are so long it is silly.

"It's costly and tiring and tiring with the people," too," Goldwater said after voting Tuesday.

"They ought to be like the British elections.

"If you can't get your point across in four weeks, you ought to give it up."

COLUMBUS, Ind. (AP) — Democrats used a plane and a helicopter to whisk a retired farmer more than 100 miles to assure one more vote for President Johnson.

Word was received that A. L. Arnett, 86, was visiting in Rochester, Ind., and was unable to return to his home near Columbus to vote.

Don Thompson, county Democratic chairman, said a private plane was sent to pick up Arnett at the Rochester airport and fly him to Franklin, north of here, and a waiting helicopter.

The helicopter, used for campaigning by the Democratic congressional nominee, was ready to fly Arnett to a farm near his polling place.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A gunman robbed a bus driver of $90 early Tuesday and then asked for a political favor.

Driver Leroy McWilliams said the gunman told him:

"Do me a favor. Vote for Johnson, not Goldwater."

Orval Faubus (Dem.), re-elected for an unprecedented sixth two-year term as governor of Arkansas, defeating Republican Winthrop Rockefeller, grandson of John D. and brother of New York's Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller. Faubus, 54, became known during the 1957 Little Rock integration crisis.

Adam Clayton Powell (Dem.), controversial Negro from Harlem, re-elected for the 10th time to the House of Representatives from New York. The 55-year-old minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church was under strong fire during the last House session for government - paid junkets abroad.

Sud Wilkinson (Rep.), for 17 years an ultra - successful football coach at University of Oklahoma, defeated in his first bid for election to the Senate. The 54-year-old native of Missouri lost to Fred R. Harris, 33-year-old Democrat. Wilkinson strongly endorsed Barry Goldwater.

John B. Connally (Dem.), re-elected governorship of Texas. He was seriously wounded while riding in the car in which President John F. Kennedy was fatally wounded in Dallas last November.

Edward M. Kennedy (Dem.), re-elected to Massachusetts Senate seat he won two years ago to fill unexpired terms of his brother, the late President John F. Kennedy. Kennedy, 32, is still confined to hospital with a broken back suffered in a June airplane crash.

For more than a decade he hasn't campaigned for the House seat to which Massachusetts voters have been electing him since 1928.

Robert Taft (Rep.), 47-year-old son of the late Senate Republican leader and grandson of the late President William Howard Taft, won Senate seat in Ohio.

Harry F. Byrd (Dem.), re-elected to the Virginia Senate seat he first won in 1933. Byrd, head of the Senate finance committee, refused in this election to support either Johnson or Goldwater.

Percy, 45-year-old president of a camera company, had been mentioned as possible presidential material if he could unseat Kerner.

Bodies Recovered

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (CP) — A provincial police diving squad Tuesday recovered the bodies of three Toronto hunters who were drowned Monday with a companion when their boat capsized on Oxbow Lake, about 20 miles east of here.

Police identified the bodies as those of George Collins, 50; Eli Codner, 45, and Frederick Wilkey, 28.

The body of 34-year-old David Tweedale, also of Toronto, was found Monday clinging to the overturned boat.

The four men went to the Huntsville area during the weekend to hunt deer and were staying at a cottage believed owned by Wihbley.

American People Rejected Goldwater Call for Tougher Approach to Communism

By ARCH McKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson's smashing election victory indicated today to some observers that the American people rejected Senator Barry Goldwater's call for a tougher approach to international communism.

Political observers also said that also applies to two other Goldwater policies: More nuclear authority in the field for military commanders and expanded American support for toppling Fidel Castro's Cuban regime.

These were parts of the Republican candidate's foreign policy, which he coupled with accusations that Johnson was soft on communism and had—by "drift, deception and defeat"—thrown the Western alliance into a "shambles."

Johnson and the Democrats painted Goldwater as a trigger happy threat to peace.

HAND STRENGTHENED

Internationally, a quick appraisal of Johnson win suggested that his hand would be strengthened both in dealings with the Western alliance and with the Communist bloc.

South Viet Nam's steady erosion and civil strains within the Atlantic Alliance will capture Johnson's attention immediately.

Domestically, the margin of his own election plus expanded Democratic strength in Congress seems to give Johnson a carte blanche legislatively.

He managed to squeeze a lot of legislation through Congress after the filibuster which blocked civil rights legislation for weeks last summer.

But he failed to get approval for a medical care program for persons aged 65 or more, for educational aid and for a special anti - poverty program in the 11-state strip called Appalachia.

MAY NOT PUSH

He is not expected to push any extension to the civil-rights legislation, or immediately at least. Instead, as a keen practitioner of middle - of - the-road policies most like you to attract a political consensus, he would prefer to let the most recent legislation shake down without inserting any more hostility in the rebellious South.

He has his problems

One springs directly from the broad diversity of support he attracted, attributable in part to a strong tide of anti-Goldwaterism.

Johnson's long - range goal is believed to be a course of action retaining as much of that support as possible for 1968. Then, it is felt certain, this victim of a massive 1965 heart attack would like to seek a second full term of four years if he is able to.

Police Action During Visit Of Queen Shown

QUEBEC (CP) — The attorney-general's department Tuesday showed a 20-minute movie of police in action during the Queen's visit to Quebec City.

The film, taken by members of the Quebec Provincial Police, show at one point a man being hit by municipal policemen.

The 16-millimetre movie, witnessed by 30 newsmen, also showed the meeting of the Separatist Rassemblement Pour l'Independance National which was held the night before the Queen's arrival.

Another episode included in the film was the arrest of former Montreal boxer, Eugene Chartrand during a demonstration outside the legislature building and a demonstration in his behalf outside the city jail.

It included shots of police striking a man identified by members of the audience as Dr. Robert Vachon of Montreal.

Dr. Vachon has sent formal notice to the city seeking $25,000 for injuries and humiliations he says he suffered at the hands of municipal police during the Royal Visit Oct. 10-11.

Canadian Businessmen Welcome Johnson Victory

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian businessmen were quick to welcome President Johnson's election win Tuesday with many expressing the hope it offers renewed chances for progress toward knocking down international trade barriers.

With the recent success of the newly - elected Labor government in Britain in ousting a 15-per-cent surcharge on many-import categories fresh in their minds, there was obvious relief at President Johnson's defeat of Senator Barry Gold water.

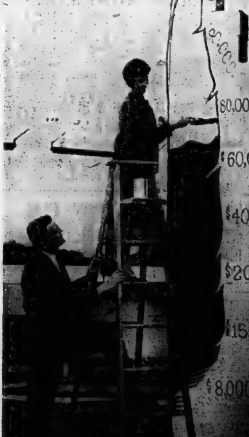
"The Republican party has traditionally been associated with protectionism," politics in years gone by, and it would have been difficult to guess what might have transpired in the Kennedy round of negotiations if Goldwater had won," James McAvity, president of the Canadian Export Association said in Montreal.

The Kennedy round of tariff negotiations at Geneva is aimed at achieving a major reduction of international trade barriers.

A. A. Cumming, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said in Toronto that Canada was only welcome President Johnson's victory.

LOOK TO FUTURE

"In matters of trade he has already shown his support to the raising of barriers between the U.S. and Canada and, now that he has been given a mandate of his own by the American people, we can look forward with confidence to a continuation of this kind of good-neighbor policy."



The Canadian importers' Association in Toronto also noted that the Democratic party often fares more hope for success in the Geneva tariff talks, in which Canada is taking part.

George Heer, president of the Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges and former federal trade and commerce minister, said in Bagotville, Que., he is "very pleased" with the election result.

"We have always believed, and stated so publicly, that it would be a very serious thing for the world and Canada in particular if Mr. Goldwater has been elected president, because his approach to quite a few issues is that of a right - wing reactionary whose thinking is completely out of tune with that of the modern-day world. . . ."

Collections to date total $76,075, over $3,000 more than ever before raised by a United Appeal in Belleville. Holding the ladder for Mrs. Vance is Jim Wright, manager of the Union Carbide in-plant campaign that raised $1,230 for the Appeal this year. Union Carbide's target this year was $1,170.

Eight Perish Early Today in Chicago Fire

CHICAGO (AP) — At least eight persons, five of them children, died early today in a fire which swept through an apartment hotel on the city's south side, hospital and police officials said.

Twelve persons, including two firemen, were taken to hospital.

Fire Commissioner Robert J. Quinn said the victims apparently were killed by smoke inhalation.

Quinn said some 20 of the 120 residents of the four-story brick building were rescued by firemen.

Quinn said the fire apparently began in the first floor and smoke quickly spread through the interior of the building. He said flames were confined to the first floor. Quinn said the cause had not been determined. He estimated damage at $30,000.

Girl's Baby Born in Barn, Charge Parents

ALEXANDRIA, Ont. (CP) — The parents of a 13-year-old girl who gave birth to a baby in a barn on her father's Lancaster area farm Oct. 18 were given a two-year suspended sentence Tuesday on a charge of abandoning a child under 10 years old. Their names were not released.

Police laid the charge after finding the baby boy wrapped in newspapers in a car in a barn. They said the girl claimed the girl gave birth to the infant unassisted. Both were reported in good condition.

Lancaster is 15 miles east of Cornwall.

Leningrad

City of a Mighty Monarch And Supreme Communist

By JOHN BEST

LENINGRAD (CP) — The ghosts of two famous men—one a monarch, the other a revolutionary—hover over this former seat of kings at the mouth of the Neva River.

The revolutionary is Lenin, architect of the 1917 Bolshevik uprising that changed the course of history, and, incidentally, removed Leningrad from the limelight of world capitals.

The monarch is Peter the Great, who two centuries earlier founded the city on some swamp islands where the Neva completes its 50-mile journey from Lake Ladoga to the Gulf of Finland.

These days Lenin holds the historical spotlight. His picture is on display in a thousand public places. And although his remains are entombed in Moscow, almost any corner of Leningrad connected with the late Bolshevik leader has long since become a Communist shrine.

But Leningraders still can't strike a strong emotional attachment to Russia's most illustrious monarch.

Peter founded the city in 1703 when he was fighting a war against Sweden. Nine years later he moved the capital here from Moscow.

CHANGED NAME

Originally called St. Petersburg, its Germanic name was abandoned in favor of the Slavic Petrograd in 1916 when Russia went to war against the Germans.

The name was changed to Leningrad in 1924 in tribute to the revolutionary chieftain who died Jan. 21 that year.

It was the capital for a little more than 200 years, until Moscow was again made the seat of government by the Bolsheviks in 1918.

It calls itself "the city whose every stone knows Lenin," but in its heart there is also a place for Peter, fourth ruler of the Romanov dynasty, who governed Russia with an iron fist and enlightened ideas from 1725 to 1909.

Nor is this sentimental tie with the pre-revolutionary past confined to one monarch. Other czars and czarinas are remembered with varying degrees of affection and respect, though you won't find their names in the tourist guides.

Chief of them is Catherine the Great, wife of Peter's grandson. Leningraders admire the German-born girl who, though she didn't have any particular grip on the affections of her subjects and was target of numerous conspiracies, managed to cling to the throne from 1762 until her death in 1796. It was under Catherine's direction that the Winter Palace was built.

IGNORED IN SCHOOL

An intriguing exercise is to ask a leading citizen which of the two great men—Lenin or Peter—has the greater emotional appeal to the average resident. The answer is likely to be that while Peter was a great man, his influence was felt almost exclusively in Russia while Lenin's impact was felt throughout the world.

"If you ask school children, I don't think they'll say that they think much of Peter the Great, or that they owe him very much," says Boris Feld, an official of Leningrad Pravda.

The implication seemed to be that Leningrad history teachers have little time for Peter the Great, a point that makes the enduring lustre of his name all the more remarkable.

A visitor, in any case is inclined to think Leningrad owes a lot to Peter. He brings in tourist dollars.

Russians may come to commune with Lenin and visit the endless collection of museums and landmarks connected with his name, but they stay to absorb some of the lore of the czars.

And foreign tourists, not so much interested in Lenin, come here in droves to soak up the past.

BURIED IN FORTRESS

Some prominent sights on the tourist circuit are Peter and Paul Fortress, first structure erected when Peter began building the city in 1703, which encloses a cathedral - museum where the monarch is buried, the Central Naval Museum where the first boat of Russia's navy (launched by Peter) is housed; and Peter's Galleries in the huge 2,000,000 - exhibit state museum called Hermitage.

A heroic statue of Peter, astride a prancing steed, stands in the middle of Decembrists' Square near the Neva. The square, ironically, is named in honor of revolutionaries who staged an abortive uprising against czarist autocracy in December, 1825.

Twenty-five miles from Leningrad, down a road strewn with closed or converted mansions once the property of nobles, is the town of Petrodvorets, where Peter built a summer residence. Many damaged during the war, the buildings are being restored.

Just below the main structure is an array of 130 fountains, described as a masterpiece of the 18th century hydraulic art.

At the edge of the estate, near the shore of the Finland Gulf, is a small building where Peter liked to retire for reflection and relaxation. It contains his personal collection of paintings, a study and a small lab of intricate workmanship made by the monarch himself—he is reputed to have been active in some 18 professions and crafts.

Discussing Peter in hushed tones, a guide at the house says that among other things he was notable for his height, given by historians, she says, as two metres, 14 centimetres, or just over seven feet.

"So he was a giant in every way," she declares, her voice quivering with pride.

ROYAL TREAT — Peter the Great built a summer palace with a complex of beautiful fountains at Petrodvorrets, 25 miles southwest of Leningrad. Some of the 130 fountains are still in use. A canal leads from the front of the main palace to the Gulf of Finland. Soviet workers and their families go there for relaxed strolls through the 450-acre estate once the preserve of royalty. Seven per cent of all drivers in Canada are under 20 years of age, but they are involved in 14.6 per cent of all car accidents.

The two boys were the 23-year-old woman's 11th and 12th children under 16 years.

When the first pairs of twins, Lisa and Larry, were born three years ago, Mrs. Beyers said she had difficulty believing it. Since then twins have been no surprise at all, she says.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Since that day quite a few years ago when the late "Sam Trood of Currie" enlisted the aid of a few Upper Canada "separatists" and decided to invade the domain of the western giants of the Ontario Minor Hockey Association, four trophy mansions have been erected in the hockey wigwams of this neck of the woods.

True, we've wrested a few baubles from the heavily-congested areas of such western palefaces as the Appels, the Partners, the Christies, the Wolchuks, the Rosburgs, and whatnot, and in the doing have brought hockey to thousands of youngsters east of the Great Yonge Street Divide.

Times have changed since the intrepid Currie-led explorers first crashed the OMHA sanctum sanctorums of Toronto hotels' convention halls.

We were not the boys of bearded, bronzed, buckskin garbed couriers-de-bois they expected. We spoke English, ate our meat cooked, rode unarmed, and were mentally and otherwise equipped to meet them at the new-ower tables.

We developed men who had a natural ability to qualify to sit at the seats of the directorate mighty. Such round-table knights as the Carries, the Watkins, the Patersons and others of equal ability, have upped our status to the point where the cause time we have been addressed by our first names.

"Upper Canada," as the puck potentates of the western hinterlands dubbed our particular share of Ontario, now enjoys equal billing OMHA-wise with the blood brothers south and west of Toronto.

We share all their good things, their co-operation, friendship, camaraderie and what-have-you with the exception of one—provincial championships.

And, this year, we're going to do something about it. In fact plans have already been completed.

For some years the Quinte and districts-east, minor hockey champions have walked down the provincial division aisles as bridesmaids. There has been the odd wedding but you can number them on the proverbial hon's upper plate.

Here in the city, the young knights of the playoff tourna years ended during the regular season, but collectively never had enough playing experience to meet outside competition. And this through no fault of competent coaches and officials.

Their playdowns experience usually consisted of one trip to Kingston and that was it. The ability was there, I believe, but it could not be properly developed because of lack of practice through competition.

To remedy this situation the OMHA's Doug Fetterson and EMHA officials, with those of outside communities, have come up with a new OMHA Group taking in six centres and five classifications.

The classifications range from novice (formerly squirt) through to juvenile. Communities represented are Belleville, Wellington, Picton, Napanee, Gananoque and Trenton. Lou Jeffries of Gananoque has been named the group convener.

Five of the centres have entered teams in all classifications with the exception of Trenton which confined its series to the novice class.

The group will play a regular schedule which starts either November 11 or 18, through to February 3rd. The teams will enter the OMHA playdowns or play off for the privilege. Belleville is the only "A" entry.

In the city the new OMHA group clubs will not participate in city league play. The coaching staff looks like a managerial dream. Moe Hunter will mentor the novices; Lionel Reilly, peewees; Floyd Crawford, bantams; Lou Sauk, midget, and Bob Taylor, juvenile.

The new setup looks like a move in the right direction, particularly for city entries in OMHA competition. They will get the benefit of practice and regularly scheduled games instead of hodge-podging to widely-spaced exhibition tilts.

With a full schedule of play under their collective belts they will be better equipped to meet the challenge of outside competition.

Even with their lack of schedule-play experience in the past, the youngsters gave a fine account of themselves. This season they should do better. And there should be no excuses.

'Planted' Arm Is Success

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—A spokesman for University Medical Centre said Tuesday that doctors are pleased with the appearance of basketball player Bob Swafford's right arm, restored Monday after being torn from his body by a rapidly rotating water extractor machine.

Swafford was doing his laundry in the Oklahoma State University athletic department laundry at the time of the accident. Teammate Gary Hansmann, a pre-medical student, administered first aid to the six-foot-nine junior.

A five-surgeon team at the medical centre re-implanted the arm in an eight-hour operation.

The arm looks as good as it did yesterday," the spokesman said, "and the doctors are pleased about that. Circulation is adequate and so far there are no problems."

Doctors said the first 72 hours after re-implantation are the most critical period but a threat of infection will remain for a week to 10 days.

Reduce Stadium Capacity

MONTREAL (CP) — McGill University announced Monday it is cutting by 4,000 seats the capacity of Molson Stadium, home of Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference.

The present capacity is 26,215. Harry Griffiths, McGill's athletics director, said the university will remove and none seats under the stadium scoreboard to restore track facilities to full capacity for the 1965 season.

The cutback will mean a revenue loss of approximately $150,000 to Alouettes next season if they keep playing their home games at the stadium. But Nelson Ct i, owner Ted Workman has announced plans for a new stadium to be opened in time for the 1965 season, but he is said to have run into financial problems.

"Our athletes have been unable to train properly in recent years because of the fact the track has been monopolized by seats," Griffiths said.

The Alouettes have played their home games at the stadium since 1954.

ESKIES CLAIM TWO

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference Tuesday acquired quarterback Junior Ah Edge from Ottawa Rough Riders and guard - linebacker Bob LeBlanc from Montreal Alouettes, both for the $200 waiver price. Edge, from North Carolina, went to Hamilton Tiger-Cats early this year but was later traded to Ottawa. LeBlanc, a graduate of Boston College, spent three years with Montreal.

Three goals and two assists in 57 games may not seem like much. And, frankly speaking, it isn't.

But Chicago Black Hawks weren't overly disappointed with the output of rookie centre Stan Esposito last season. After all, with centres Stan Mikita and Red Hay on the team a third line pivot doesn't get too much ice time.

Esposito, 23-year-old native of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., now is showing that his value to the club has improved.

He triggered the winning goal Tuesday night as Chicago edged New York Rangers 3-1 before a slim gathering of 9,722 Hawks fans in the only game played. The victory moved Chicago into a fourth-place tie with the Blueshirts.

Esposito fired what proved to be the margin of victory 15 seconds after Ken Wahl's eight goal of the season broke a scoreless deal at 12:31 of the second period. Vic Hadfield scored for the Rangers in the third.

SENT HAWKS AHEAD

Hull blasted a 30-foot shot through a screen of players to beat Marcel Pelle and Esposito quickly followed up, taking the puck with his back to the net and slipping it behind Pelle 3-0 with a quick backhander.

Hawks goalie Glenn Hall, who made 32 saves as New York outshot Chicago 33-27, lost his bid for a shutout in the last of the final period when Hadfield fired his third of the year.

Esposito now has four points on two goals and two assists, just one point short of his production last season when he was possibly a little overanxious upon reaching the NHL from St. Louis of the Central Pro League.

The Big Seven

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Hull scored his eighth goal of the season Tuesday night as Chicago Black Hawks defeated New York Rangers in the only National Hockey League game played.

The goal raised the Chicago left winger into a tie with Toronto's Andy Bathgate for third place in the NHL Big Seven. Both have eight goals. Montreal's Jean Beliveau leads the scoring parade with 10 points.

Following are scorers and points as they appear on the scoring list compiled by the league's official statistician, based on games played Tuesday night:

	G.	A.	PTS.
Mikita, Chicago	6	5	11
Mahovlich, Tor.	4	7	11
Hull, Chicago	8	2	10
Bathgate, Toronto	8	2	10

Delvecchio, Det.	4	5	9

Aces Swamp Hornets 8-2

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec Aces scored five goals in the last nine minutes midway through the third period Tuesday night to swamp Pittsburgh Hornets 8-2 in an American Hockey League game watched by 7,545 fans.

Quebec's attack was led by Cleland Mortson with two goals and singles by Cecil Hoekstra, Jim Morrison, Red Sarrasin, Jean-Guy Gendron, John Hanna and Wayne Hicks.

BCI Seniors Win Quinte 'A' Grid Title

By ROBERT SUFFILLA

B.C.I. won the COSSA Bay of Quinte Junior "A" football championship by defeating QSS 14-12 in a hard fought game, played yesterday afternoon at Quinte.

A single kicked by BCI's Ron Walsh late in the final quarter of play proved to be the difference.

Quinte marched 95 yards early in the first quarter to score their first TD. Fine runs by Paul Whalen and Mike Morton preceded the touchdown gallop by Grant Vandervoort from four yards out. The convert was missed.

An interception on the Quinte 30-yard line by Kirk Light foot paved the way for BCI's first score. Ron Walsh garnered in the pass from Bill Hallam in the Quinte end zone. The convert attempt was missed, but in the second quarter Walsh kicked a single to give BCI a one point lead.

Alan Mott threw to Tom Lornie early in the second half for BCI's second major. The play covered 28 yards. A nifty 14-yard run by Terry Wallsby had set up the touchdown.

Harold Townsend's recovery of a BCI fumble for Quinte led to the loser's second major Mike Morton ground out two first downs to move the ball to the BCI 15-yard line. Will Schultz sprung Grant Vandervoort loose on an end run with a fine block for the major Marion Mcdoid scored the convert on a pass.

A 40-yard pass play to Tom Lornie set up the game winning single by Walsh.

Quinte drove 60 yards to the 25 of BCI, and with seconds remaining in the game tried for the tying single. A no-yardage penalty, however, was called against Quinte to end hopes of a tie.

HUTCH PERKS UP

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP)—Hospital officials said Tuesday that Fred Hutchinson, former Cincinnati-Reds manager, had passed up and taken more interest in his surroundings. The 45-year-old Hutchinson is suffering from cancer of the chest. He was taken to hospital Saturday after his condition worsened.

Trenton High School was the Bay of Quinte Junior "A" championship with a 17-6 decision of Quinte Secondary School. The game was played at Quinte yesterday afternoon.

The winner's one man team, Don Creighton gave Trenton an early 9-0 lead with a 30-yard field goal.

Quinte drove to the night yard line after the field goal, but there the drive ebbed, as Quinte fumbled into the arms of Trenton's Bob Pinks.

The rest of the first half was spent trading punts.

In the second half a Trenton punt was recovered by Trenton on the Quinte three-yard line. After two unsuccessful attempts at cracking the Quinte line, Creighton carried around and for the major. The convert was missed.

Creighton later kicked a single to give the Trentoners a 10-0 lead.

Quinte changed their tactics and started an aerial assault. led! Dafoe fell on the loose ball for Quinte, but on the next play Reg Bent intercepted a Quinte pass and returned it into the end zone for the T.D. The convert was kicked good by Creighton.

Red Wings Tie Generals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Red Wings battled to a 3-3 tie with Oshawa Generals Tuesday night and St. Catharines Black Hawks fought their way to a 5-3 win over Toronto Marlboros in a game marred by 68 minutes in penalties.

The tie holded Generals into a 13-point two-way tie with Toronto for second place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series while Hawks' victory moved them into a three-way tie for fourth with Peterborough and Montreal at seven points apiece.

Nick Libett gave Hamilton the tie half-way through the third period while captain Jimmy Peters got the other Red Wing goal. Bill Bannerman and Danny O'Shea scored for Generals.

Ken Laidlaw and Ken Hodge paced the St. Catharines attack with two goals apiece while Wayne Mahl, brother of Chicago and Les Borvin from Boston to Chicago Black Hawks and of Dennis Hull and Stan Mikita from Chicago to Toronto

"It's so bad a rum-a," Mr. Campbell said, still chuckling "that it has to be a box. If a deal of this dimension was in the works, it couldn't but have leaked out long before this."

Big Deal Amuses Campbell

MONTREAL (CP) — NHL President Clarence Campbell chortled and chuckled Tuesday night at a report that drifted in from Charlottetown about a three-way trade involving seven hockey players.

"Somebody," he said, "has been drinking a little screech."

The Charlottetown report which Mr. Campbell called "a pipe dream," told of supposed trades of Andy Bathgate, Terry Sawchuk and Kent Douglas from Toronto Maple Leafs to Boston Bruins; of John Bucyk and Lou Bovin from Boston to Chicago Black Hawks and of Dennis Hull and Stan Mikita from Chicago to Toronto

"It's so bad a rum-a," Mr. Campbell said, still chuckling "that it has to be a box. If a deal of this dimension was in the works, it couldn't but have leaked out long before this."

Has The Answers - 'Yes, No'

Sonny Training, Not Talking

By BO BROORING

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Sonny Liston has all the answers—"yes" and "no."

The man training hard to regain the world heavyweight title from Cassius Clay in their rematch Nov. 16 figures he's going to do just that. But he'd rather talk with his fists.

A dialogue with the man of few words goes like this:

"Sonny, you're favored for the fight, and . . ."

"What you want me to do, change that?"

"No, but are you pleased with that position or do y u care? Clay says he likes being the underdog."

"Don't care."

"Sonny, you're working much harder this time and seem to be enjoying it. Is that impression a true one?"

"Nope, not enjoying it. Just know what I have to do"

"Will you chase Clay around the ring like you did in the early going of the first fight?"

"No, just wait . . . bide my time."

"Sonny, you've gone through a lot of sparring partners already. Are you going to take it a little easier on them the rest of the way since you're in such fine shape?"

"Nope. I have to tighten up on 'em now."

And as it goes with the taciturn tiger, certainly no match for Cassius Clay in the talk department.

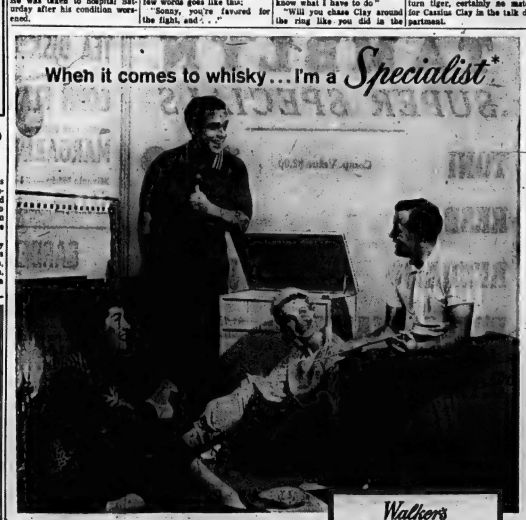
Casper Wins Playoff From Brown

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP)—Bill Casper holed a six-foot birdie putt on the third extra hole of an 18-hole playoff match, defeating Pete Brown Tuesday in the $25,000 Almaden Open golf tournament.

Casper and Brown went to sudden-death extra holes after finishing even on the 18-hole playoff with four-under par 68s.

Jerry Steelsmith, third man in the playoff, shot a 73 and dropped out after the regulation 18 holes.

Casper received $3,340 first-place money. Brown and Steelsmith split second- and third-place money with $1,900 each.



Fire Kills 34 Horses At Laurel

LAUREL, Md. (AP)—Fire destroyed a barn at Laurel race course Tuesday night, killing 34 horses and turning other frightened animals loose into the night.

At Laurel sportsman said 55 horses were believed to have been quartered in barn No. 21 where the fire started.

Firemen hosed down adjacent barns Nos. 20 and 22, preventing the flames from spreading.

Horses stabled at Laurel for the Washington, D.C., International Nov. 11 were reported safe.

Trimble Taunts Ottawa

Reveals Strategy

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Jim Trimble has thrown down a challenge to Ottawa Rough Riders by revealing what strategy his Montreal Alouettes will use when the teams meet Saturday in their Eastern Football Conference sudden-death playoff at the capital.

Trimble said he will use only a few offensive plays—the ones that worked best during the season—and will have his backfield in perpetual motion.

"All four of our backs are going to be all over the place, and I don't care if Ottawa knows about it or not," he said Tuesday night. "They're going to have a tough time defending them."

The backs are George Dixon, Nat Craddock, Jerry Fields and Rene Riopelle.

Alouettes are conducting light drills this week as several players are still sporting aches and pains from the final EDC game last Sunday against Hamilton.

"All the team is hurting pretty badly," Trimble said. "But I'm confident they'll all be fine Saturday."

George Dixon, last year's leading rusher in the East but stalled this season by injuries, was doing a lot of ball carrying at Tuesday night's scrimmages. Trimble said he is preparing Dixon to get a lot of running in the Ottawa playoff.

Dixon suffered a hip injury and a dislocated thumb the last time the two teams met Oct. 25.

170 Drivers Enter Big Rally

LONDON (AP) — More than 170 of the world's top competition drivers have entered Britain's most important auto rally —the Royal Automobile Club's International Rally of Great Britain, Nov. 8-13.

The gruelling event, which ranks in toughness along with the Monte Carlo rally, the East African Safari and the Belgian Marathon de la Route, will take contestants over a 2,528-mile route.

Starting from London, competitors will journey in to Wales, then north into Scotland, returning to London by a twisting route on the way south.

Eight countries, including Britain, are represented among the crews.

Sweden, which has captured top honors in the last four years of the British classic, has massed 21 teams this year.

Leading the Swedish contingent is Erik Carlsson in a Saab. He won the rally in 1960-61-62 in a similar car. Again his co-driver will be Gunnar Palm.

Tom Trana, winner last year, is another favored Swede. He will be in a works Volvo.

First man away will be Irishman Paddy Hopkirk in a tiny BMC Cooper similar to the one in which he won the Monte Carlo rally in January.

FINE COMPETITOR

In a similar car will be his Finnish teammate Rauno Aaltonen. There are two other Finnish drivers competing.

Norway extends the Scandinavian onslaught with three drivers.

East Germany will be competing for the first time.

There is one all-Italian entry —a Fiat privately owned and to be driven by Piero Trivulzio.

The Swiss are Jean-Jacques Thuner will be in a British works Triumph and South African Be Lungfield is a British works Ford.

Six cars with all - women crews will be contesting the Cup des Dames.

Mrs. Pat Moss-Carlsson, sister of Stirling Moss, and Miss E. Nystrom will team in a Swedish Saab.

Works entries again dominate the field, emphasizing how much publicity importance the big manufacturers place on success in the event.

Apart from the big British firms—British Motor Corporation, British Fords, Rootes, Standard Triumph and Rovers —Swedish Saabs and Volvos, the Swedish VW Factory, BMC (Sweden) and the British concessionaires of the French Simca works are all represented.

Vaughan Switch Paid Dividends

OTTAWA (CP) — "Anyone could have done it with that blocking."

That was little Ottawa halfback Ron Stewart speaking Oct. 11, 1960, the day he set an all-Canadian rushing record of 287 yards in scoring four touchdowns against Montreal Alouettes.

He was talking about Kaye Vaughan, mainly.

Vaughan had opened the holes for Stewart. On the Riders' last play of the game Vaughan alone threw three blocks to cut Stewart loose for a 59-yard touchdown dash to clinch the record which still stands.

More than Rider coach Frank Clair missed Vaughan chiefly in the defensive line, though he has occasionally played both ways.

But last weekend in Toronto, Clair moved Vaughan back into his old spot as a running guard, replacing Jim Cain. Dan Estes took over the guard spot on the other side after Mary Collins was hurt.

OPENED HOLES

The result: For the first time in many moons, Riders displayed the kind of outside blocking for which they once were renowned. Estes and Vaughan opened gaping holes for Stewart. Dave Thelen and newcomer Bo Scott as Rough Riders romped to a 26-5 victory over Argos.

Clair said Tuesday that on the basis of the Toronto performance he has decided to use Vaughan and Estes on the offensive line in Saturday's Ottawa-Eastern Conference semi-final here against the Alouettes.

"We have to second up them as running guards after their fine work in Toronto last weekend," he said.

Meanwhile, Collins still is suffering a groin injury and will be sidelined Saturday, John Komorowski may also be benched in favor of Bill Stelmaruk at defensive tackle.

SIGNS AS COACH

HOUSTON (AP)—Clint Courtney an American League catcher for 11 years, signed a contract Tuesday as a coach and bullpen catcher for Houston Colts of the National League.

Minor Hockey Results

A pair of O.S.D. teams made their mark in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association's juvenile division last night, not too successfully.

The Aces whitewashed O.S.D. Tigers 12-0 and Comets defeated O.S.D. Aces 5-1.

Comet goals were scored by DeRoche, Perry, Ellis, Sinclair and Muldoon. Herrington, Emerson and Harvey drew assists. G. Richardson potted the lone Wolves' marker, assisted by Tony Tuskin and R. Lang.

Four scored three times to spark the Aces' victory. Fleming, Muir, and Hannah each potted a pair and singletons went to Salter, Dyble and MacDonald. Diamond, Muir, Doran, Turner and Lancaster got helpers.

In a lone midget fixture, Leafs downed the Red Wings 5-1. Leaf goals were shared by R. Rosebush, Ellis, D. Lambert, R. Green and D. Allinson. Green also had an assist. K. Lang was the lone Wing marksman.

Two tie games were registered among three squirt league battles.

Leafs and Generals fought to a 2-2 deadlock. Peter Sunke fired both General goals and Stewart Boardman did the same for Leafs.

Hawks and Barons tied 1-1. Wayne Warner was the Hawks' scorer and Ken Hodgson had the Baron equalizer.

Maroons nipped Rangers 3-2 in another tight one. Warren Day scored a pair for the winners, Stephen Kirby adding the other. Paul Ackerman was the stingiest man on both Ranger goals.

Special exhibition games in squirt, peewee, bantam and midget will be played at Memorial Arena tonight, from 6:00 to 10:00 p.m.

The Tracks

GREENWOOD (CP) — Apple Jack Hanover Wayne Harris of Vancouver is riding like there won't be a tomorrow.

For the second straight day the 17-year-old rode three winners Tuesday and jumped into the lead in the tight jockey's derby.

Harris completed a $17.90 daily-double when he rode Better Ending in the second race after 33-year-old John LeBlanc of Sugarville, N.B., took the opener with Bega Bega.

Harris returned to win with King Arvon in the third and with Roman Thunder in the seventh.

Harris vaulted past Eric Walsh of North Sydney, N.S., in the jockeys' standings with 11 victories in eight days of racing. Walsh, blanked Tuesday, has nine.

Football's Flying Parson Was Tough

By ALEX MORIN

OTTAWA (CP)—To see him now, mild-mannered and serene in his book-lined study, it's hard to believe Rev. Earle E. Smith ever stood off a whole football team, ready to smash a chair over the head of the first man to come near him.

Yet there wasn't one member of the Toronto Balmy Beach team of 1927 who doubted for a minute that The Flying Parson would hesitate to clobber any body who tried to force a drop of demon rum down his throat.

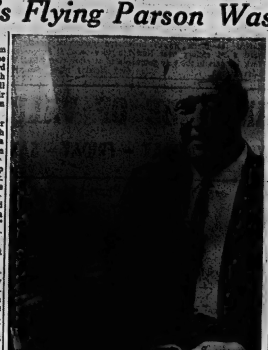
The team had just won the Canadian championship by defeating Hamilton Tigers "and the boys thought I might have a drink with them just this once," recalls Smith, the Beaches' flying wing.

He didn't then, and hasn't since.

The teetotalling divinity student at McMaster University who went on to become a Baptist minister got along fine with his teammates."I had to prove to them that I was sincere. After that everything was fine."

This doesn't mean, however, that he was always well-man nered on the field. He recalls with a smile the one time he became a "fighting parson" and was expelled from the game against Camp Borden at Toronto's Varsity Stadium.

LAID HIM OUT



"Jim Kidd was playing next to me and we went downfield together after the kick. Jim was ahead of me and tackled Joe Harding around the knees. Next thing I saw was Harding raking Jim's head with his cleats. I was so mad I saw red. I laid him out flat and got kicked out."

The rub came later when Keith, one of the great outside wings of his day, confessed that the head message was that he was pressing a painful knee twister on star halfback Harding.

Smith, who turned 60 in September and is only 11 pounds over his playing weight, has been minister of McPhail Memorial Baptist Church here for 11 years.

Although he's dead against mixing sports and liquor, he thinks it would be a good idea to mix more sports with the ministry.

The one criticism I have of some in the ministry is that they don't know how to talk to men. If a man curses and you shudder, the man feels rejected and the minister can't communicate."

FOOTBALL PLAYER IN 20s — Rev. Earle K. Smith, minister of McPhail Memorial Church in Ottawa, displays cresta of several championship football teams he played on in the 20s. A member of the Canadian championship Balmy Beach team in 1927, Rev. Smith was expelled from a game at Varsity stadium for hitting another player. Rev. Smith also played hockey during his six years at McMaster University. (CP Photo)

In that regard, sport was a great help to Smith. But five years as an army chaplain was "a real post-graduate course."

BROKE NOSE

His career with Balmy Beach lasted four years. His last season was 1928 when he played with the aid of a hinged contraption strapped to one knee so that he wouldn't further injure torn ligaments.

During his six years at McMaster he also played hockey for the university team.

His injury score was three nose fractures (two from football) and 21 stitches.

Smith's last hockey game was during the Second World War in England. "Rheumatic pains in the side for a few days and eventually went to see the doctor. He told me I'd better start acting my age—I had a couple of cracked ribs."

Smith likes the brand of football played in Canada today "I'd have to say it's a better game, but it isn't as much fun." In the 1920s the same men played both offence and defence "and got next of us were on 60 minutes; you got relief if you got hurt."

He says he thinks some of the players of his time would make the grade in today's game "but the two are hard to compare." In his day there was no forward pass, blocking wasn't permitted more than five yards beyond the line of scrimmage and there was no huddle.

PICKS REEVE

There was no pay either.

"They took out a $5.000 insurance policy on each of us in case we were killed. Apart from that they paid our doctors' bills.

"Since we weren't amateurs the most we could receive was a gift worth $35. Mind you, that looked like a lot of money to me. I was getting seven dollars a week for working four half-days in a wholesale warehouse."

Of those he feels could make the grade today after Jack Reeve as most likely choice. Reeve, Toronto Telegram sports editor, was a star with the Balmy Beach team.

"Reeve was such a nice chap but he could be the ugliest sight you're ever seen." Smith recalls with a laugh. "He'd come to rugby practice after lacrosse with his face all bandaged and would stand there with huge variations veins bulging out of his legs. I don't know how he did it."

National Horse Show
Jump Event To Canadian

NEW YORK (AP)—Jim Day, 18-year-old Toronto equestrian who won the Harrisburg show two weeks ago, continued his outstanding riding here Tuesday by capturing the first international jumping event of the National Horse Show.

Day, an architectural student at the University of Toronto, captured the West Point Challenge Trophy by the slim margin of one-tenth of a second as the national opened an eight-day run in Madison Square Garden.

Riding Mr. Dunabee, Day was timed in 38.5 seconds. Dr. Hugo Arrambide of Argentina riding Lanza Brava, was second; Tom Gayford of Aurora, Ont., handling Mapleleigh, and Rafael Jimenez of Mexico, piloting Halcon, were tied for third. Bill Steinkraus on the United States team, aboard San Lucas, was fourth.

None of the other three United States riders managed to get around clean. Kathy Kusner of Arlington, Va., on Unusual, onclime national open jumper champion, had eight faults and was clocked in 40.9 seconds.

Frank Chapot of Wallpack, N.J., handling Shady Lady, also had eight faults and was timed in 50.8, while Neal Shapiro of Glean Head, N.Y., riding Uncle Tom, had 12 faults and was timed in 43.2.

Sport Snapshots

By BOB TRIMBEE

EDMONTON (CP) — "Sports are the best means I know to eliminate racial prejudice," says David Ward, a handsome 26-year-old public relations officer who has known and felt the sting of intolerance.

"No matter what some sceptics might say, international competitions such as the Olympic Game do much to create international good will.

"Among competitors there is seldom racial intolerance. There is nobreakdown between rich and poor. The superior athlete respects those he has beaten because he knows his opponent has put out the best he can.

"As a child I could never understand why, because I was part Eskimo, I was the object of abuse. The beatings I took and the ridicule directed my way soon turned my feeling of frustration to bitterness

"Sports gave me something else to concentrate upon and took me away from the idle life where people have nothing to do but think about skin colors and prejudice."

Ward and his family moved to Edmonton from Chesterfield Inlet, N.W.T., 26 years ago. He graduated from high school here and later attended university in Louisiana and the state of Washington. He now is employed by the Credit Bureau of Edmonton.

FOUGHT BULLY

The problems of racial intolerance forced Ward into sports one day a boy among a group bullying him in a school-yard because of his Eskimo background challenged him to a boxing match.

"I knew nothing about boxing but when I started to refuse the challenge the boy's older brother stepped forward and said it was either the ring or a beating in the schoolyard.

"I figured it was easier to take a beating in the ring from the younger brother, so I agreed. I don't remember too much about the fight because I was so scared. But I knocked my opponent down, and the boxing coach who refereed the match asked me to turn out for the club.

"I learned quickly and won at least surface acceptance from schoolmates. They didn't bother me and I didn't associate with them."

In the years that followed Ward won numerous titles. At Washington State University in Pullman, Wash., he was captain of the boxing team and from 1960 to 1962 holder of the Pacific Northwest middleweight crown.

At Northwestern State in Natchitoches, La., he won the Southern Amateur Athletic Union light-heavyweight title.

In 62 fights Ward lost only five, and two of the defeats were at the hands of Willi Greaves of Edmonton who later turned professional and won the British Empire middleweight championship.

INJURED IN FOOTBALL

Actually it was football that prompted Ward to go to the U.S. colleges. He played for the junior Edmonton Huskies at 15. Johnny Bright, Edmonton Eskimos fullback, helped him get a football scholarship from Drake University in Iowa. But a knee and neck on a punt return in his final junior game and was forced to give up the scholarship.

Three years later he tried out with the Eskimos and was one of the last cuts. Import Charlie Hennegan, now an all-star flanker with Houston Oilers of the American Football League, was also cut but before he left he got Ward a football scholarship at Northwestern State.

In his second game there Ward broke a collarbone, but continued to see action as a place-kicker and punter. He transferred to Washington State because he couldn't stand the Louisiana heat.

Another fractured collarbone forced Ward to drop football at Washington State

"You'd never believe it, but I think all those neck and collarbone injuries were the result of my ignorance of how to wear my shoulder pads," he says. "I didn't know until I tried out with Eskimos again in 1962 that I was wearing my pads backwards. I guess no one ever thought I needed help learning how to wear pads properly."

TORE TENDON

Ward's football career ended in 1962 when he tore an achilles tendon during a game of touch football with a number of Eskimo. He hasn't bothered his boxing.

A stocky 170 pounds at five-foot-10, Ward has one year of amateur boxing officials. In 1957 he volunteered to spar with middleweight Dick Tiger of Nigeria when Tiger came to Edmonton to meet Greaves for the British Empire middleweight crown. He was suspended but later reinstated.

After the 1964 Olympic boxing trials, Ward criticized amateur officials for the method used to select team members.

"Sure I was bitter about failing to make the team on my second try, but I was just as bitter about guys like Ted Billingsley being left off."

Billingsley, an Edmonton fighter who has won 300 of 320 amateur bouts, was named as alternate.

"But the reason as didn't make the team was because only one other boxer entered his division at the trials. Officials said it was not good enough to judge his ability. What they forgot was that it wasn't Ted's fault no one entered his division. They could have looked over his record."

Nelson Family Celebrating 25 Years in Show Business

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If Hollywood has a first family, it's got to be the Nelsons—now celebrating 25 years in radio, movies and television.

Ozzie, Harriet, David and Rick and their brood have spent 21 of those years as a family show on radio and television. There's no end in sight.

"As long as David and Rick keep giving us pretty grandchildren," says Oz, "there will always be a Nelson show."

David's wife, actress June Blair has been a mainstay of the Nelson TV show for several years.

Now Rick's wife, blonde Kristin Harmon, is to become a regular.

"We've got a lot of scripts this year featuring Rick and Kris," says Ozzie. "We'll work the grandchildren, too."

David and June have a son, Rick and Kris have a daughter.

"And, of course," adds Ozzie, "Harriet and I are always available."

The Nelsons are an unusual show business family. No scandals, no divorces, no lurid head lines. And all completely down-to-earth, real people.

In person, they are much as they seem on television—with one exception Ozzie is no patsy.

GOOD AT EVERYTHING

If Hollywood has an authentic genius, it's Ozzie.

He is a man who has excelled in everything he ever tried—including the job of being a good father.

At 13, Ozzie was the youngest Eagle Scout in the United States.

At Rutgers, he was one of the best quarterbacks in the history of the famed birthplace of American football. He also was a champion boxer. He studied law and passed his bar examination.

But he never practiced because a band he had formed in college became so successful that it wouldn't let him.

"My law degree taught me how to read a contract, though," comments Ozzie.

As the Ozzie Nelson band became one of the name bands of the '30s, the leader married his pretty girl vocalist — Harriet Hilliard.

In 1939 the band came to Hollywood to play on the Joe Penner and Red Skelton radio in movies and Harriet, born of an acting family, had quite a movie career going for her.

Then The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet went on radio. She's had steady acting work every week since.

Ozzie, besides starring, also writes, directs and produces the show.

Rick, as a rock 'n' roll singer, is one of the U.S. teen-age idols. David, short-hair variety. David, along with Rick, does considerable movie work.

The Trots

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Scotch Flame, a three-year-old colt from Cloverdale Farms, Brownsburg, Que., took the featured $1,000 optimist club purse in a fog-enshrouded nine-race card at Garden City Raceway Tuesday night.

Even the track announcer was forced to pick up the horses at the turn into the stretch as fog engulfed the recently opened oval, limiting visibility to just outside the infield tote boards.

Because of the fog, timers were forced to suspend intermediary clockings and drivers were cautioned to watch their footing.

Scotch Flame came home a 1¼-length victor in the sixth and combined with second-place Robert McGregor, owned by G. J. Barron of Brantford, for a $34.00 quinella payoff.

Irish Valley won the first and, with Arro finishing on top in the second, provided a $109.10 daily double payoff.

YONKERS, N.Y. (CP) — Driver George Phalen registered his third winning ride of the card in Yonkers Raceway's $7,000 invitational pace when he piloted Smart Money to a sparkling 2:01 4-5 mile Tuesday night.

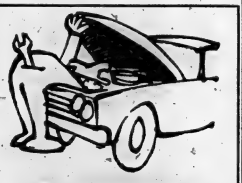
Smart Money, a five-year-old pacing son of Victory Song-My Scotch Belle, paid winning mutuals of $6.90, $3.70 and $2.70.

Galamigo, who took the first race for a $12.80 win payoff and Fabering, who won the second for a mutual payoff of $44.50, provided a $218.40 daily double payoff.

Blue Leads College Scorers

TORONTO (CP) — Quarterback Byrne Taylor of University of Toronto Blues has 36 points, six ahead of Ernie Walter of McGill Redmen in the Senior Intercollegiate football scoring race.

Taylor has three touchdowns, 13 converts, one field goal and two singles while Walter has 30 points on five touchdowns. Jim Young of Queen's Golden Gaels with 27 points, is third place with team-mate Heino Lilles and Vic Wozniuk of Toronto tied for fourth spot with 24 points each.



Ken Davidson of Toronto, Cal Connor of Queen's and Gary Grannser, Bob Israel and Rob Campbell, all of Western Mustangs, are tied with 18 points.

NON-HUNTER SHOT

HUNTSVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Arthur Reich, 58, of Columbus, Ohio, was shot and killed Tuesday after he went for a walk at a camp where he was visiting with 10 deer hunters. Mr. Reich, who did not hunt himself, was staying with the hunters at Moosehead Camp in the Lake Rosseau area about 20 miles west of here when he was shot by a .30-30 rifle bullet. Police said an inquest will be held, but no date has been set.

CENTRE OPENS

OTTAWA (CP) — A medical centre in Peru organized with the help of Oblate Fathers in Ottawa and Sisters of St. Joseph in Pembroke, was opened Tuesday, the two Roman Catholic orders announced. Rev. Sister Mary Emma and Mary Hedwig, both of Barry's Bay, Ont., and Rev. Sister Edama of Barrhead, Alta., headed the preparations in Peru. The Oblate Fathers sent three tons of medical supplies.

32 Stitches Required to Close Wound

DESERONTO — On Monday night a car driven by R. Loney was in collision with a car driven by Murray Brooks at the corner of St. George and Dundas streets. No injuries resulted, although both cars were severely damaged and traffic was held up until the tow truck arrived.

On Tuesday morning Mrs. Harold Tranter slipped while carrying a few things out to her car. She struck her head on the door and had to be taken to a doctor in Napanee. Thirty-two stitches were required to close the cut.

Council Buys Right-of-Way To Bay Shore

DESERONTO — At the regular meeting on Monday night, the Deseronto town council disclosed they have purchased the right-of-way to the bay shore west of College Street from Mr. Fred Carter. Purchase price was $1,200 plus 200 ft. of property fenced off from the remaining 1,000 ft.

Following the purchase a by-law was given third reading to establish a tentennial park on the property. Waterfront property is scarce in Deseronto and this location should make an excellent parkway.

Library Board Starts Project With Paintings

DESERONTO—The Deseronto Library Board received an acknowledging letter of appreciation from the Majesty the Queen for their interest in displaying coronation items during her recent visit. The items displayed were on loan from various citizens and dated from Queen Alexandra to Queen Elizabeth.

Two original paintings have been presented as a gift to the Centennial project. Others will be added over the three year period. One picture is a water color by Garnet Hazard of the post office and part of the town hall as seen from the park. The other is an oil painting by Muriel Andrews showing the street bonus on the Deseronto property. This guest house was part of a bowling alley when the property was owned by the Rathbun family.

On the evening of November 19th the members of the Deseronto Library Board will be entertained. They have shown an interest in the art reproductions purchased this year and shown on television last Wednesday by the librarian, Mrs. Lucy Wolfe, and publicity director Mrs. G. Wakelin.

WEEK OF BOOKS

Young Canada Book Week is being observed from November 15th to 22nd. This is also to be Forgiveness Week. All books overdue will be received with no fine being charged. The children in the town of Deseronto will also receive a book marker during this period.

Beginning with the first Wednesday in January, the library will be open from 7-9 p.m. for the convenience of the high school students, in order that they may make use of the many books of reference. During this time adults may exchange books, however no children from public school will be admitted.

The Hallowe'en display of art from the public schools is currently being shown. This will be followed by a display from the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary, and then a Christmas display.

Principal Urges Extra Class for Slow Learner

DESERONTO — The regular monthly meeting of the Deseronto School Board was held on Monday night.

The principal of the public school urged the board to consider the addition of a class for the slow learner. He pointed out that when the slow learner gets behind in the regular class room, he resented being in school, became unruly and became a candidate for delinquency. It was pointed out that the school requires at least, two and possibly up to four to effectively cope with the present crowded condition and to handle the slow learner. The board is obtaining further information.

Public Creates the Stars Not Producer - Goldwyn

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Samuel Goldwyn has sent this department a volume which contains facts and photographs of the 50 major films of his post-talkie period.

Goldwyn seldom does anything without a purpose, and the book is aimed at merchandising his movies to television. Commercialism aside, the book offers a valuable record of how the veteran and inveterate movie-goer to stroll down Nostalgia Alley.

Ah, what movies they were! And what a rich and diverse product was gifted from the Goldwyn touch over the years. Personally, I preferred the more serious Goldwyn. His best achievement seemed to be in the dramas, often in collaboration with William Wyler.

The prime attraction was The Best Years of Our Lives which somehow captured what most former soldiers and sailors were feeling after the war. And there were other Goldwyn-Wyler classics, too—Wuthering Heights, The Little Foxes, Desdemd, These Three.

Others of my favorites included The Hurricane, directed by John Ford; My Foolish Heart, Mark Robson; The Pride of The Yankees, Sam Wood; Stella Dallas, King Vidor.

PICKETS TOP DIRECTOR

Sam always picked — and sometimes fought with — good directors.

The Goldwyn musical comedies always seemed to have a Ziegfeldian touch — gaudily mounted, employing the best talent, but lacking in that rare breath of spontaneity that makes such entertainments complete delights.

Most of the Goldwyn entertainments employed three towering talents: Eddie Cantor, the early-talkies of 1930s, Bob Hope and Danny Kaye in the

HAYLEY MILLS' SCREEN IMAGE CHANGED BY "CHALK GARDEN" ROLE

Film star Hayley Mills is just 17 years old but already is on her second image. Speaking film-wise, of course.

Proud owner of an Oscar and the subject of more fan mail than any other teen-age motion picture star in the world, Hayley has been a box office favorite in the films of her first two film five years ago.

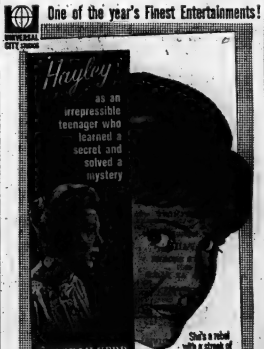
Until the present however, Hayley's screen image has been constant, representing the good, clean and wholesome attitude of the golden-haired teenager in such films as "The Parent Trap," "Whistle Down the Wind" and "In Search of Castaways."

Now she is soon in her first real acting challenge in a role quite different from Hayley's own normal personality. The part is that of Laurel in the Universal Technicolor release, "The Chalk Garden," which opens today at the Belle Theatre. In it Hayley appears with such seasoned performers as Deborah Kerr, Edith Evans and her own father, John Mills.

Hayley herself realizes that this film will drastically alter her screen image for the public.

"In other films I only had to play myself," she says, "but in "The Chalk Garden" I play someone who is very different from myself, a girl who has no happy family background and does all kinds of dreadful things to attract attention because she is starved for love.

"This film is a challenge and I know it. It just means I have to try and get into the skin of this girl.



Ross Hunter, producer of the highly dramatic story, was convinced that Hayley is the only young actress in the world who could portray this role. So convinced was he that Hunter waited three years for Hayley to grow up into the age the part demanded.

"When I first met Hayley I knew that she was the girl I had been searching for. She has such a wonderful, natural exuberance and talent," he says. "Knowing this I felt that Hayley has no idea of her own importance. She doesn't realize that she is already a big star and that she will become even bigger.

1964

Goldwyn has bravely included his biggest mistake in the 50. In 1946 he was convinced that Anna Sten would become a brilliant "star." He gave her the dramatic treatment in Nana with Phillips Holmes and The Wedding Night with Gary Cooper. The latter was married to Miss Sten with overwhelming ardor. Then when I learned," the producer said later, "that a producer does not create a star; the public does."

Two Women Candidates for Town Council

PICTON (Staff)—Two women are now among those interested in seeking seats on town council. Mrs. Gordon Kloss, wife of the vice-principal of Prince Edward Collegiate, announced last week that she would let her name stand. She has been joined this week by Mrs. Constance McGibbon who will also appear in the running. Her late husband, G. Nesbitt McGibbon, served many years as mayor and councillor. Dr. Lloyd Deckrill and Donald King are to date the only new men who will run for council.

START NEW BUILDING

Work has begun on a new building to accommodate the junior ranks club, at Camp Picton. The new building for use by ranks of corporal and below will measure 50 x 155 feet and one-storey in the centre portion. Contractor for this building is Andre Construction of Kingston.

Another Department of National Defence project is also under way at Point Petre. A new radar station is being set up by the 32nd Battalion Canadian Guards of Camp Picton as a shooting range and for special exercises. The site where the radar station is being installed is owned by the RCAF.

CARRY OUT CEREMONY

Members of "D" Company, Picton, the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, joined with other companies of the regiment in qualification practices on Barriefield Ranges, Kingston, recently. The practices is allotted two weekends, one in the spring and one in the fall to qualify the maximum number of men possible on the 7.62 m.m. C1 rifle.

This officers of the regiment carried Major Don Hobson, of Picton, off the ranges on their shoulders on the completion of the practice. This was a traditional ceremony and it is carried out because it was Major Hobson's last time on the Barriefield ranges. The pressure of business has forced Major Hobson to retire from active service in the Militia.

"D" Company, Picton, will be taken over in November by Capt. David Taylor who has served as second in command and training officer in the company since 1961.

The Rural Scene

PICTON (Staff) — The annual 4-H Agricultural Club's Award's Night will be held at the Queen Elizabeth public school, Picton, on Friday evening, November 6th, at 8.00 p.m. All awards including prize money merited in connection with the 1964 club program will be presented. Mr. D. A. Taylor, Agricultural Representative, Oxford County, and former Agricultural Representative of Prince Edward County, will be the special speaker. All who are interested in the 4-H Club program of Prince Edward County are invited to attend.

CALF, SWINE CLUB

On Friday, October 30th, the 4-H Calf and Swine Championship Show was held at the Ontario Winter Fair with some six hundred 4-H members from Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec counties taking part. Prince Edward had twelve entries in the Junior Holstein Division and placings are as follows:

First prize group: Anna Springings, 2 Bloomfield; Ken Parks, 2 Bloomfield; Barbara Donzee, 2 Demorestville. Second prize group: Kathy Alexander, 2 Hillier; Mary Whitford, 3 Picton; Jim Whiteford, 3 Picton; Dwayne Miller 10, Picton; Jerry Richards, 3 Demorestville; Keith Brooks, 4 Demorestville. Third prize group: Dorothy Parks, 3 Bloomfield; Linda Wiggins, 3 Cherry Valley and Donald Welbanks, 9 Picton.

SAFETY CONFERENCE

On Wednesday, October 28th, the Zone 3 Fall Farm Safety Conference was held in the I.O.O.F. Hall at Stirling. Counties represented at the conference were: Lennox and Addington, Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland, Peterborough, Durham, Ontario Victoria and Haliburton. A very interesting program was presented during the day. Special speakers on the program were Mr. Harry Walters, C.I.A., Peterborough who spoke on the causes and preventions of falls. It was pointed out by Mr. Walters that a great many accidents occurred each year within the home as a result of falls, and it is interesting to note that the Farm Safety Council of Ontario will emphasize this topic for 1965. Other speakers on the program included Mr. Hal Wright, Ontario Farm Safety Specialist and Arnold Spaul, executive member, Ontario Farm Safety Council, Sudbury.

During the afternoon program each County reported on the activities that had been carried on during the past year. The Safety Display competition was judged by Zone 3 in attendance with the winning entry being shown by Northumberland County. The Northumberland entry will represent the Zone at the Farm Safety Conference in Toronto Hall, in Guelph next winter. At the close of the Conference it was decided that the 1965 Zone 3 Farm Safety Conference would be held in Prince Edward County. Delegates from Prince Edward County who attended the Conference at Stirling were Mrs. George Vincent, R.R. 1, Picton; Mrs. Graydon Calnan, R.R. 2, Ameliasburg and Barton Cronk, R.R. 2, Bloomfield and Ivan Ball, Agricultural representative.

Four Negroes Win in South

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (AP) — Four Negroes were elected as Democrats to county offices in Macon County in an historic racial break-through Tuesday, but three other Negroes running as independents were defeated.

Macon, only county in Alabama with a Negro voting majority, was one of the few in the state where Senat.: Barry Goldwater trailed in the presidential election.

Democratic nominees for both county offices won election, and the Negroes running as independents lost to white opponents who went on the ballot as the Democratic candidates.

Three of the victorious Negroes were elected without opposition; the fourth ran ahead of an independent opponent.

Engineers Discourage Idea Of Lagoon System of Sewage Disposal in Municipality

CAMPBELLFORD — The Municipal Council met for their regular meeting on Monday evening with all members present except Councillor Hughes who is ill.

As sewage disposal treatment has been under consideration in the town since last June. A further report was received regarding the possibility of installing a lagoon system. The first survey made in regard to an activated sludge plant cost the town $2,500, now the further survey not to be in excess of $1,000 means that considerable money has already been spent. The lagoon report supplied by Canadian British Engineering consultants and read by Council on Monday evening was a negative report. The Engineers' completely discouraged all idea of a lagoon system.

After having heard the report on the lagoon situation Mr. A. Brown, a ratepayer present was asked for his opinion. Mr. Brown stated he was definitely not in accord with the report and suggested to Council they visit Stirling and Lindsay where lagoons are in operation and determine for themselves the efficiency of the systems at a lower cost of operation and installation. Another ratepayer present spoke of Lakefield, where an expensive survey had been made at the demand of O.W.R.C. only to find later their application was refused on the grounds of not being financially able to afford any sewage disposal expense at the present time.

NO ACTION TAKEN

The Implication was that departments of government, the Department of Municipal Affairs, the Municipal Board and Ontario Water Resources Commission should co-operatively determine the financial position of a municipality before causing the municipality to make expensive surveys only to have their application to build a sewage disposal system refused on the grounds of financial inability.

Council announced they were waiting for direction from Engineer Barker of OWRC as to what municipalities to visit, in regard to systems. No action was taken on the report.

In view of the negative report on a lagoon system Councillor R. Bennett asked what the next step should be in regard to activated sludge plant. Clerk E. M. Ibbey stated that a study should be made as to a rate structure to reduce the debt incurred which must be approved by by Ontario Municipal Board. Some suggestions have been frontage on lot charges, scale of flat charges, mill rate on taxes, mill rate on actual water users, the latter idea Clerk Ibey stated Campbellford Council have no mechanics to deal with. A study of rates was turned over to the financial committee for investigation.

The lagoon report was negative in that the industrial land owned by the town had not enough level land, lack of depth of soil on rock and Campbellford situated as it is in a valley no adjacent land was feasible.

GRANT FOR PARADE

Campbellford is again making plans for a Santa Claus parade, a grant of $100 was made by Council. Service clubs were to be asked to name two members each to the committee to organize the parade. Councillor R. Bennett was named as one from council, and Mayor Tanner proposed himself to be the other committee member from council.

The Campbellford Branch of the Canadian Legion requested permission to hold Poppy Day, also a two-hour closing of business from 10 a.m. to 12 a.m. November 11 and also asked citizens to attend the service at the Cenotaph. - Council granted the request as far as possible and also stated that a wreath was to be purchased as usual for the Cenotaph service.

A letter was read in council from Russell Rowe, M.P.P., in regard to application to purchase an additional fire truck pumper under special grant program sponsored by the Fire Marshal's Office.

The application had been approved but the special fund had been used up by the first ten applications. The Campbellford application is number 16 on the 20 or more on file so chances of procuring a pumper are slim indeed.

The town council of Trenton had contacted the local council in regard to high education costs now being borne by most municipalities. Trenton's idea was to urge the government to make it possible to secure more funds ear marked especially for education and Trenton is urging other municipalities to follow suit.

ANSWERED BY REEVE

"This form of madness seems to occur periodically in most councils due to the utter frustration of ever mounting mill rates and the inability to secure any other advantages for the municipality after educational costs are met." This appeared to be the gist of Reeve Fryer's answer to the Trenton request as he stated large influential organizations, such as Mayors and Reeves, Ontario Municipal Association, Ontario Towns and Villages and a host of numerous other representative bodies have repeatedly requested some steps be taken by the government to alleviate the situation. Recently the Mayors and Reeves presented their annual brief to Premier Roberts and his cabinet, making a similar request. Mayor Tanner attended as a member of the executive.

Reeve Jim asked, in light of the fact permission has now been granted for the extension of a sewer on North Front, to have a sewer connection. As there is a former resolution in the town records that no more sewer connections be made outside of town limits Reeve Free asked that the request be turned over to the legal committee.

George Totton, engineer, was present to assess the tenders for the construction of water mains and sewer work on Saskatoon Ave. and North Front. Two tenders were received: Tatham Co., Belleville, and Thompson Bros. Construction, Campbellford. As the Thompson tender was almost $6,000 lower in cost and fulfilled all obligations it was accepted as $17,497.75.

TENDER OVER ESTIMATE

Thompson Bros. tender for water main and sewer construction in Campbellford was 25 percent over estimated cost prepared by Engineer Totten, but Thompson Bros. being familiar with rock conditions in the area were in a position to assess the cost.

If labor costs are in the area of five or six thousand dollars, the cost can be reduced to a substantial degree, probably to three thousand dollars if done under the winter works program.

Engineer Totten made the observation some type of rock can be removed with back hoe in regular digging operation, whereas if granite or other hard rock is encountered one might run into difficulty in a tender with what is classified as digging or lifting rock with a back hoe. This is one of the danger spots in the letting of tenders.

LETTER RECEIVED

A communication was read from Mr. Kelleher re Housing program. Since last spring when Campbellford Council had received information re low cost housing apparently two revisions have been made in the legislation. As it stands now it appears the housing will be government financed, but in order to retain local interest the municipality will be asked to bear five% of any annual losses which occur, the municipality also waives all realty taxes in excess of 25 per cent per unit per annum, which means 75 per cent of taxes for occupancy by senior citizens, normal occupancy would pay normal taxes. The question was asked "How are senior citizens designated? The issue was left for further study.

In the survey just concluded of Holley and Dogmar Streets it was found a two-storey house is 17 feet on the roadway. However in a 60-foot road used 16½ right-of-way was given to use the street for the purpose formerly requested.

In the report of police department, Councillor Sharpe reported $51 had been spent for extra help for Hallowe'en. Councillor Sharpe felt the lack of any form of waste or vandalism justified the extra expense.

It was decided by motion that Constable Wm. Campbell be enrolled in Police College from January 4th to March 12. He will receive full salary while in attendance. In lieu of holidays police are given the privileges of attending police college. If after attending college a police contract with the municipality is broken the municipality where he goes pays the police college expense if severance is made in a certain time limit.

REPORTS ON PENSIONS

Finance Chairman Deputy Reeve Locke reported on the pension situation and gave three readings to by-law amended to include locking in of employee's contributions.

The Community Centre building again came up for discussion. It was suggested both Seymour township and Campbellford apply for an extension of the Centennial grant, which was due to close November 30th. Some optimism was expressed that the time for securing the grant would be extended as other municipalities also need more time to complete plans and other details of their centennial project.

If centennial grant conditions cannot be met, the Campbellford Community Centre will not receive the $13,000 which is the amount of the grant from Centennial fund.

A special meeting will be held jointly of Campbellford Council, Seymour Township Council and Seymour Fair Board on September 10th.

With approaching municipal elections, interest appears to be high, a number have expressed an opinion they might consider offering their services. Remuneration is not so inviting but travelling expenses seem to be the most lucrative.

AID TO INDIES

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Martin said Tuesday that part of Canada's increased external aid program will go toward assisting the proposed new West Indies federation. The islands of Barbados, Antigua, Dominica, Montserrat, St. Kitts, St. Lucia and St. Vincent have agreed on plans to federate.

Goldwater Dug Political Grave Before Starting Rac

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sena tor Barry Goldwater dug his political grave before he ever formally got into the presidential race. After that he sealed it.

Before saying he was a candidate—perhaps when he never dreamed of being one—in speeches and books he expressed views completely out of the mainstream of American life for the last 30 years.

Once in the race he became vague, hedged on some of his unpopular previous statements and used up an extraordinary amount of his time insisting he was not irresponsible.

It seems incredible that a presidential candidate would feel it necessary to protest he was not "trigger-happy." But he admitted that this charge against him by Democrats was one of his worst handicaps.

Thus in the slaughter inflicted on him in Tuesday's election by President Johnson, the voters who repudiated him in such overwhelming numbers had to consider two Goldwaters. Alive all His views and his judgment.

POOR PERFORMANCE

For a man who proposed to change the long-accepted view of American governments—a bi one, with broad responsib for the general welfare—he pu on an unimaginative performance. His proposed aims—both ing concrete.

His own hand - picked men who ran the party and the campaign for him—his brain trust must share responsibility for the inadequacies of his perform ance.

He and they were the constant critics of things as they are, but were almost totally lacking on the constructive side in the sense of offering specific solutions for what they said ailed the country.

After his shattering defeat Goldwater cannot hope for another try at the White House.

Of far more importance now to the future of the two-party system in American politics—and perhaps to the future of the country—is what happens to the Republican organization in the four years before the next election.

Our Oldest City Gets New Look

By ED WALTERS

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The new look is spreading over this oldest city in North America.

Steel and concrete buildings faced with plastic and glass overshadow old wooden dwellings huddled in the heart of St. John's.

The days of remaining Georgian architecture and Gothic columns are numbered.

Stark modernity is gradually replacing the peculiar blend of Old World architecture bent to the methods of New World builders. The city's newer sections are carbon copies of other Canadian centres of comparable size.

Actually, the trend away from the old started eight years before Newfoundland entered Confederation in 1949. At that time the city, perched on a steep hill sloping down to its beautiful harbor, extended only a short distance north of the top of the hill. All major commercial establishments were close to the water, mostly beside the harbor on Water Street.

Strings of attached houses climbed from the downtown area to taper off eventually into more fashionable residential districts on level land behind the top of the hill.

In 1941, the Americans arrived, and the housing shortage, already aggravated by the Second World War, became impossible.

BUILT MILITARY BASE

Studies seeking ways to improve the housing situation and erase the ugly slums already were under way.

The U.S. government began building Fort Pepperrell at the city's eastern end beside Quidi Vidi Lake.

Hordes of American servicemen and their families poured into the city, paying exorbitant prices in some cases for rented accommodation.

Meanwhile, demand for workers to build Pepperrell and other defence installations brought an influx of men from Newfoundland outports. Overcrowding was awesome. Beds had to be shared in some boarding houses.

St. John's, bursting at the seams and sensing correctly that population growth would outlive the war, took action. The St. John's Housing Corporation was formed under Sir Brian Dunfield.

Farmland, woodland and wasteland on the northern fringe of the city were bought and cleared. Lots and streets were laid out and building of houses began. It hasn't stopped.

At the end of the war, St. John's proper had a population of 50,000. Today it is 63,633, although the metropolitan area has nearly 100,000.

Downtown, modern buildings have begun to replace crumbling brick structures. In many more than 100 years old. The worst slums have been cleared from the city centre to be replaced by office buildings or concrete-brick dwellings.

TALLEST BUILDING

City council is planning another redevelopment project in the downtown area. About 140 homes and small business places, all in wooden buildings, will have to be razed.

The city's tallest building was opened this year. The 14-storey nurses' residence of the St. John's General Hospital cost $5,000,000. It provides accommodation for 361 student nurses and contains classrooms and a swimming pool.

Another imposing structure is the 11-storey Confederation Building, seat of the provincial government, situated on a knoll north of the city. Opened in 1960, it commands a view of historic Signal Hill and the narrows leading into the harbor.

The problems of modernizing a city more than 400 years old are obvious, but they're nevertheless trivial to some of the difficulties St. John's has faced in past.

The city was never properly "founded." It just grew. Tradition says its name stems from John Cabot's first visit to the harbor on St. John's Day in 1497.

Some accounts say there were 40 to 50 buildings along the "Lower Path" in 1520. Present-day Water Street is laid on the approximate route of the path.

A fishing merchant named Bute from the West of England built the first permanent residence in 1528.

In later years, permanent settlement in Newfoundland was forbidden by Britain but the town continued to grow. The law was repealed in 1830.

St. John's was captured once by the Dutch and three times by the French, was levelled several times by fire and prostrated by famine and disease.

It survived them all, and as the modern shopping centre, housing developments and pavement spreads north and west, there is only optimism.

Romney Emerges As Strong Man For Republicans

Michigan Governor Did Not Back Goldwater

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michigan Governor George Romney emerged today as the strong man at the ballot box of a Republican party shattered by President Johnson's towering presidential election victory Tuesday.

In the almost incredible vote avalanche in which Johnson registered strongly in nearly every precinct outside five southern states and Arizona, Romney won re-election by cutting deep into Democratic Detroit, increasing his previous support in Negro districts and winning 60 per cent backing from those who voted for the Democratic president.

Barry Goldwater, defeated Republican presidential nominee, has said he does not intend to yield the reins of the Republican party. But he conceded that he thinks the party will pick "another man to run" in 1968 "and as of now that would be fine with me."

It would require considerable reorientation for Goldwater to gravitate to the support of Romney for this somewhat politically dubious honor four years hence. The Arizona senator said during the election campaign he could understand why some "moderate" Republicans didn't support him. But he listed Romney as an unfathomable "Mormon president."

ON THE OFFENSIVE

Romney, who would not back Goldwater actively because of the latter's vote against the Civil Rights Act, already was on the offensive. His state's Republican national committeeman, John Martin, called for the dumping of Goldwater's powerably-selected chairman of the Republican national committee, Dean Burch.

Burch, clinging to his $30,000-a-year job, found some "encouraging" signs in a debacle in which Goldwater won six states and 52 electoral votes to Johnson's 44 states and 486 electoral college votes.

The Republican national chairman said the election had established the "true two-party system in the South" — which the Democrats debated hollowly had won more than 20,000,000 voters to "the conservative philosophy" and laid-ended the campaign "fiscally responsible and strong."

Johnson had more than 41,000,000 votes from 98 per cent of the U.S. polling places. He had rolled up nearly 61.4 per cent of the total vote.

Johnson's observation on the election results was: "I think that there ever has been so many people saying so many things while an election day."

DISSENSION RIFE

Although Goldwater said he does not believe the conservative cause was hurt by the election results, there was plenty of dissent among fellow Republicans.

Moderates of the party looked for former president Dwight D. Eisenhower to provide some

Exchange Reserves Growing

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian exchange reserves grew by $119,300,000 during October. It brought the gain over the last four months to nearly $200,000,000.

The government Wednesday announced the Oct. 31 balance at $2,686,000 in United States dollars and gold.

Not all of the increase since June has been retained, however. Repayments totalling a $107,300,000 on Canada's 1962 loan from the International Monetary Fund reduce the net four-month gain to $152,700,000.

Nevertheless, Washington authorities are reported to be concerned.

This stems from the mid-1963 agreement under which new Canadian issues of securities were made exempt from the U.S. tax on Americans' purchases of foreign stocks and bonds. The tax still applies to outstanding Canadian securities.

To gain this concession, Canada formally pledged that it was not her desire or intention "to increase her foreign exchange reserves through the proceeds of borrowings in the United States."

The implied some reasonable limit on Canadian borrowings in the New York bond market, though no amount has ever been mentioned. Recently there has been suggestions that U.S. officials are concerned over the amount of these bond sales.

There are no up-to-date statistics here on these sales.

U.S. officials expect Canadian borrowing in New York to reach about $550,000,000 for the year as a whole.

On the Canadian side of the border, the situation is viewed differently, in the context of the huge Canadian current-account deficit with the U.S.

In the first half of this year, this deficit on all transactions in goods and services soared to $1,070,000,000 — not far from the $1,183,000,000 total deficit for the whole of 1963.

However, only $296,000,000 of that deficit was covered by the import of long-term forms of capital from the United States, a shortfall of $774,000,000. This is what the Canadian economists describe as the "basic balance."

While some of this huge basic deficit was covered by importing short-term capital from the U.S., much of it had to be paid for out of Canada's net earnings and net borrowings elsewhere in the world.

Hence the Canadian argument that Canada-U.S. transactions support, instead of weaken, the U.S. dollar.

Interim Supply Passed

By PAUL DUNN

OTTAWA (CP) — The government received Commons approval Wednesday to spend $740,000,000 to pay its bills for November and December, but was called on the carpet for spending a few dollars sending Social Credit Leader Thompson to Africa.

The nine-day supply debate ended just short of leaving the government with no money to meet its November and December payroll and bills. If approval had not come soon, dissolution of Parliament and an election could have followed.

As soon as the interim supply bill passed, opposition MPs opened fire on Mr. Thompson's mission to Africa on behalf of the government.

Was the trip just a plum to reward the Social Credit MP from Red Deer for support of the minority government? Had Mr. Thompson been taken into the Liberal party?

External Affairs Minister Martin first declined to answer the questions. He left the chamber at one point for a scheduled meeting with Paul-Henri Spaak, Belgium's foreign minister. His self-pick colleagues said they did not have the answers.

ASKS ABOUT COST

Cliff Smallwood (PC — Battle River-Camrose), who began the questioning, wanted to know the trip cost and whether Mr. Thompson had "gone to Africa to help Zambia with its space program, or what?"

Mr. Martin said Mr. Thompson had gone to Africa "at the request of the government to perform an important assignment in an area in which he is known and familiar than any other Canadian." Mr. Thompson had worked in Ethiopia before entering politics.

Mr. Thompson said before his departure that the external affairs department had asked him to be part of a Canadian mission of senior officials who held conferences with the United Nations' African economic mission in Ethiopia and visit several

LBJ and His Running Mate Celebrate in Western Style

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)— President Lyndon B. Johnson and Hubert H. Humphrey, his vice-president-elect, hit it off in fine fashion as they wound up a Texas Hill country huddle today.

Lounging around the LBJ ranch 15 miles west of this hamlet founded by the president's grandfather, the United States' two top Democrats celebrated Tuesday's landslide election victory.

They looked much like peas in a pod as they hiked around the 400 presidential acres and jumped on horses in twin-style western garb.

Humphrey, one-time druggist, looked anything but that as he moved around the ranch on a horse which, from all appearances, was tame and well behaved.

The president greeted Humphrey and wife, Muriel, with an elaborate Texas barbecue Wednesday.

Hardly had the Minnesotan landed on the LBJ property when he was clapped into western pants, western jacket, east arm boots and western hat and with a little encouragement, enticed to climb aboard the horse

Wins Reduction In Sentence

TORONTO (CP) — A Peterborough woman won a reduction in her jail sentence Wednesday in a ruling by the Ontario Appeal Court.

Carol Barnes had been sentenced last July 8, by Magistrate W. R. Philp at Peterborough to 15 months definite, and one year indeterminate for possessing "property obtained by crime."

The three - member Appeal Court allowed her appeal and reduced the sentence to "an indefinite term not to exceed 15 months."

May Label Ontario Cheese

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Federation of Agriculture has received a resolution requesting that Ontariocheddar cheese be labelled "Made in Ontario" to distinguish it from cheese produced in other parts of Canada.

The resolution, passed at the federation's annual convention, urged the Ontario agriculture department to seek a change in federal government regulations to permit the Ontario identification.

W. E. Cooper, owner of a Sudbury cheese plant, said that other parts of Canada have begun to ship their cheese to Britain. During a 60-year period, he said, the Brockville-Belleville area of Ontario has built a respected reputation for its cheese products in Britain.

Ontario is expected to sell more than 20,000,000 pounds of cheddar cheese in Britain this year while Quebec cheese authorities say their province has sold about 2,500,000 in Britain so far this year.

"If we get complaints, we want to be sure it is our cheese that is being complained against," said A. C. Sloan of

Co-existence Stand Upheld; Nationalism Hit

Statements Are Made On Eve of Red Parley

MOSCOW (AP)—The Kremlin appealed today for an end to "nationalist narrowmindedness and discrimination" in world Communist ranks as Chinese Premier Chou En-lai and other foreign communist's chiefs converged on Moscow for talks with the Soviet Union.

The appeal published in Pravda, the organ of the Soviet Communist party, was clearly intended to serve as the keynote for the first big gathering of Communist leaders since Nikita Khrushchev's downfall last month.

"The Communist party of the Soviet Union calls for an implacable struggle against the appearance and survival of any kind of nationalism and chauvinism and against tendencies toward national narrowmindedness and discrimination," Pravda's editorial said.

In their bitter feud with the Chinese during Khrushchev's time, the Russians accused the Chinese of fomenting a schism in the Communist world with nationalist, chauvinist policies. The charge has also been indirectly aimed at some east European Communists, most notably the Romanians.

KREFFTISM

Another article in Pravda today reaffirmed another Soviet policy attacked by the Chinese, belief in the possibility of Communist take - overs through peaceful means in the underdeveloped countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America.

The article, by Professor E. M. Zhukov, also re-stated the Soviet view that war is not inevitable and that peaceful coexistence with the West is not only possible but desirable. The Chinese have vigorously disagreed on this also.

However, the removal from power last month of Khrushchev has raised the possibility of a surface reconciliation. The former Soviet leader was the personal target for much of Peking's bitterness.

Chou's delegation arrived in Moscow today.

The Soviet news agency Tass said delegations from every Communist - ruled country except Albania would be represented. Khrushchev denounced the Albanian party leaders for spoken support of China's hard line policies and the two countries severed relations.

La Paz Fighting Continues

LA PAZ (AP)—Fighting continued in La Paz Wednesday night as militia units loyal to deposed President Victor Paz Estenssoro resisted Bolivia's new military regime.

Seven persons were reported killed and 50 injured as air force planes attacked buildings occupied by police and strafed militiamen at a hill near the capital. Students and workers also attacked the buildings held by the police.

Paz, who became president when a popular uprising threw out a military junta in 1952, fled with his family and aides to Peru in a Bolivian military plane.

He held reporters in Lima his vice-president, Air Force Gen. Rene Barrientos, was to blame for the coup.

"He wanted to be president so he rounded up air force and army support and overthrew me," Paz said. "I still have the support of my people."

Will Likely Ask Action On 2 Bills

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The widened Democratic margin in the U.S. House and Senate could brighten chances for two key Johnson administration proposals — health care for the elderly and aid to the depressed Appalachian region.

The White House, meanwhile, is certain to read the landslide victory of President Johnson in the election as a mandate to push harder for both measures, sidetracked in the Congress last session.

Final returns indicate a net gain of two Senate seats for the Democrats. The House gain significantly — about 40 House of Representatives seats.

Even with this increased, the Democratic Senate edge of 68 to 32 already was so big that the majority party could push through even its most controversial programs.

For example, the proposal to provide medical care for older Americans by boosting social security taxes cleared the Senate by five votes. The $1,000,000,000 Appalachian aid bill also was approved by a wide margin.

But the health plan was rejected in a Senate committee with the House and House leaders decided against bringing up the Appalachian legislation, a move sign that they expect defeat despite a 257-to-178 margin.

Johnson is likely to ask for speedy action on two bills which died at the end of the 1964 session but are considered essential by the administration to aid in U.S. foreign policy.

One would implement the international coffee agreement the House killed a congressional version of this. The other would continue present quotas for sales of foreign sugar in the American market; these will expire Dec. 31 but the administration expects to extend them administratively until Congress can act.

Many Democrats are eager to vote on a social security bill since beneficiaries under this program were given a commitment in the 1964 session by both branches of Congress for an increase in their payments.

Hellyer Still Plans New Army, Navy, RCAF Equipment

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer, in one of the tightest financial squeezes which has ever constricted a man in his portfolio, has not budged from his plan to acquire new weapons for the navy, army and RCAF, informed sources say.

They add that the minister is determined to increase spending on equipment by reducing expenditures on personnel, operations and maintenance, though he must manoeuvre within a 1965-66 defence budget of $1,525,000,000.

In past years, defence ministers have been more or less able to space out major weapons programs and thus stay within government-decreed defence budgets without too much trouble.

But Mr. Hellyer now faces the tough problem of having to take on three major weapons programs at the same time: A new fighter-bomber for the RCAF, a new ship for the navy and troop carriers and other equipment for the army.

The costs naturally will be stretched out over a period of years but they will still be heavy in each of the next four or five years.

The problem has been aggravated by the fact that defence expenditures in 1963-64 rose to $1,683,471,000 or $93,470,000 more than the original estimate.

Costs for personnel, operations and maintenance alone ran to $1,376,000,000. This is only $149,000,000 less than the total defence budgets estimated for the current 1964-65 fiscal year and for 1965-66.

Informants said Mr. Hellyer still plans to increase spending on equipment to about 25 per cent of the total defence budget. The figure now is about 16 per cent.

Sources said the 25-per-cent goal may not be achieved until 1967. It would hinge partly on reducing the manpower of the armed forces by at least 10,000 to 110,000.

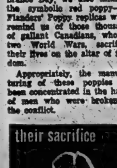
Mr. Hellyer's defence package of equipment plans is expected to go to the cabinet in a week or two for final decision.

Sources said Mr. Hellyer has no thought of asking the cabinet for more funds than the $1,525,000,000 a year for five years as originally agreed upon.

His financial problem has been somewhat lightened by the defence department's reported decision not to purchase the McDonnell Phantom jet plane at a basic cost of about $2,500,000 each.

Main concern of the department in this field is a plane to support army field operations. It is felt that the extra dollars needed for a plane which would also fit the interceptor and reconnaissance roles aren't worth the candle.

It is believed now that Mr. Hellyer will propose to the cabinet a cheaper aircraft such as the Northrop Freedom Fighter at $700,000 each.



The defence department is prepared to spend up to $300,000,000 on an aircraft program and $70,000,000 as a starter on a new ship construction program.

It is expected that the government will announce its weapons procurement plans in a single package, but that actual purchase of the various items won't necessarily begin at the same time.

Hold Poppy Fund Tag Days Friday, Saturday This Week

When we think of Remembrance Day we also think of the symbolic red poppy—the Flanders' Poppy replicas which reminds us of those thousands of gallant Canadians, who, in two World Wars, sacrificed their lives on the altar of freedom.

Appropriately, the manufacturing of these poppies has been concentrated in the hands of men who were broken by the conflict.

War's sword of death has left marks on the minds and bodies of practically every man who served in battle. Many have been unable to secure jobs, have the courage and strength left to rise above this condition.

Others have fought a losing battle.

Thus, the Flanders' Poppy brings "aid for the living from the dead."

On Friday and Saturday of this week, members of the local ANAF and the Royal Canadian Legion, jointly, will hold tag days for the purpose of selling poppies.

Every citizen is asked to support these people by purchasing a poppy. The Belleville Poppy Fund helps to serve those who were victims of the wars.

In the First World War, millions of fighting men had the opportunity of observing, springing forth from the earth where their fallen comrades lay, great vistas of poppies waving amidst the shot and shell and terror of war.

A Canadian soldier-poet, Lt. Col. John McCrae, saw the poppies, too. After inspired him to write the world renowned poem "In Flanders Fields."

Poppies were first worn on the third anniversary of Armistice Day, almost seven million poppies were distributed.

On November 11, Canadians will wear the blood-red symbol with pride, while thousands of post-war graves and hundreds of memorials and cenotaphs across the Dominion will bear the emblem in the form of wreaths, sprays and individual flowers. To date over "a wreaths have been sold by the Poppy Fund here, compared with 130 last year.

Following is a list of sums of money spent locally by the Belleville Poppy Fund from January 1st to October 31st, 1966, on veterans or their families:

Food, $808; board and rent, $339.00; Hydro and fuel, $123.35; transportation, $23.55; transient meals and rooms, $290.80; clothing, $84.15; drugs, $3.75; comforts for hospital patient, $15.00; medical, $7.50; P.S.I., $10.75; school books, $24.90. Total $1,670.14.

81.75 Per Cent Of Estimated Tax Roll Collected

With the date for the final payment of municipal taxes now past, city treasurer C. J. Bender said today that tax collections in Belleville this year seemed about on par with other years.

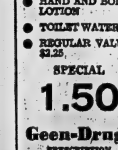
Approximately 81.75 per cent of the total estimated tax roll has been collected with this year seems no exception.

No totals are available since the deadline for the final payment last Friday, but at the end of September 81.75 per cent of the estimated tax roll had been collected.

The total estimated tax roll this year is $8,410,000.

Tax collections in Belleville are made in five instalments — two interim and three regular tax bills.

Mr. Bender said indications are that each year more property owners are largely taking advantage of the five instalment payment system.



Last year, at sale this year was comparatively small with only six properties being sold for non-payment of taxes. Three of these sales were made for purpose of title clearance.

Thomson Gives First Speech In Lords

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Canadian-born Lord Thomson, in a hard-hitting maiden speech to the House of Lords, said today British management and unions must "fit a rigidity which must be attacked and broken down."

"I am greatly concerned about the economic situation of this country," the publisher declared. "I am completely convinced that daring and radical measures must be taken to maintain, let alone improve, the standard of living of our people."

Thomson opened by noting that it is some time since a "Canadian accent" was heard in the House of Lords—the last such speaker being the late Lord Beaverbrook, also a publisher, who served as minister of aircraft production during the Second World War.

HOPES FOR OTHERS

"It is my hope and belief that in the years to come citizens of more countries of the Commonwealth may be represented in this House, because it seems to me that such representation can only go towards strengthening the ties that our great Commonwealth," Thomson added.

"Trade unionism, the press and Canadian affairs, of mass media and communication in this country are the three basic lines of the Commonwealth and of business and commerce. I hope sincerely to be able to make a useful contribution to your debates."

Taking part in a debate on economics and trade, Thomson said he will "always speak with the mind of the nation in mind rather than the fortunes of any political party."

He added:

"We have in the pattern of our life, through habit and custom, a built-in rigidity, which must be attacked and broken down.

"In my judgment this involves both management and unions. The latter must be dealt with boldly and firmly but fairly. Cannot there will be, but there should be stick as well."

Thomson said there are many efficient British firms but:

"It is my opinion from my own observations in Canada, the U.S. and British that by far the largest business savings measure in the high civil servants set in other advanced countries of the world."

NEED COMPETITION

This was largely because of a lack of competition and government measures were needed to stimulate competition and "encourage business venture, particularly in their initial stages."

"I think an effective way to accomplish this would be a punitive tax structure for new companies in the early years of their existence."

Concerning labor, Thomson said that "in my opinion it is impossible for the Government to control wages and incomes and should be confined entirely to its own particular trade and not to those of other trades which is perfectly capable of dealing, when he is not occupied at his regular work."

Thomson said Britons talk of full employment through restrictive practices and forced employment of more men than reasonably required as well.

Britain was striving to improve exports but "we shall never make headway that can be quoted by other advanced countries while we are paying more men than are necessary for efficient production."

Canada to Have 10 New Prisons In Two Years

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada will have 10 new penitentiaries worth $50,000,000 by 1969 Allen J. MacLeod, federal commissioner of penitentiaries, announced here Wednesday.

He said the new prisons will enable Canada to become a world leader in correction work.

Mr. MacLeod, in Vancouver on his semi-annual tour of federal prisons, told a press conference two new prisons are now under construction, a third will start in two weeks and seven more will be going up by next October.

It is the climax of a program of penal improvement, started when Mr. MacLeod became commissioner in 1960.

Mr. MacLeod said a new prison to replace the 96-year old St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary in Montreal is part of the over-all reform program.

"Spending is Saving." He didn't say it, but we are, and we believe it to be true. Seven out of ten automobiles sold in the road today, are out of alignment! The impact of an automobile travelling at sixty miles an hour striking a pot-hole, railway track, or anything uneven, can throw the wheels out of alignment. Only a fraction of an inch can cut down the potential wear on your tires to half. It also disorients your steering. We, at Canadian Tire, have the answer. We have the best equipment available, in the John Bean Visaliner, and a top front-end technician in Mr. Bud Fox. For just $6.00 we will give your car a thorough front-end check, and if it requires further work, this can be supplied on our low price of $9.95 for most cars. If anything needs replacing, this is where we can really SAVE you money. We have guaranteed new and used replacement parts, at prices that save you up to 50%. Yes, you can charge it, too! No service charges on 30-day accounts, or if it's something major, you might spread it over many months, with payments as low as $3.00 per month.

No Political Peace for Britain

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON' (CP)—Britons were badly fooled if they thought that with the general election past they'd have political peace at last.

The closeness of the Labor victory, a majority of only five seats, tells only part of the story of the political upheaval that is likely to keep Britain on edge for a long time. People may be getting a little weary of the whole thing.

"Now, after a wasted year of electioneering, there is a universal desire to push aside the political slogans and to get on with the job of modernizing Britain," says the left wing New Statesman.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson, 48, was determined to create an air of exciting change as Labor took over from the Tories for the first time since 1951.

It was not simply a "swing of the pendulum," Wilson emphasized. Labor's victory was the result of a "crusade" and there was nothing routine about the changeover.

There was certainly nothing routine for Whitehall civil servants, some of whom went on an 80-hour weekly work schedule to cope with Wilson's new ministers and splitting-up of old ones.

WELCOMED CHANGE

Political correspondents reported with some wonderment that the supposedly sedate gentlemen of the civil service actually liked the hectic pace of "whirlwind Harold," bringing a new breeze into the corridors of power.

The Manchester Guardian was particularly impressed by Richard Crossman, 56, the new housing minister, promptly dubbed "hurricane Dick."

"He swept in at the weekend in a swirl of statistics and impatience, and set the tempo for everyone he could think of," says The Guardian. "For days now he has been interviewing a succession of experts, cross-examining them with an acuteness that has astonished his subordinates."

It has been a long time since Britain has had a minister with new brooms went through Whitehall and Westminster.

The last occasion was when he became prime minister a year ago, carried on with almost the same team that had served former premier Harold Macmillan and there was no time for changes.

Even back in 1945, when Labor last ousted the Conservatives, there was the same Prime Minister Clement Attlee, now Lord Attlee, and his senior ministers had already served in Winston Churchill's wartime coalition government.

LABOR SHAKE-UP UNDER

- The new bustle, accompanied by many announcements and appointments, directed attention from the fact that Wilson's 100-minister team is basically the same as before and perhaps more unwieldy than Sir Alec's.

Wilson, who became at 31 the youngest British cabinet minister in 1950, ten years in the Attlee government, knows it is necessary to pay political debts. But frustrated he will be ruthless in the future.

The strain will be heavy on Wilson's wife Mary and their four children, ages 9 to 16.

Political fireworks can be expected outside the House as Parliament reconvenes. There are already predicting sensational cracking leadership struggle in the Tory party if Sir Alec, 62, is also predicted, steps down after a decent interval. The party almost lost Heath apart before Douglas Home slipped into the top slot last year.

Reginald Maudling, 47, former chancellor of the exchequer, seems to be well positioned at the outset but there are such formidable rivals as Edward Heath, former trade minister, and Iain MacLeod, 50, former minister who refused to serve in Sir Alec's cabinet.

16-Mile Stretch On 401 Highway To Be Opened

TORONTO (CP) — Only 23 miles of the western Ontario portion of Highway 401 will be two-lane highway after the opening of a 16-mile four-lane section east of the Kent-Elgin County line Friday, Highways Minister Charles MacNaughton said Wednesday.

Mr. MacNaughton said the two additional lanes to carry east-bound traffic will go into service at 11 a.m. This will mean that 45 miles of two-lane highway between London and Tilbury have been expanded to four lanes this year.

The highways minister said his department is doing everything possible to expand another five-mile section to four lanes between Kent Centre and the Bloomfield Road interchange by the end of the year.

The two-lane section of Highway 401 was branded a killer strip because of the number of fatal accidents that had occurred on it. Mr. MacNaughton instituted a crash program to bring it up to 401 standards

He said the maximum possible amount of work would be done this year on the remaining two lane stretch.

U. S. Prepares To Launch Robot Explorer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) The United States prepared today to launch Mariner III, a robot explorer, on an intended 224-month journey to Mars to take pictures and collect scientific data.

A powerful Atlas - Agena D rocket was scheduled to blast off between 10:22 a.m. and 2 p.m. EST to start the complex payload across 350,000,000 miles of space for a rendezvous with the planet next July 17.

If successful the unmanned U.S. spacecraft will swing within 8,000 miles of Mars and provide the first closeup television information ever obtained about the planet. Many astronomers believe Mars harbors a basic form of life, such as vegetation.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Mariner III will not be able to detect life, but to gather information needed to design life seeking capsules which the U.S. hopes to land on Mars in 1969.

Canada Greets Apparent Break In Stalemate

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP) — The apparent break in the American-European stalemate over advance rules to govern farm products in the Kennedy round of Geneva tariff negotiations has been welcomed by Canadian authorities.

The break came Monday when the United States in effect abandoned its previous stand that the negotiating rules for farm products must be settled before the Nov. 16 deadline for the talks. It instead agreed to table the list of products they intend to exempt, for overriding national or international economic interest, from the proposed across-the-board cuts in tariffs.

The U.S. move left unfinished rules—in effect, part of the negotiations themselves have been in dispute for nearly two years between the U.S. and the European Economic Community, or Common Market.

EXPECT TABLING

Now, in the view of Canadian officials, the long-awaited exemptions lists will be tabled on Nov. 16 unless the EEC does something to force another postponement.

Canada has been excused for taking broad linear cuts in its tariffs. Instead, it has agreed to table on Nov. 16 its initial item-by-item offers, striking for what Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp calls "a balance of advantages."

Sources said the Canadian list is nearly complete. Canadian negotiating team, headed by Norman Robertson, former undersecretary of state for external affairs, has been in Geneva for several weeks. The team includes about six senior officers from the trade and finance departments.

Want Regions Not Cities Designated

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Delegates attending the fall conference of the Eastern Ontario Development Association have approved a resolution asking the federal government to design rate regions rather than cities as low-growth areas.

The 124 delegates voted unanimously in favor of the move during the closing session of the two-day meeting Wednesday.

The delegates also discussed current transport rates decentralization and future finance for publicity purposes.

The presentation of awards were made by Gordon Dunning which have furthered the economic progress in Alexandria, Ampotier, Brockville, Cardinal Carleton Place, Cornwall, Gananoque, Hawkesbury, Iroquois, Ottawa, Perth, Prescott, Prescott, Renfrew, Smiths Falls, Township of Charlottenburg and County of Prainceton.

H. H. J. Graham, of the department of economics and development, was the chairman of a panel discussing foreign markets. He said that foreign trade was available to all who have the energy to go after it.

Plebiscite Will Be Held on Swimming Pool

TRENTON — The Board of Education's bid for a swimming pool for the Trenton High School will be considered by the taxpayers on Dec. 7.

The decision reached in a special meeting Tuesday night adopted a by-law authorizing a plebiscite on the question. Voting on the referendum will be held along with the municipal elections.

The Board of Education in their request for the plebiscite introduced a schedule showing that an indoor pool can be constructed at a total cost of $100,000 and the net cost to the taxpayer would be $29,000. Under the proposed plan council would debenture for the full amount required, then set up a trust which donations would be deposited to retire the debt.

Council agreed to put the question to the voters provided the Board of Education was willing to enter into a noncancellable administered by the board and the Recreation Commission with town council exercising control.

Goldwater Determined to Keep Party on Conservative Course

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Senatory Barry Goldwater, determined to keep the Republican party on a conservative course, heads back to Washington Friday to handle some of the left over business of the U.S. Senate seat he gave up for his losing race against President Johnson.

For the moment, Goldwater's long-range future remained obscure. But the besten Republican presidential nominee had served notice he plans to spend a lot of time working to lead and strengthen the Republican party.

In the days ahead Goldwater plans to take care of some Senate mail and some other matters in Washington, then head for a vacation with his wife at an undisclosed spot.

While more liberal members of the party needs planne to rebuild the party in their image Goldwater declared he does not think the conservative cause "has been hurt at all" despite his landslide defeat at the polls.

Conservatism, he insisted, is a philosophy the Republican party "must cling to and strengthen in the years ahead."

Goldwater said he does not expect to be in the senate again but will spend his chamber post, the sheet metal dozen barrel with six-inch gratings. Their wheres-about was concealed from the jury.

Belleville United Appeal collected more than $500 yesterday, to raise the total thanks to this year's campaign to $76,600. About $72,600 of the total has been raised in the United Appeal office in Kiwanis Centre, another $4.00 is still in individual canvass offices. The new total includes more business returns and about $300 from public employees' donations. Each dollar given now sets a new record for the United Appeal totals in Belleville.

Difficult Choice in Viet Nam

Now that the U.S. election is over and President L. B. Johnson knows that he has the sweeping endorsation of the American people—and that he does not need to worry about the short-term effects of his decisions on his political future—he ought to take a new look at South Viet Nam.

Senator Barry Goldwater was right about one thing—the Johnson administration owes "every American," and indeed everybody else, an explanation of U.S. policy in Viet Nam.

If he ever attempts to pay this debt, we think Johnson will discover that there is no explanation which will satisfy him—although it may satisfy some less knowledgeable people.

Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. forces in South Viet Nam, says elaborate measures were taken to protect U.S. aircraft at Vietnamese bases. But a U.S. major is quoted by The Associated Press as saying that it was not surprising that the Viet Cong had shelled the Bien Hoa base, that they could have done it before, and that they can do it again whenever they choose.

We suspect that this Associated Press story caused quite a flap in the Pentagon. We hope it was not entirely for the wrong reason, or perhaps we should say for the less important reason. This would be the public spectacle of a mere major publicly contradicting his commander-in-chief—or appearing to do so. The more important cause for concern is that both the general and the major may be right—that elaborate precautions may have been taken, by the Americans, within the limits of their operational responsibility, and that the Viet Cong might still be capable of shellacking these bases any time they cared to do so.

This points to the fatal flaw in the U.S. position in South Viet Nam, which also bears unpleasant similarities to the responsibilities it has assumed in some other parts of the world. It has undertaken to support a government. It does not want to appear to be dictating that government's policies. It thus lacks truly effective control over these policies. Yet the success of the military operations it is in fact committed to can only be assured by such control.

The U.S. must choose between forcing a foreign government to act like the satellite it really is or expanding the war to a degree which will assure the transfer of effective control to the military chief, that is to the U.S. commander in the area.

The Viet Cong would not be able to move freely into mortar positions about U.S. air bases in South Viet Nam if the South Viet Nam government had the support of the peasants.

If this support can be won at all, it certainly cannot be won by the sort of people the U.S. has been backing.

The U.S. must either force a change in the civilian government and install in power people whom the peasants trust, or it must pour in so many men and so much equipment that it can control South Viet Nam without peasant support, or it must get out of Viet Nam in the hope, probably vain, that past support of the Viet Nam ruling clique has not made it inevitable that the government which succeeds it will be Red-led.

The choice is not easy. Which is all the more reason why it should be made as soon as possible.

He is happy—and worried.

He does not see how his family of ten will manage to live in a four-room house and on his salary of $28 a month.

We do not understand why he is concerned.

Any person who has been able to maintain himself, his wife and four children on a salary of $28 a month has already demonstrated that he has the power to perform miracles and another four mouths to feed should not prove a major problem.

Mahatma Gandhi once said that India would attain complete independence when the masses feel that they can improve their lot by their own effort and that they can shape their destiny the way they like. Ottawa Offbeat
Opposition Leader Should Share P.M.'s Plane Privileges

By RICHARD JACKSON
From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — What do Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Conservative Leader Diefenbaker do these Wednesdays of late fall when Parliament is taking its mid-week evening off?

Relaxing with family or friends? Reading? Studying? Even sleeping?

Not sleeping, and that is certain.

But working. The hard way.

Comes Wednesday afternoon, and usually they leave the Commons early, race for Uplands Air Terminal, and fly out of the Capital to do a little public platform stumping, seldom returning before midnight.

And how do they spend their weekends as the year heads through Autumn into Winter?

Sitting on planes and standing on those same public platforms, shaking hands in reception lines, holding press conferences, meeting delegations — and catnapping while they can, on the other run in between engagements.

They fly out Friday mornings, seldom later than noon, and the working weekend of usually at least three speeches and a continuing round of meeting the people.

If they're lucky and can keep to a schedule that almost always packed far too tightly, with more to do than time to do it in, they'll be back in again late Sunday night, so late that not infrequently it is Monday morning before "hard day's weekend" is done.

A MAN-KILLER

If you've travelled with either man, with Mr. Diefenbaker in his prime ministerial days or now with Prime Minister Pearson — and both men customarily have taken a representation of Capital correspondents with them on these political safaris — then you know it is not easy for these men whose every waking hour is in public working demands.

In fact, for men such as they, approaching their seventies, the grind, at times, must be nearly man-killing.

And while they are in remarkably good physical shape, they are not trained athletes. So it must be a dedication that keeps them going, a determination for that kind of highly resolved public service that often only finds its honest reward in the history books, long after they are gone.

Their work is never caught up. And on the two days each week they're in Ottawa, secretaries, assistants, advisors and associates are after them all the way to the Air Terminus with urgent things still to be done. There is a constant pounding away at them to read this, initial that, to decide, rule, sign.

More often than not, they have to write their speeches in flight, dictating with the help of a couple of colleagues or even idea men, while a relay of stenographers in the front of the plane put it off their typewriters paragraph by paragraph, with the press secretary assembling it in some kind of readable order.

BEAT NEVER OFF

Then comes the landing and the pinning on the perpetual-ie-for-everyone. . . the thrusting of the soon bruised and aching hand into the reception line wringer. . . the opening of the car to any and all who can squeeze within hearing distance . . . the small, intimate b-i-i-i-n-n-g: hotel suite dictatory session. . . the speech. . . the press conference. . . the coffee session with the local VIPs. . . the race for the airport . . . and the late night flight back to the Capital.

John Diefenbaker probably set a marathon record for any Canadian prime minister, when early in his six-year regime, he spent 48 hours on the political road, campaigning in his rumpled business suit while flying between Ottawa and Calgary, motoring to Banff for a Canadian Bar Association speech, driving back to Calgary, hopping out to Hanover, New Hampshire for a convocation talk at Dartmouth University, flying to Quebec City for a party rally, then back to the Capital, all between Friday morning and Sunday night.

It is rugged for the prime minister, even with all the travel convenience and staff help he has.

But if it is physically exhausting as a prime minister — and it is, they say — what must it be as a man — how much more punishing it is for the opposition leader. For the prime minister has the use of the Transport Department's speedy Viscounts, and now the new Lockheed Jetstar, and can fly out of Ottawa directly to any airport across Canada, and directly back again.

The opposition leader must fly by commercial airline, going always from Ottawa first to Toronto, Montreal or Winnipeg to reach other points, and having to return by the same airline, paying, of course, his own way.

As the second most important man in Parliament, outranked only by the prime minister, for the sake of public service, the leader of Her Majesty's royal opposition deserves a better break.

For if even the junior of the Cabinet have Government aircraft at their beck and call, so too, in the name of Parliament, should the man who speaks for the Opposition be his, at times and changes of Government dictate, Liberal or Conservative.

Strictly Several
Every Person Has His Own Life-Style

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

The fact that we are vain is no sin, only a weakness; but the fact that we commonly go to such lengths to conceal our vanity is more of a vice than the thing we are ashamed of.

The man who is always as funny as he can be, suffers the fate that when people stop laughing at his quips, they pay no attention to anything serious he may say.

Every person has a life-style best suited to his temperament; and only those who find it and accept it can rest comfortably within themselves, regardless of the buffetings of external circumstance.

I have always despised the man in the parable, who complained of all that he has not, until he met a man who had no feet; if we follow that fatuous line of reasoning, the man without feet should feel grateful when he meets a man without arms and legs, and so on to the final absurdity of the man grateful when he meets a corpse.

Intimacy always changes our sense of values; as Proust astutely observed: "Une femme que nous entretenons ne nous semble pas un femme entretenue." The fact that we are keeping does not seem to us a kept woman.

Much of the confusion and disagreement in our national politics arises from the fallacy of fact that the United States was founded by "revolutionary conservatives, and the contradictions in their position are reflected and magnified in the complexities of present-day affairs.

To believe something, then not to believe it, and then to believe it again, is the best way to grasp a creed; for those who have never doubted, nor stood where doubt overwhelms stand, have an incomplete hold on their own faith.

Children begin to deceive themselves only after they observe the ways in which others deceive themselves; self-deception is not an inborn, but an acquired, trait, and there will be little meaningful progress in the human character until this chain is somehow broken, if ever it can be.

The attraction of the populist leader was tersely explained by Karl Kraus, when he said: "The secret of his demagogues is to make himself as stupid as his audience so that they believe they are as clever as he."

There are people who perpetually short-change themselves in life, making the least of what one gets is as much a talent as making the most, and gives some personalities a morbid pleasure they could not achieve from maximizing their opportunities.

Canadian Views on Election

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Following are excerpts from editorials in representative Canadian newspapers on the United States election:

Regina Leader-Post: . . . As noted, all newspapers quoted describe themselves as politically independent.

Halifax Chronicle-Herald: In Canada, we applaud the results not so much because President Johnson gives promise of being "pro-Canadian," but because he gives promise of understanding the nature of Canadian-American relations. . . .

Saint John Telegraph-Journal: . . . Paradoxically, his fellow Americans are not inspired and enthralled by LBJ as they were by Mr. Kennedy's personality. How and why, then did he win such a following? There are many reasons. Lyndon Johnson . . . has reconciled warring factions in Congress; he has brought capital and labor into accord; there is every reason to anticipate that, given a long-term chance, he can exercise his remarkable magic in international relations.

Toronto Globe and Mail: A concerted fight of decency put up around the globe . . . as election returns in the United States proved that the most powerful nation in the world was NOT going to pass into the hands of extremists; and that the great majority of the American people reject extremism.

Ottawa Citizen: President Johnson's decisive election victory restores a sense of stability and certainty to the world scene. . . .

Several factors of course contributed to Mr. Johnson's triumph: The civil rights issue . . . the issue of peace and war . . . the social security program . . . perhaps most significant of all, the personality and dubious friends of Senator Goldwater himself.

Ottawa Journal: President Johnson's overwhelming victory is a vindication of the common sense and the inherent stability of the U.S. electorate. . . .

One way to judge the election of Mr. Johnson would be to imagine what the world would today if he had not won. The United States, its allies and its enemies would be in a state of turmoil, chilled in disbelief and shaken by the prospect of a caricature of a conservative thrust up to preside over issues of life or death.

Niagara Falls Review: The American people have washed away any suggestion that they are trigger happy. In repudiating Mr. Goldwater the voters have conclusively buried right wingism with him. Mr. Goldwater can never expect another try. The voters have spoken and their booming repudiation of his policies leaves all that he stood for in a shambles.

To Your Good Health
Aluminum Chloride in Deodorants Not Harmful

By JOSEPH C. HOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: After reading your suggestions on deodorants I bought a 25 percent solution of aluminum chloride and mixed it half and half with toilet water. It made a wonderful and effective deodorant. When I put it in a spray bottle, it cloudy. I wonder if that otherwise performed nicely.

Would a mixture of this type be safe for the glands? I notice that many of the leading deodorants contain aluminum chloride. — M. C.

There's no danger in such a mixture. The only effect of adding is diluting the solution down to one-half, and adding a scent and doubtless a little alcohol which could account for the cloudiness.

Incidentally, the active ingredient remains aluminum chloride — a preparation which is astringent. It gets results by controlling excessive perspiration. You can spray it on, swab it on, or dust it.

Manufacturers of deodorants have devoted a lot of effort to making scientific, consistencies and packages that will appeal to the largest number of customers.

For people with excessive perspiration, however, a 25 per solution of aluminum chloride is excellent, and the strength can be varied to suit the condition and the individual. If a strong solution is irritating, it can easily be diluted with plain water.

If you prefer it mixed with toilet water, there's no reason why you shouldn't, and we hereby pass your idea along to others.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: As a suggestion to mothers who want their children to clean their plates, for which there can be several good reasons: Give the child a smaller portion, and a second, still smaller portion if requested. I personally am distressed at the enormous quantities of good food wasted, mostly through lack of training and awareness. — Mrs. A.

Your suggestion is excellent except for one thing. The people who need it most won't use it because it is too simple. Crazy world, isn't it?

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: Would you tell my son what he is doing to his health? He is a meat, fat, and starch eater, and drinks gallons of beer. He drinks at least four cans of beer with his meals. I think he is shortening his life. — Mrs. A. B.

Of course he is shortening his life. Studies show that each overweight pound shortens life a little bit, and the extra pounds mean that life is shortened by quite a lot. Ten extra pounds can be a little more than ten pounds can be perhaps four times as bad. And so on.

Regular drinking (bourbon and beer) can damage the liver, the bladder, sometimes the brain, or other organs. I agree with you: Your son is shortening his life.

But what can we do except state the facts? We can state the facts to listen to them. If he is smart enough to be successful business man, he can draw his own conclusions. At the age of 43 he is not going to change because of anything we tell him to do. When we've told him once, or twice, or 50 times, all we can do is realize that we have done our duty. From then on, we'll just have to love him for being a good son and let him decide what he wants to do.

Also there was considerably less rainfall making for more days on which the sun shone brightly.

Maximum temperature for the month, however, was just slightly under that of one year ago with the official thermometer giving a reading of 71.5 degrees as compared with 73.5 one year ago. Minimum reading last month was 33.5 degrees compared with 37 degrees one year ago. Only heat about one half the rainfall was recorded this year with 2.25 inches of rain and one half inch of snow fall.

Two Appeals On Libel Action Are Dismissed

TORONTO (CP) — Two appeals launched in connection with a conviction for libel against Time Inter-National of Canada Limited were dismissed Wednesday by the Ontario Appeal Court.

Time, publisher of the Canadian edition of Time magazine, had appealing an award of $35,000 damages assessed against it last March 6 in favor of Maj. William A. Platt of Ottawa, who brought libel action against Time.

Maj. Platt, a former member of the Canadian delegation to the International Truce Supervisory Commission in Indochina, appealed for an increase in the damages awarded.

Mr. Justices John B. Aylesworth, W. F. Schroder and Arthur Kelly ruled that the Time appeal be dismissed with costs and that Maj. Platt's appeal be dismissed without costs.

The libel action concerned a story in Time's Canadian edition of May 18, 1962, about opium smuggling between Viet Nam and Laos. It was heard by James McRuer, then chief justice of the Ontario Supreme Court, in Ottawa last February.

Chief Justice McRuer found that the article contained a false imputation that Maj. Platt was charged with being a member of a group trafficking in drugs and gravely reflected on his good name.

Maj. Platt had been found guilty in a 1961 court-martial of having participated in improper transport of gold—not opium—in Indochina. The decision was reversed by the court martial appeal board of Canada on March 14, 1963.

CALL FOR REPORTS

TORONTO (CP) — Board of control Wednesday called for legal and welfare department reports on whether the city can set up birth control clinics. Ald. May Birchard, who proposed the move, said a clinic should be established in the downtown Regent Park low-income public housing complex.

Large-Bosomed Women Upheld By Minister

WINNIPEG (CP) — Health Minister Judy LaMarsh Wednesday made critical comments about Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker and people who question the intelligence of large - bosomed women.

Miss LaMarsh, at a press conference, said Diefenbaker and an American scientist who recently said that a m a l l - bosomed women have the highest intelligence quotients.

"A bosom size doesn't prove a damn thing about my brains," Miss LaMarsh told a reporter. "I didn't see the CBC program on this subject, but neither I nor the mayor of Ottawa (Charlotte Whitton) thought it was in very good taste."

Here to speak to students at the University of Manitoba, Miss LaMarsh said she feels Mr. Diefenbaker is creating "false political issues."

"Mr. Diefenbaker is a political anachronism. Time has passed him by, but he isn't aware of it. . . He's gone from centre right and he no longer represents the temper of the people."

ALTERNATIVE ROUTE FOR POWER FLOW—Premier Joey Smallwood wants power for Newfoundland from the Hamilton Falls development in Labrador. He has suggested a route through Newfoundland and the Maritimes to the United States. Underwater cables would carry power across the Strait of Belle Isle and Cabot Strait. Robert H. Winters, chairman and chief executive officer of the British Newfoundland Corporation, the firm developing the area, has said that for reasons of geography, Québec is the logical customer for the power from the falls. But Quebec is at odds with the company over the price of the power. (CP Newsmap)

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) asked whether Mr. Thompson's expenses were being paid by the government. Mr. Martin said it would be unfair to ask the MP to undertake responsibilities for the government at his own expense.

ANGRY DEBATE.

Earlier the Commons echoed to angry shouts on the government's plan for amending the constitution. Sparking the exchanges was a memorandum from former justice minister F. Davis Fulton to Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

The memorandum had been the subject of news stories. Liberal MPs claimed it upheld their party's proposals, but the Conservatives had twisted it to support their position. Speaker Alan Macnaughton said the discussion was out of order.

Once off supply the Commons moved quickly to the estimates of the department of industry and some of the agencies that come under that umbrella.

Expenditures of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, the Atomic Energy Control Board, and Emergency Measures Organization were approved, but estimates of the National Research Council brought a slowdown.

CONSULTING PROVINCES

Industry Minister Drury said consultations were taking place with the provinces on emergency measures. One result might be appointment of long-term federal commissioners of civil defence in the provinces.

Mr. Drury was pressed by Douglas Fisher (NDP — Port Arthur) for an outline of government policy on science and research. It was not good enough to say facts and figures were still being collected with a view to the formation of policy. Such studies had been going on for years.

"Every damned minister that I know of has some kind of research project going," he said. The Liberal party claimed in its election campaigns it had a policy on the subject.

Mr. Drury said scientific and research policies were too all-encompassing to discuss in general. He would deal with specific aspects.

help for them in what could become a lengthy battle to attempt to dislodge the conservative Barch and other Goldwater supporters who filed nearly every national party office.

The emergence of Romney as an outstanding Republican votegetter did not necessarily mean that the moderates would rally around him in their fight to regain control of the party. The Michigan governor, a favorite of Eisenhower, did not reveal himself as a team player when the moderates tried unsuccessfully through the candidacy of Governor William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania to halt Goldwater's nomination.

On the Democratic side, Johnson appeared to own his party lock, stock and barrel.

Former attorney-general Robert F. Kennedy, brother of the late president, hardly seemed to any position after his election to the Senate in New York to raise any challenge to the president's leadership. It seemed clear that Kennedy would not have defeated Republican Senator Kenneth B. Keating of New York if Johnson hadn't carried the state by a record plurality of nearly 2,500,000.

No Support for Protest Against French Bomb Test

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP)—Soundings by New Zealand for protests against the French plan for nuclear bomb tests in the Pacific have met with singularly little response from other countries.

Because of the lack of enthusiasm shown, it is unlikely that New Zealand will sponsor a resolution at the next meeting of the UN General Assembly condemning the proposed French tests.

France has for some time been preparing a test site on Mururoa Atoll, in the French-owned Tuamoto Archipelago in the South Pacific. It is believed that tests will begin there in 1968.

The site is extremely remote from most countries. New Zealand, more than 2,000 miles from Mururoa, is the nearest independent country and consequently the most alarmed. But much concern is felt among Pacific Island communities which are considerably nearer. They include Tahiti, the main port through which supplies are being channelled to Mururoa, but the concern of the French community there has not swayed the authorities in Metropolitan France.

New Zealand has already sent protests to France, but they have been rejected. The French insist that there will be no danger.

PUTS OUT FEELERS

However, New Zealand has consistently objected to any tests in any part of the world and has been making inquiries as to what support it would receive in a protest against the French proposals.

New Zealand diplomats now believe they would assemble scarcely any backing for a motion directly criticizing the French plans. Even Australia, which is also close to the test site, is lukewarm.

At one time it was thought there might be support from Latin American countries on this west coast of South America, but this prospect has evaporated since President de Gaulle's tour of that region.

African nations have proved unreceptive because they are anxious for France to vacate its present testing grounds in the Sahara.

Nor has there been encouragement or support from the United States or Britain in view of private relationship within NATO.

New Zealand is also concerned that France might take retaliatory action over trade if New Zealand leads a protest against French testing At present, France buys far more from New Zealand than vice versa, and a trade embargo would hurt New Zealand far more than France.

In the circumstances the most likely action, and the one with some hope of success, would be a resolution calling on all countries that have not signed the partial test-ban treaty to do so. New Zealand efforts at the UN are likely to be directed to mustering support for such a motion.

Every home heating fuel claims economy, dependability, cleanliness, convenience.

But compared to other fuels Natural Gas is best.

Just how economical is economical? How dependable is dependable? Just how clean is clean? Compare one fuel to another and the facts will prove that Natural Gas is best no matter what the others claim.

Fact: Natural Gas costs far less than electric heating, and in most areas of Ontario less than oil.

Fact: Natural Gas is so economical that you can heat an entire house with normal insulation evenly, including basement . . . no need for individual room thermostats, for closed off rooms.

Fact: Natural Gas requires none of the extra thick wall and ceiling insulation, or the special basement insulation required by electric heating.

Fact: Natural Gas is dependable. Supply lines are buried underground. Weather and road conditions, power failures or burned out fuses do not disrupt the flow of fuel.

Fact: Natural Gas burns cleaner. All its volume is turned into heat energy. No soot. No greasy deposits. No baked-in dirt on walls or drapes.

Fact: Natural Gas forced air systems make living more comfortable and healthier. The warm air is circulating and being filtered constantly. Uncirculated air, as provided by electric heating, is stale air.

Fact: Natural Gas lets you conveniently and economically use your heating system for air conditioning during Summer months. Lets you humidify the circulating air too.

Fact: Natural Gas, properly installed, with Automatic shut-off and other modern safety controls is as safe a heating system as you'll find anywhere. Electricity leads the list of fire risks over all other forms of energy. (Ontario Fire Marshal's Report.)

Fact: With Natural Gas, service is free.

There is other evidence. But these facts are enough to show that although every fuel makes the same claims, if you compare one fuel to another, Natural Gas is best.

Queen Frederika of Greece Has Charm, Intelligence But Absolutely No Tact

By ROD. CURRIE

ATHENS (CP)—It is said of Queen Frederika of Greece that she has great charm, strength of character and intelligence—but absolutely no tact.

If this is true, lack of it was never any great drawback in the years she and the late King Paul occupied the royal palace and Frederika's voice was a power in the land, one to be reckoned with and usually obeyed.

But events of recent months have altered all that, drastically cutting the range of influence of the former German princess of the House of Hanover, granddaughter of the Kaiser and descendant of Queen Victoria.

And it may be that in the new situation tact is the one characteristic she will need most.

The death last March of the quiet, even-tempered Paul and the marriage of their 34-year old son Constantine, the new king, have put a young Danish queen on the throne and relegated Frederika to Queen Mother, in Greece a sort of royal has-been.

It now remains to be seen whether the iron will of the determined woman, still only 46, will permit her to accept gracefully her place in the background, removed from the intrigue of palace and government she commands so well.

FEAR CONTROL

The recent widespread outburst against her clearly indicates that many Greeks do not think she will. They fear she will continue to exercise influence through her devoted son as it is alleged she did through her husband.

Although Frederika has many detractors who paint her as self-seeking and bossy, she is not without admirers both at home and abroad who insist she is a most maligned woman slive, slandered by those jealous of her talent for getting things done.

Because of her many connections with England—she attended an upper crust girls' school there and has family ties with the British throne through both lines of her parentage and by marriage—she has long fascinated British writers seeking to fathom the depth of her personality and assess her influence for good or evil.

Generally they are divided in their estimation of the woman. But Reginald Peck, writing in The London Daily Telegraph at the time of the young king's wedding, said that to accuse Frederika "of either avarice or political ambition is wide of the mark to the point of malice."

"It is also somewhat illogical since, as queen, she already had practically all she could wish for of both wealth and influence. She was utterly devoted to her husband but the suggestion that her aim was to exercise power through him is absurd."

HAS RURAL BACKING

In Greece, where almost half the more than 8,000,000 population are peasants, her greatest support comes from the country areas, particularly in the underdeveloped north which has benefited most from her charitable works.

These are the people affectionately grateful for her efforts in promoting the queen's fund to assist the poor after the civil war, the Communist uprising following the Second World War that left the country virtually destitute.

She also has done much to promote Greek crafts, with rural shops and exports, bringing a new income to backward areas.

But even in these works she is criticized by some who charge that Frederika never turned her hand to anything except with a motive of improving her own prestige.

The heart of the movement against her has always been centred in Athens, particularly among intellectuals and Communist elements who, though banned in Greece, operate under the guise of various other names. But recently the Athens press, even the pro-government newspapers, also have taken up the chant against her.

REFUSED ALLOWANCE

Finally, Frederika took the unusual step of issuing a statement denying any political involvement and refusing the $108,000 annual allowance offered her. King Constantine interrupted his honeymoon at the height of the crisis to return to his mother's side.

The main charge always has been that, working through the late king and with her own connections in government, she pulled strings to get her own way, to cut through sluggish bureaucracy and even to manipulate the workings of parliament.

Some legislation enacted since she and King Paul succeeded at the death of Paul's brother King George II in 1947 does indeed show traces of the queen's hand.

A 1952 amendment states that in the absence of the king, and the heir apparent is not of age, the queen would act as regent. Another constitutional change provides that Paul, Constantine, would be heir - presumptive instead of Paul's cousin, Prince Peter.

Peter, 25, has been rowing with Frederika ever since the Greek royal household refused to recognise his wife, a Russian princess, 25 years ago. Shortly after Frederika became queen the government formally deprived Peter's wife of the title "princess."

WANT NEW CLIMATE

Many serious-minded Greeks say that the recent new campaign against Frederika rather overstates the case, that most Greeks are not as much opposed to her personally as they are eager for an entirely new attitude in the palace. They want a more democratic—and conventional—monarchy patterned after those in other European countries.

And they feel that with a new young king and his teen-age queen, a representative of one of the most down-to-earth royal families in Europe, now is the ideal time for such a change.

Constantine, a gay prince-about-Europe, has long enjoyed the affection of an indulgent public. Only recently, with the death of his father and the Greek - Turkish fighting over Cyprus, has he started to develop politically and shown an awareness of his responsibilities and an ability to discharge them.

But the king knows there is always a strong feeling in Greece for the return at republic status, which existed from 1924 to 1935. He knows also that in the last 100 years one of his predecessors on the throne was assassinated, one was dethroned and two were expelled.

Most observers agree that if he hopes to save the monarchy he must not be—or even appear to be — influenced by his mother.

Indian Woman Acts Kindly To Eskimo

MONTREAL (CP)—The loneliness and fear of an Eskimo woman in a hospital far from her northern home have been eased by the friendship and kindness of an Indian woman sharing the same room.

The story began in Montreal General Hospital last June when Mary Tukkiapik of Koartuk in Quebec's Arctic area was flown here for an operation.

She was put in a ward room as Mrs. John Scott-Jacobs, an Iroquois Indian from nearby Caughnawaga.

At first there was no communication between them, but Mrs. Scott - Jacobs became aware that Mrs. Tukkiapik was frightened in the strange surroundings.

Sign language solved the problem and they began communicating freely.

Each learned the other had five children. Mrs. Tukkiapik told of her life in the Far North, explaining that until several years ago she lived in an igloo and several times had brushes with death while hunting on the ice with her husband.

As the fall brought cooler weather, Mrs. Scott - Jacobs realized that Mrs. Tukkiapik had arrived wearing running shoes and light garments and lacked winter clothing. She appealed to her friends at Caughnawaga to supply warm clothes.

FIT-A-MITT

Susanna's Family Fare

Dear Susanna: Your column is so many ideas that I've been able to put to such good use that I think it's only fair for me to share a couple of the best of them with you. Take turns on the "a flower stand" and "easy mittens for children."

(A) Use the place to store my barbecue, I took it into the house, cleaned it, and lined it with foil. It is now used as a planter and has eight flower pots in it — the effect is perfectly charming too.

(B) Trace the child's hand, for whom you wish to make a pair of mittens, on paper but cut the pattern out slightly larger. Remove the cuffs and part of the sleeve from an old sweater and place the pattern on this. Cut around the pattern in one piece. Turn inside out and sew well. Embroider a flower on the back of each mitt. — Helene S.

At last! A homemade, woolen mittens mitten! — SUSANNA

Dear Susanna: Would you please answer a perplexing question for me about clear soup? Just what is the difference between "bouillon" and "consomme"? I'm crazy about both but would like to know which to call what! — Nan Barlow

Sit back in a chair and let's enjoy a cup together. If I serve you bouillon, then it will be a strong meat broth formed to be one vegetable only. . . it could be say, beef bouillon or tomato bouillon.

On the other hand, if I say we are going to start our meal with consomme, than you'll know that it will be a clear broth, but that it will be made from combinations of meats or vegetables. . . and consomme is named according to the meat that goes into such as beef consomme, or chicken consomme. All clear now? — SUSANNA

Christmas Decor Sets Theme Of Quintena Rebekah Tea

Fine weather brought many interested visitors to the tea and bazaar given by the Quintena Rebekahs on Wednesday afternoon, at the Odd Fellows' Hall on Front Street. Conveners of the tea were Mrs. F. G. Reed and Mrs. I. Addy.

At the entrance which set the keynote of Christmas with artificial silver trees, a warm welcome was extended by Noble Grand Mrs. Don Hall, and Vice Grand Mrs. John Empey.

Conveners at the apron table were Mrs. E. Beal and Mrs. F. Bird. Different styles were available to please all tastes, and a shift dress had fit even matching aprons.

The home baking table was centred with potted mums in gold and bronze shades, and here the women were kept busy with a steady demand for the delectable offerings. Mrs. H. Brenton and Mrs. F. Bird were in charge of this table.

MEN'S TABLE

The men of the Odd Fellows' Lodge had their own table where they sold a variety of items under the direction of Mr. Pollitt and Mr. Simpson. Some articles of woodworking were Mrs. Grace Airey, Mrs. Allen Adams, Mrs. Glen Wallis and Miss L. Summers.

Gay balloons decorated the children's table where Mrs. F. Pollitt and Mrs. L. Williams were in charge. Sale were doll clothes, children's stuffed animals, knitted articles for babies and small children, and other items.

The mystery of the Parcel Post attracted many buyers. Articles selling at 25 cents were sold in their wrappings and stamps, many of them airmail. Mrs. J. Joyce and Mrs. L. Wannamaker looked after the post office.

The candy table, always a big attraction was convened by Mrs. I. McMartin and Mrs. G. Bonsor.

A Christmas gift table convened by Mrs. E. Anderson and Miss E. Anderson, held many gift ideas for decorations. Toys on this table were novelties fashioned from plastic bottles, transforming them into trains, were Mrs. E. Beal and Mrs. F. Bird. Different styles were available to please all tastes, and a shift dress had fit even matching aprons.

WEDDING

KNIGHT — YOUNG

RAWDON — A quiet wedding ceremony was solemnized in Christ Church (Anglican) Bellerville on Friday evening, October 26th, when Claire Knight, son of Mrs. Donald Knight, Mount Pleasant and the late Mr. Knight and Miss Sally Ann Young of Bellerville were united in marriage.

The reception followed at the Sun Valley Inn and later that evening a dance party was held at Tobe's County Gardens.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Empathy is a deep experience! It is the sensitive capacity to feel our own hurt slapped — and to protest our hurt — when, for no good reason, another man has been wronged.

Real concern cannot end up in indifference and it must move us to recognize that all of society is endangered when the defenceless go unprotected because the protected do not protest.

Those who stand idly by when the blood of others is shed are kinsmen of the murderer. They have handed truth and hatred it with the dead.

FOUL PLAY

Nor is the obligation to protest laid on a man only when violence and foul play are brutally obvious. Often, a much more subtle form of hurt is at work, and it requires even greater courage on the part of those who would respond ethically. In the Germany of Hitler, the great scientists, men of philosophy, experts at technology sat in their academies and spoke nary a word of protest against Nazism. They were not asked to kill Jews, nor, later, were they asked to slay Catholics or to destroy labor leaders. That would be too brutal a thing to suggest to professors. They were asked to do something much more subtle — to engage in a much more discreet kind of violence.

They were instructed to develop fantastic theories and philosophies, and to give these fantasies the stamp of their intellectual approval in order to lend credibility to the myth of a super race. What did they do, these "men of high intellect? They set on their hands while their colleagues, with whom they shared the revolutionary intellectual secrets, were annihilated; first, by character assassination, then by sheer physical extinction.

INTELLIGENT MEN

May we sit in judgment today upon such men as these? We must, and for good reason: we would have expected them to protest, and to resist! Indeed, those few who did, like Thomas Mann — these, we can deeply respect. But we cannot respect men — especially intelligent men — if they do not protest when universal moral issues are at stake. In the end, those German professors also went to perdition — the attacked and the attacker share the same ultimate punishment. For he who permits an immoral attack because he does not cry out in protest must face up to the fact that he, too, will be punished. Yet, Thomas Mann, and men of his type, live on as heroes in the minds of free men, because they had courage to protest when the hour demanded it. They understood that subtlety which, like invisible writing on the wall, suggests a shared common fate when men seek to escape their common responsibility.

Here is the universal appeal of the Hebrew prophets. They are the great dissenters of history, the great speech-and-pen pitted against all of the power of dynasty: little Amos speaking up to the king at Beth El, unafraid and unflinching. But the greatness of the prophets is not only their dissent and protest. They had another quality. Running through the most denunciatory and inflammatory prophetic speeches is a spirit of reconciliation. They speak out because they believe in what they say; they live by their words. They protest because they can see the ultimate outcome of immediate waywardness. They castigate because they love the good — not merely because they hate the evil.

They teach us to know when to speak up.

Hawaiian Will Be Member 89th Congress

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP)—A veteran congresswoman was defeated and a Hawaiian newcomer was added to the feminine contingent of the new 85th Congress.

As a result of Tuesday's U.S. elections, there will be a total of 10 women in the House of Representatives, plus the two incumbents in the Senate—the lowest feminine total in years.

The biggest upset among the 21 women who ran for Congress seats was the defeat of Mrs. Katharine St. George, 68-year-old Republican from Tuxedo, N.Y., who had been in the House since 1946 and was a member of the powerful rules committee.

The major victory was the election of the first woman from the newest state—Hawaii—Mrs. Patsy Takemoto Mink, a 37-year-old lawyer. She is the only newcomer to join the ranks of women in Congress.

Altogether, nine other incumbent congresswomen won re-election, five of them Democrats and four Republicans.

IN DEAN

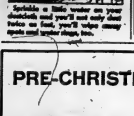
Among them was the dean of congresswomen, Mrs. Francis P. Bolton, Ohio Republican who came to the House in 1940 and is the top-ranking Republican member of the foreign affairs committee.

The 37-year-old Mrs. Mink is a lawyer-legislator of Japanese ancestry.

Pert and dark-haired, she is married to a geologist and mother of a 12-year-old daughter.

She was among 21 women who ran for Congress. All the other newcomers found it tough going.

Eight other women running for the House and two trying for the Senate went down to defeat.



The closest race was that fought by Democrat Genevieve Blatt, a Pittsburgh lawyer and Pennsylvania secretary of internal affairs who lost to Republican Senator Hugh Scott.

Trounced in another Senate contest was Mrs. Elly Peterson, who quit her post as assistant Republican national chairman to make the Michigan Senate race against incumbent Democrat Senator Philip Hart.

The present Senate female twosome, Mrs. Maurine B. Neuberger (Dem., Ore.) and Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith (Rep. Me.) were not up for election this year.

Ann Landers

Bachelorhood Is No Guarantee for Happiness

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I am just an average man. My wife doesn't keep running home to her mother, my father-in-law doesn't mooch cigarettes or try to borrow money from me. My daughter isn't mixed up with a dope addict, and my son isn't in trouble for stealing cars.

ANN LANDERS

I have a healthy bank account, no debts, a cozy apartment, a paid-for-convertible and I'm not on tranquillizers or booze. This year I went to Europe for three weeks. Last year I went to South America. Next year I'm going to the Orient.

How does it happen that I have it so good? The answer is simple. I never married. Why not pass on this formula to your readers? — —SINGLE AND WORRY-FREE.

DEAR SINGLE — So you never married? Big deal. If your father had followed your formula where would you be?

Bachelorhood is no guarantee against being broke, nervous, unhappy or alcoholic. Just look around, Buster.

Marriage is not for everyone, and those who spurn it in favor of travelling solo are neither to be congratulated nor criticized. The singletons miss a lot of grief, but they miss a great many joys, too.

Having chosen one road, one never knows what the other road would have been like. And perhaps it's just as well.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Please print my letter. Every postman's wife will be grateful.

My husband believes in giving the people on his route deluxe service. When a letter arrives with postage due, he pays for it out of his own pocket. This could amount to any amount from 1c to 30c on a letter. It is not unusual for my husband to lay out $2.00 in one day. He then leaves a note and hopes he will get the money back.

You'd be surprised, Ann, if you knew how many people don't even say "Thank you," much less pay the letter carrier what they owe him. Perhaps these folks don't know that if the postage is short a good rule is to send back the postage due letter back to the post office and they'd have to come down and get it.

Am I too harsh on people? Can it be they don't know? Thanks for your help. — LETTER CARRIER'S WIFE.

• • •

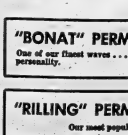
DEAR LETTER CARRIER'S WIFE — If they didn't know before, they know now. How about it, girls, are you square with your postman? Or is the Good Joe stuck because he saved you a trip to the post office?

• • •

DEAR ANN — I've been working in this place for almost three years. Six girls have gotten married right under my nose but nothing exciting ever happens to me. Maybe I'm not pushy enough. Please give me some help.

About three months ago a very nice young man was transferred here as supervisor for our section. He is clean-cut, pleasant, mannerly and just my type. During working hours he pays quite a lot of attention to me but when 5:00 o'clock comes he vanishes into thin air.

For the last three weeks he has been coming by my station after his lunch hour and he always brings me a sack of peanuts. Do you think this means anything? How can I get him to ask me for a date? I'd hate to spoil things by rushing him, but maybe I ought to do something. If so, what? — TORCHY.



DEAR TORCHY — I know a man once who bought a sack of peanuts every day for the monkeys in the zoo but so far as I know he never asked any of them out.

Apparently this fellow is the shy type and needs a little encouragement. Invite a few couples to your place for supper or Sunday brunch and include "Peanuts." If he has any interest in you he'll take it from there.

If excessive drinking is wrecking your health or destroying someone you love, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Help For The Alcoholic," enclosing with your request 20c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Cost Mother $1,500 to Have Second Child

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — It probably cost Mrs. Erik Thorberg about $1,500 to have her second child.

Mrs. Thorberg travelled from her home in Norheim, Norway, to this southeast British Columbia community so she would not be forced to have her baby at home, attended only by a midwife.

Under the socialized medicine scheme in Norway, she said, she could not enter hospital or be cared for by a doctor.

Her first child was born under the Scandinavian country's "security from the cradle to the grave" and she didn't like it.

"If you think you have to wait a long time for the doctor here, you should go to Norway," she said.

So Mrs. Thorberg came to British Columbia to stay with friends until the happy event.

The baby was born in mid-September and Mrs. Thorberg left B.C. Monday.

Flashback to 1939

WOMAN WELDER — A woman welds bren gun ammunition clips in a plant during the Second World War. Women took the place of men in the plants giving Canadian women a big push in their campaign for equality. At the end of the war 1,046,000 women held jobs, apart from 46,315 in the services and 800,000 on the farms, out of a total of 5,500,000 females in Canada. (CP Photo)

When the Women Took Over the Jobs While the Men Marched Out to War

By JEAN SHARP
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Twenty-five years ago Canada went to war, and the walls that held back the tide of emancipation for women came tumbling down.

Inside and outside the military services, women took over jobs that in other wars had been filled by men.

They were recruited for new positions created by the burgeoning technology of the Second World War.

Six years later, they drew back as gratefully as anyone from wartime jobs. But they realized then that, though their minds were on other things, they had made enormous gains in the battle of the sexes. And they had the intention of retreating within pre-war boundaries.

Just how far they have come in a quarter of a century is sometimes obscured by the emphasis on day-to-day progress in their campaign for equality.

But a glimpse into the newspaper files of the late 1930s is, particularly for a woman, a glimpse into another world.

Listen to a professor from the Harvard University traffic research bureau discussing women drivers in 1937.

He told a reporter it was almost impossible to teach a woman over 25 to drive a car properly.

"They get set mentally and physically, their muscles refuse to respond at the speed necessary in modern driving conditions."

LACKED VOTE

In a day when women's votes are assiduously wooed, how different this 1937 letter to a newspaper sounds.

The writer is defending the women of Quebec against a charge of indifference to the fact that they did not yet have a vote in provincial elections.

"May I suggest that perhaps the women of Quebec are too busy bringing babies into the world and raising large families to trouble with such relatively unimportant matters as the right to vote."

Change was coming. Papers had a constant trickle of stories about the first woman this or that. An article reviewing news of women in 1937 observed:

"Public confidence in women's abilities in new fields is reflected in some of the appointments held by the sex in Dominion government."

They included the CBC Board of Governors, the National Employment Commission, civil service and National Research Council.

But until 1939 it was almost a case of one woman at a time, each one credited with an outstanding individual achievement.

In the autumn of 1939, with the war only weeks old, 200,000 women signed a volunteer register indicating their willingness to do whatever they could to help in the war effort.

OFFERED NEW CHANCES

And the government was showing its confidence in them, or at least its recognition of the desperate need for workers, by asking them if they would like to be trained as motor mechanics, telegraphers, map readers, as well as in their more customary fields.

When the formation of the women's army and air forces was announced in 1941, their quotas were filled almost in days. Between 1940 and 1942 the percentage of women in wage-earners increased 15 per cent, with the biggest growth in factories.

Almost 400,000 women were at work, and that number would more than double in three years.

What they were doing provided an accurate forecast of things to come.

"To an important extent the growth in many cases has undoubtedly been at the expense of other industries ordinarily employing large numbers of women, notably domestic and personal services," said a bureau of statistics report.

"The remainder have been recruited from those who were formerly unemployed," adolescent girls, home-makers and other women who under ordinary circumstances would not belong to the wage-earning population."

SOME RESERVATIONS

That there would be a new definition of "ordinary circumstances" few then realized.

In 1943, Ontario's premier, Gordon Conant, found it necessary to combine tribute and expediency in explaining the appointment of a woman coroner.

"With the growing importance of women in our social, economic and industrial structure, it is fitting that there should be a lady coroner. Furthermore, the scarcity of doctors makes the action of the government logical and proper."

A year later, Charles Daley, Ontario minister of labor, criticized the large-scale use of women in war plants, employing women a politician would be unlikely to use today.

Expressing the view that women should be sent back to their homes and their proper responsibilities, he declared that had the manpower problem been properly handled "it would never have been necessary to drag women out of their homes and into factories."

Mr. Daley's comments were running counter to the tide, however. In 1943, it was reported that for the first time in the history of any army, Canadian women now were staff officers on equal footing with men.

WRENS IN TROUSERS

And in 1944, a newspaper story told of bell-bottom trousers being issued to Wrens heading overseas.

"Every member of the Women's Royal Canadian Naval Service who is drafted for overseas service is now issued with a pair of the famous navy trousers to wear on the trip across the Atlantic and later if she wishes."

At the war's end, 1,046,000 Canadian women made up the total from 46,315 in the services and 800,000 on the farms, out of a total of 5,500,000 females in Canada. One job in three was held by a woman.

The percentages have shrunk a little since then, but not much. Now 1,858,000 women are members of the working force out of a total female population of 9,019,000.

They represent 28 per cent of the working force, and half of them are married.

Meat Balls With Rice

By MARY MOORE

Nothing had been planned for dinner because I did not know if we would be home. Some friends had written that they might arrive in town and wanted us to dine with them at their motel that evening. They phoned at 5 p.m. to say they were stranded 60 miles away with transmission trouble.

So I went to the refrigerator to see what I could find. The cupboard wasn't quite bare. The best thing I found was one pound of ground round steak in the freezer. I thought lots of you might find yourself in just such a fix.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

Devilled Lamb Patties; Mint Jelly; Scalloped Potatoes; Fresh Frozen Green Peas; Slaw with Grapefruit Sections; Double Rich Chocolate Cake (see Wednesday); Tea.

SUNDAY

Pineapple Juice Cocktail; Fricasseed Chicken with Dumplings; Shoestring Beets; Green Limas; Orange Sherbet with Fresh Frozen Raspberries; Madeira Cake (see Friday); Coffee.

MOIST MEAT BALLS (serves 4):

1 lb. ground round steak, ¾ cup milk (if meat is still unthawed use hot milk), 3 medium small eggs (or 2 large), 2-3 cup breadcrumbs (I used commercial crumbs from a package), 1 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, ½ large onion, chopped, ½ large green pepper, chopped.

In large frying pan melt the butter and gently saute the onion and green pepper in it. In large bowl mix meat, milk, eggs, crumbs and salt. Allow to rest a few minutes for crumbs to soak up some of the moisture. Shape into 8 uniform balls. These will be soft. Push onion and green pepper to side of pan, and add meat balls and allow to cook until they firm up a little and can be rolled over. Cook gently, about 30 minutes in all, turning meat balls so they are lightly brown on all sides. When you serve these add the onion and green pepper in pan as a topping to each meat ball. Serve with

PARCHED CURRIED RICE:

In heavy pot (I used my small pressure cooker) melt 2 tablespoons butter. Add 1¼ teaspoons curry powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ¾ cup raw long-grain rice. Saute over medium heat until the butter is all curry-colored and the rice turns opaque and is saturated with butter. Now add 1½ cups boiling water, cover and cook gently 22 to 30 minutes when all rice grains will be separated and water all absorbed. Delicious.

I was trying to ripen green tomatoes on my window sill, but it was slow going. So I took down four, washed and cut them in halves crosswise. I sprinkled them with a little salt and accent and fried them just until tender in a little butter. If green tomatoes are a thing of the past in your community, Brussels sprouts or frenched green beans or steam-fried green peppers would be an appropriate green vegetable alternative.

MELROSE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of Melrose W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. A. Long in the form of a Hallowe'en party. The rooms were decorated in keeping with the theme and the majority of the members were dressed in Hallowe'en attire.

Mr. H. Melburn provided violin music during the costume parade and Mr. N. Demille acted as judge, assisted by Mrs. C. Bates and Mrs. M. Lazier. Their choice of Mrs. O'Connor as the best dressed and Mrs. J. McFarland as the best comic was favorably received.

The meeting was presided over by President Mrs. G. Bratton and during the business period donations were made to the International scholarship fund, and towards gifts for the men tally retarded. Mrs. J. McLaren and Mrs. R. Grahame were appointed to attend the training school at Stirling on "Focus on Finishes." A euchre was planned for November at Melrose hall and $5 was voted to be sent to the adopted Korean child, Sim-Yon-Soo. Arrangements were announced for the Christmas party on December 9 which includes supper in Belleville.

Mrs. J. McLaren, convener for historical research, opened the program with the motto "Live Today but Remember Yesterday," which was dealt with by Mrs. C. Weese who closed with the thought that "we give thanks to all the people of yesterday who helped make possible the many enjoyments of today."

TALK ON GRIST MILL

Mrs. L. Gnaedinger gave a reading by Harry J. Boyle, part of which follows: "All the ruins in the country have a sad air about them and the wreckage of a grist mill by a river marks the passing not only of people but a common and what was almost a way of life. The miller was most essential, using the water-power to convert wheat into flour and the grain into feed."

She described the mill and the dam which stored up the water for reserved power. The miller was a busy, man pouring grain into what was called a shoe in the grinding stone on top which forced the grain out through the grooves which had to be sharpened at regular intervals.

For children, a trip to the mill was a delight as the parent was seldom in a hurry and enjoyed the gossip which took place between the neighbors. As years passed the mill became a more modern enterprise and the miller made flour, bran, shorts and middlings.

Then the bake-wagon started routes on the concessions and women began buying their bread. In time, farmers stopped hauling grain to be ground for grist as the portable mill came on a truck to the barn and ground enough grist for a season. Gradually, the old mill degenerated and wind and weather left it a place of beams, joists and rafters looking like a decayed prehistoric monster.

A man came one day and searching the wreckage found the old mill-stones and took them to the county museum, where young people view them and wonder how their own ancestors could have been so primitive.

Mrs. C. Hagerman followed with a humorous reading and Mrs. McLaren gave the history of the Mary Stewart Collect," explaining each line with its meaning.

Short readings were given by Mrs. J. English and Mrs. R. Clarke, after which Mrs. McLaren closed with a poem.

Another impressive meeting ended with refreshments and a social hour.

What Has Happened to Happy, Singing Children?

DEAR DORIS — I am always interested in reading your column. If you will pardon my criticism, I think you did not get the point that "A Daily Reader" was trying to put across — i.e., the quality of the noise that children make today. Listen carefully, and you will find it a mixture of bullying, frightened crying, screaming and yelling. Where is the singing and happy (not derisive) laughter? In this set-up we have screaming mothers, and the barking of ill-treated dogs.

DORIS CLARK

In today's world we make much of extroverts, who are mostly bullies and those who think themselves smart, but we still have just as many quiet, gentle children who will find very little happiness in their lives. I think our main trouble, which will grow worse, is lack of privacy. Some people have never known any privacy except when they are in the bathroom, and sometimes not even then. We all need a quiet place to creep into occasionally.

The fact that "A Daily Reader" is worried about these conditions augurs well for the bringing up of her own children. I hope she does as well as I have done. — MOTHER OF TWO.

DEAR MOTHER — Congratulations. And thank you for writing in.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — A boy I know wants me to go with him but I dislike him. He is the kind I want to stay away from. His older brother is going to marry one of my friends, so he sends me letters by way of his brother. He thinks I'm the only girl in the world for him.

Could you tell me what to do just to let him know I don't want any part of him? — IN NEED OF HELP.

DEAR IN NEED — This is an old, old dilemma: boy wants girl; girl wants out of the picture! You could ignore his letters. If he follows up with personal contact, time enough then to refuse a date. No cause to be rude about it.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I am about to become engaged, but am a handicap with only my right hand. Will it be proper to wear a diamond on my ring finger of my right hand? — LEFT OUT.

DEAR LEFT OUT — Certainly. And a woman with two arthritic hands may be wearing hers on a fine chain around her neck.

The wedding ring is only a symbol of marriage. Custom puts it on the bride's left hand, third finger. Where this isn't practical, common sense — and love — will find a better spot for it.

(Don't just muddle along. Doris is a Canadian social worker who can help you take action about what's troubling you.)

The Experts Say

Organization Is the Key To Fashion Show Success

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP)—If your club is sponsoring a fashion show organization is the key to success, whether you are using professionals or club members as models and commentators.

And the key to organization is to give yourself lots of time, says Catherine Smyth, Toronto public relations counsellor.

"If you are working with a store, give them at least three weeks' notice. Their part in it may sound easy but it's a lot of work."

Advise your local newspaper well in advance and get invitations out early enough to assure a good audience.

"Make sure the models know the physical aspects of the room they will be working in. If they are professionals they won't need a complete run-through, but let them know exactly what to expect if the models are amateurs they should have a rehearsal."

Miss Smyth says that if using amateurs "they should be people who are enthusiastic about clothes so they make it look as if modelling is fun." And the models should suit the clothes and vice-versa. For example, don't use high school girls to show sophisticated evening wear.

The models will also have to be willing to take time to have a fitting before the show.

COMMENTATOR IS KEY

"Be sure a good commentator is used. This is really very important. Make sure she is fully aware of the clothes, well prepared before the show."

Miss Smyth says the commentator should know the number for each item, its fabric, color, price, and be able to say who provided the accessories.

"In her commentary she should say a little more than that it is black and lined. She should be someone who is fashion-conscious. She can work ahead of time, read fashion magazines for tips. She should allow no awkward silences, and should be good enough so that a mix-up in order of appearances, for instance, won't floor her."

Music is important, says Miss Smyth. "Have a piano or quartet, or use canned music you can control. If you are going to serve food, serve it after the show unless it's very informal."

An idea is to do the show around a theme. My Fair Lady is one current possibility. And there should be decorations to fit the theme.

Backstage there should be a dresser, a room large enough to change in, a rack on which the clothes can be hung in order of appearance, and another rack for the models' own clothes.

35 TO 40 GARMENTS

The clothes should arrive ahead of time, be pressed if necessary, checked and numbered. The commentator should be present while this is being done.

Miss Smyth says about 35 to 40 garments make a good show. About five to seven models should be enough.

The models should come equipped with white and black gloves and good black shoes unless these are being loaned for the occasion. They should also have some jewelry, but the dresser might be prepared to offer tactful advice on how to dress up or dress down a garment with jewelry.

"If you have amateur models, have them be natural. Don't try strange new hairdos or makeup on the night of a show.

"They should walk slowly, know how to handle a skirt, and turn slowly to show it. And they should smile.

"Tell them to talk to the audience if it's that kind of show. All they need say is, 'Yes, isn't it lovely? It's from Smith's.'

"They won't be nervous if they are sure of what they're doing. That's why a rehearsal is important.

"Have a good ending. Bring all the models out, or have a wedding scene.

"Have a program with a list of the clothes if it is possible and be sure everyone is given credit—the store, the printer—someone who has donated flowers or tablecloths—everyone."

SPEAKING OF MANNERS

BY PATRICIA LEWIS

CHOOSE JEWELRY WITH CARE

If you are fresh out of dimmonds; it's comforting to know there is a lot of well-designed costume jewelry available to take up the slack. From the viewpoint of good taste, though, the question is when and how to wear the baubles for best effect.

Carefully selected and tastefully worn costume jewelry can set the tone of any outfit. There are certain basic rules, however which a buyer friend of mine recently pointed out.

Plan your selection for the time of day and aim at individuality, she says. A string of pearls is correct at all times, anywhere — for school, a party or even for a formal affair.

Bead necklaces are attractive informal daytime jewelry that can be used a great variety to mat or contrast with colors in your dress. But brilliant stones in elaborate settings, such as diamonds, rhinestones, rubies and sapphires should be held in reserve for evening.

The flowing lines of pleats, flares and ruffles are perfect foils for swinging pendants, chains and looping ropes of beads. With casuals and sweaters, a long gold chain with pendant is considered smart.

PENDANTS POPULAR

Pendants, she says, are much in vogue because of plunging necklines. They range from initial or heraldic gold-finish pendants to lacy filigree or large-cut stones in amethyst, sapphire amber, emerald or ruby.

With a simple dress, wear a rope of beads, a large bracelet or important earrings. If your face is long and narrow, avoid dangling earrings. As an alternate, wear an elaborate brooch.

The "big" look is coming in this Fall, according to our expert, and tailored pieces are popular, particularly with suits.

Plus are also catching on, gracing a hat, cuff, gloves or waistline. If you have a slim waist and want to call attention to it, try an attractive pin at the midriff.

If your dress is feminine, with a delicate air, jewelry should be severe — a pair of plain earrings, a bangle bracelet, a single pin or a pearl necklace. Remember that stone-studded pieces are taboo for school — and anywhere else until after five.

The way you wear your jewelry reflects your personality. Choose it with care and you'll prove you're a person of good taste.

Peggy Goldwater Ready For Holiday With Hubby

PHOENIX, Ariz. (CP-AP) — With the hectic campaign over, Peggy Goldwater will get the vacation to which she was looking forward.

Her husband, defeated Republican candidate Barry Goldwater, announced Wednesday that with his bid for the presidency over, "Peggy and I will take a little rest some place." He didn't say where.

The shy and reserved wife of the extrovert Senator Goldwater had moved quietly through the campaign with her husband, showing a quiet sense of humor and staying clear of politics.

She acknowledged at first she dreaded the prospect of campaigning, but she pitched in and just recently said hasn't been so bad after all.

"I still think a woman's place is in the home," she said. "Since Barry prefers me not to make speeches, I don't. But I couldn't turn down the invitations of the women's organizations which have worked so hard for my husband."

Margaret Johnson Goldwater, called Peggy, married the Arizona senator 30 years ago.

She is 55 years old, a smart dresser with bouffant brown hair and blue eyes. She is five feet three inches tall and watches her diet to avoid plumpness.

For countless hours she stood in reception lines and shook thousands of hands in receptions across the country.

Born in Muncie, Ind., the only daughter of a wealthy industrialist, Mrs. Goldwater now runs a $150,000 gadget - filled house outside of Phoenix and a two - bedroom apartment in Washington.

The children are grown. Joanne, 36, is married to Dr. Thomas H. Ross, Torrance, Calif., and the mother of four children. Barry Jr., 36, and Michael, 34, took leaves from their jobs to help their father campaign. Young Peggy, 30, was married last June to Richard Arlen Holt of Los Angeles

There was a large attendance at both services with a capacity audience in the morning. The worshippers were in attendance from Oshawa, Belleville, Trenton and the surrounding area.

The guest minister, Rev. Paul M. Packman, B.A., of Cannington, gave two message. The morning theme was based on Paul's letter to the Romans, "He Has No Hands." The evening theme centred around Paul's letter to the Colossians "Who, Me?" The pastor, Rev. W. G. Fletcher assisted with the evening service.

Mrs. Kenneth Weaver provided special organ music and the choir of 30 voices rendered two anthems. In the evening, the choir, Mrs. Marguerite McMullen and Miss Judy Cooney gave vocal selections. See Premier as De Gaulle's Heir

PARIS (Reuters) — Speculation is growing here that President de Gaulle would like to see Prime Minister Georges Pompidou succeed him as head of state.

Pompidou handled affairs of state at home during the four weeks of de Gaulle's recent South American tour. This marked the president's longest absence abroad since he returned to power in 1958.

Constitutionally, the election on the Fifth Republic's second president rests entirely with the French electorate. But there is no doubt that de Gaulle could raise massive popular support for Pompidou.

Some reports say de Gaulle has prepared a "political testament"—to be opened in the event of his death—naming the 53-year-old Pompidou as his choice to succeed him.

MAY RUN AGAIN

Another version comes from the weekly magazine Paris-Match. It says the general will run for re-election next year and retire in 1967. He would then recommend Pompidou to the electors as his successor for the remaining five years of his term of office.

The magazine adds that this is why Pompidou in recent months has made more than a dozen visits to the French provinces, making speeches and mixing with the people.

Speculation on Pompidou's future has also been sparked by his place in the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the First World War battle of the Marne. He stood by de Gaulle's side in an open car to greet the crowds.

Critics of Pompidou say he is not a political force and does not enjoy the support of the ruling Gaullists Union for the New Republic.

ENJOYS SUPPORT

But at the union's annual congress top Gaullist Jacques Chaban Delmas told Pompidou publicly: "We count on you tomorrow and for the future."

A brilliant academic career led Pompidou through the Ecole Normale Superieure, summit of France's highly selective scholastic system, and into the teaching post he held at the outbreak of the Second World War.

Pompidou became a member of de Gaulle's personal staff after the liberation in 1944. When the general went into political exile in 1947, Pompidou continued to work closely with him. In 1953, although continuing this association, he began a business career with Rothschilds bank.

From de Gaulle's return to power in 1958 until January, 1959, Pompidou was his chief personal assistant. He then returned to Rothschilds until becoming prime minister in April 1962.

Pompidou is married and has one son. His hobby is growing roses.

Vancouver Sun Had $952,814 Net Profit

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun Publishing Company Limited reported Wednesday a net profit of $952,814 for the financial year ended Aug. 31.

Board Chairman C. B. Delbridge said in the annual report that net operating income, not including $322,990 profit from the sale of securities and assets, was $629,824, an increase of 8.9 per cent over operating income of $577,925 in 1963.

The board chairman said the gain this year resulted from increased dividends from Pacific Press Limited, which owns two Vancouver daily newspapers, the afternoon Sun and the morning Province. Sun Publishing Company owns half of Pacific Press.

Diefenbaker Says Liberals Reverse Stands

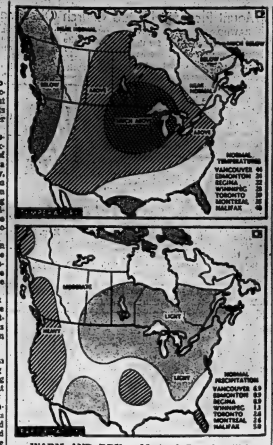
PRESTON, Ont. (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker accused the federal government Wednesday of reversing its stand on two major issues after coming to power.

Addressing a Progressive Conservative party workers' meeting during a tour of Waterloo South riding where a byelection will be held Monday, Mr. Diefenbaker said that when the Liberals were in opposition they said it was wrong to peg the value of the Canadian dollar. They had also fought the sale of non-military goods to Communist countries.

"They reversed themselves on those issues," he said. "The sales of Canadian wheat to Russia are the only things that have preserved the integrity of the Canadian dollar."

Mr. Diefenbaker was speaking in support of PC candidate James Chapin, who is attempting to win the seat held by his father, whose death resulted in the byelection.

GALT (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker has suggested that the distinctive flag issue be put to a plebiscite at the next general election.



After campaigning across Waterloo South riding, where a federal byelection will be held Monday, Mr. Diefenbaker told a Galt public meeting that the flag should be held back.

It should not be put through this session of Parliament, Mr. Diefenbaker said, and went on to suggest the plebiscite in conjunction with a national election.

He got onto the flag issue after a heckler yelled: "What about a distinctive Canadian flag?".

Replied Mr. Diefenbaker "My friend, I'll come to the flag and you will flag out when I get through with that."

He said the Liberal administration has used the flag to cover up its failings in such fields as foreign investment, taxation, the pension plan and redistribution legislation.

Opinion of Davie Fulton On Constitutional Formula Used to Prod PC Leader

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberals prodded sway Wednesday at a sensitive spot on the Progressive Conservatives' anatomy—the opinions of former justice minister Fulton about a proposed formula for amending the constitution.

Twice in the Commons Liberal MPs, Maurice Moreau (York—Scarborough) and Marcel Prud'homme (Montreal St. Denis), drew attention to the use being made of a quote by Mr. Fulton on the Lib-pal gov ernment's proposed amending formula.

The memo backs parts of the government's proposed formula as (familiar to the one Mr. Fulton proposed as Conservative justice minister in 1961. At other places, it mentions written into much limitation is being placed on federal powers through new parts added to the 1961 proposal.

Part of it was quoted in the Commons last Friday by Eldon Woolliams (PC — Bow River). Other sections of it were quoted Tuesday in press reports suggesting Mr. Fulton's views conflict with those of his official Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

To some Conservatives the whole subject is tied up with whether an indirect leadership challenge is being offered to Mr. Diefenbaker.

TAKES CHARGE

Mr. Moreau charged in the Commons Friday that Mr. Woolliams in quoting from the Fulton memo last Friday argued that it supported the contention that the 1964 formula places a new interpretation on powers which could be adopted by Parliament to the province.

Mr. Moreau said news reports about the memo spoke if as saying the provinces could see no new jurisdiction or power on the provinces nor diminish federal jurisdiction or power in the slightest.

He asked Mr. Woolliams to table a copy of the Fulton memo which, Conservative sources said, was written by Mr. Fulton at Mr. Diefenbaker's request.

When Gordon Churchill, (PC—Winnipeg South Centre) protested that such a request was a flagrant abuse of the rules. Transport Minister Pickeregill said he possessed a copy of the memo and it stated the exact opposite to the Woolliams' interpretation.

Speaker Alan Macnaughton cut off further discussion by ruling it out of order. But Mr. Prud'homme was able to get Justice Minister Favreau to say that quotations from the memo give a true picture of the amending formula's effect on federal and provincial powers.

Conservative sensitivity on the subject arises from discussions behind closed doors of the caucus of MPs about the attitude the party should take on the government's proposed amending formula.

A number of Conservatives have attacked it in the Commons and Mr. Diefenbaker was quoted as stating in Toronto Tuesday in press reports suggesting Mr. Fulton's views conflict with those of his official Opposition Leader Diefenbaker.

Mr. Diefenbaker argued that provisions of the provincial his government's 1961 formula are contained in the Liberal formula "but there are two new federal changes made that did not exist in the plans we had."

Under certain circumstances, the provinces would be allowed to opt out totally from a federal field, he said. Canada could become "a loose association of states — the balkanization of Canada."

There have been reports that Leon Balcer, Quebec Conservative leader and MP for Trois-Rivieres, led a group of Conservatives in opposing the criticisms voiced by Mr. Diefenbaker and some of the Conservative MPs.

With publication of parts of the Fulton memo, one "conservative source" suggested that "Balcer-Fulton axis is a: work."

Canadian Officer Has Plan For Instant Peace-Keeping

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — There's a suggestion floating around the 23-nation conference here on United Nations peace - keeping techniques on how to achieve an instant UN force.

It's this: Any time trouble starts brewing any place where it is considered possible that the UN will have to take a hand, embark a UN force by sea.

The force could anchor outside the territorial limits of the country or countries concerned and wait for UN decision as to whether it would be needed.

If it were, the force could go ashore immediately and start to work.

The suggestion comes from a Canadian officer but it is not militarily and politically complicated it is doubtful that the Canadian government would or ever endorse it despite its frequent emphasis on the need for standby UN formations.

The proposal assumes, perhaps over - optimistically, that UN members would be prepared to keep such a force at readiness and then have it approach an area whose problems were still being debated in the UN.

SHOWS EAGERNESS

However, informants said Wednesday, the suggestion well illustrates how keen all Canada's armed forces are on the peace-keeping role.

Lt.-Gen. Frank Victor Allard, chief of operational readiness on the Canadian defence staff, told the meeting: "We want to use our army for peace, to offer the services. We are here to help all nations preserve peace."

His brief and moving speech, delivered in French and English, evoked a spontaneous burst of applause from the some 100 delegates.

Gen. Allard was replying to India's Maj.-Gen. Indar J. Rikhye, official UN observer to the meeting, who had wondered out loud whether Canada might be willing to take on most of the airlift operations involved in UN peace-keeping.

Peterborough Opposes Bid of Barrie Station

OTTAWA (CP) — A proposal to set up a television rebroadcasting station at Peterborough, Ont., was placed before the Board of Broadcast Governors Wednesday.

The bid was made by Ralph Snelgrove, operator of CKVR and CHBX Barrie, 30 miles southwest of Haliburton. It was opposed by CHEX-TV in Peterborough and by a group of MPs from the Haliburton area.

The board will announce its decision on the proposal later.

Mr. Snelgrove told the board it's a public service that the proposed satellite station would rebroadcast the signals from his stations, adding that the new SEVR-TV signal is received in the area but picture quality is inconsistent.

Area residents had asked whether the signal could be improved, Mr. Snelgrove said, and a satellite station would do this. A check showed that the Barrie TV signal arrives in most areas near Haliburton with about double the strength of the signal from CHEX-TV despite the greater distance.

HILLS A FACTOR

This was because of high hills between Haliburton and Peterborough. If the board approved the application the satellite station could be put into operation in "a very few months."

Don Lowry, broadcasting director, presented the CHEX-TV opposition on behalf of Wally Rewegan, CHEX-TV manager who was ill and could not appear.

The Peterborough station asked for a deferment of decision to allow time to study service to the Haliburton area. CHEX-TV had doubled the height of its transmitting tower and this had helped. But because of the hilly terrain, there were still pockets in the Haliburton highlands where the signal was bad.

Timmins Boy, 6, Shoots Baby

TIMMINS (CP)—A two-year-old Timmins girl was accidentally shot dead Wednesday.

Brenda Harju, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eino Harju, was killed instantly when a six-year-old boy, a neighbor's chin, fired a .303 rifle across a small room. Police say the boy must have touched the trigger accidentally.

At the time, Mrs. Harju was upstairs telephoning the doctor about one of her other children. Mr. Harju was at work.

Remembrance Day Service Plans Made

November 11 is Remembrance Day — the day when Canadians pause to pay tribute to those who died in battle in two bloody World Wars, that we might have a free country.

Canadians across the Dominion will gather at cenotaphs and memorials, where, during Remembrance Day services at 11:00 a.m., the country will pause to observe a two minutes' silence.

Here in Belleville a Remembrance Day service will be held at the Station Street cenotaph at 11:00 a.m. under the direction of The Royal Canadian Legion.

A parade will form up at the Bridge Street Armouries and move off towards the cenotaph at 10:25 a.m. All veterans are invited to participate.

Taking part in the service will be Father J. McAvoy who will give the invocation; Rev. A. Lewis Sutherland reading the Scripture; Major, The Venerable Arch-Deacon A. S. McConnell, M.B.E.C.D., who will give the address and Envoy Bram Humphreys will give the benediction.

Wreaths will be carried to the cenotaph by wreath bearers.

During the service, Silver Cross Mother, Mrs. Pearl Way of Centre Street, will lay the Provincial Command wreath. She will be accompanied by E. Liddle and R. Madden.

Mrs. Way lost two sons during World War II, sponsored by The Royal Canadian Legion, had the opportunity of visiting the grave of her eldest son, buried in Holland.

The "Last Post" and the "Reveille" will be sounded on the bugle by Jack Green, Salvation Army Band Master. Members of the Salvation Army Band will play various hymns throughout the service.

In the event of heavy rainfall, the service will be held in the Belleville Armouries.

Man Arrested in Toronto After St. Catharines Robbery

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto man was arrested and charged with armed robbery here Wednesday night less than four hours after a Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch at St. Catharines was robbed of $12,000.

James Drakovic, 40, was arrested after a chase by police through back yards and a garage in the west end.

Police said a sawed-off .303 calibre rifle loaded with soft point hunting ammunition was found in the car. Police said all the money from the robbery was recovered.

In St. Catharines, a man walked into the bank on Page and Queenston Streets in the fore closing times to ask for a loan. After the bank closed, he produced a rifle from a canvas bag and looted cash drawers and the vault.

The gunman spent half an hour with Manager Bill Empringham trying to float a loan. As Mr. Empringham was letting him out the locked bank door, the gunman made an ex-

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 4, 1964

With the Commons in its ninth day of debate on interim supply, the measure granting the government more than $760,000,000 for payment of November and December bills was approved.

The House moved on to consideration of departmental spending estimates.

Health Minister Martin said he personally arranged that Social Credit Leader Thompson represent the government on a paid trip to Africa.

Heward Grafftey (PC — Brome-Missisquoi) said Canada soon will have a critical shortage of physicians and scientists unless more encouragement is given to engineering.

Industry Minister Drury said Canada cannot take any big steps toward adopting the metric system of measurement until the United States does.

THURSDAY, Nov. 5

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. EST to consider external affairs department estimates. The Senate meets at 3 p.m.

APPROVED IN PRINCIPLE

OTTAWA (CP)—The Senate gave second reading Wednesday to a private bill to incorporate the Canadian Institute of Actuaries. Senator M. Wallace McCutcheon (PC—Ontario), the bill's sponsor, said there are some 300 fully-qualified actuaries in Canada and about 150 of lesser status. Actuaries were experts on insurance risks and premiums, statistics, mathematics and accounting.

Papers Will Not Heed Demands of Journalists

By GUY RONDEAU

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP)—A. F. Mercier, vice-president and general manager of Le Soleil and L'Evenement, said Wednesday night those Quebec City newspapers will not heed a demand by a union representing their newspaper men for a "complete and public" retraction of statements made in a recent directive on handling news.

He spoke before a French-language service club in this northern city 100 miles north of Quebec City.

The Syndicate des Journalistes de Quebec announced Tuesday that unless the two newspapers publish the requested retraction by Nov. 7. The union will take legal action for damages.

The Oct. 22 directive banned publication of statements preaching violence by separatists, nationalists and other groups of persons; and of protests against established authority by persons considered to have no authority or groups considered not representative of the public interest.

The union notice to the newspapers said the directive was issued after the Queen's visit to Quebec Oct. 10-11, accused the "separatists and the fascist extremists and revolutionaries."

"We will not make a retraction," Mr. Mercier said

POLICY LINE

These instructions exactly represent the line of thinking of the two newspapers and should be applied by those who are responsible for publication of the newspapers. These are simply instructions such as those found in all organizations."

He said the interpretation of the news by the newspapers' journalists has not followed management's line of thinking for more than a year.

News values were no longer being respected, he said. All kinds of news was being published regardless of its worth.

Mr. Mercier said it was entirely wrong to claim that Le Soleil wished to impose silence on its journalists.

Mr. Mercier said the directive had been signed by Messrs. Charles de LaDurantaye, the newspapers' managing editor and that he had not seen it himself before it was read to his assistant. However, Mr. Mercier said he entirely approved of the directive.

PRINCIPALS REMINDED

TORONTO (CP) — Principals of Catholic high schools have been reminded by the department of education that bursaries are to be awarded on the basis of financial need, not on the basis of academic brilliance. W. R. Stewart, deputy minister of education, said Wednesday the department has received complaints from parents that in many cases bursaries were announced as if they were given for outstanding scholastic achievement.

Senator Pouliot in Favor Of Giving Lord Thomson Canadian Citizenship, Medal

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Jean-Francois Pouliot said Wednesday that Lord Thompson of Fleet, instead of being deprived of his Canadian citizenship, should be awarded the first Canada Medal with a special commendation.

The Quebec Liberal senator from Riviere-du-Loup said in an interview he intends to raise further questions on the floor of the Senate about the Canadian-born publisher's status.

"Lord Thomson, with whom I have had correspondence, is a Canadian who has made a great success of his life and has work, and Canada should be proud to call him a Canadian — not deprive him a Canadian passport," Senator Pouliot said.

The senator said he had looked into the law of the case and that while there were orders-in-council and amendments saying Canadians aren't supposed to accept foreign honors, there are no regulations outlining the rules for treating specific cases.

"When the Canadian publisher accepted a British peerage, he was asked to surrender his Canadian passport because he had accepted British citizenship.

IS A RIGHT

But, said Senator Pouliot, acceptance of an honor such as a peerage is simply a fundamental right and liberty.

"A man can wear a silk hat and spats, and carry a cane if he wishes. That's his right and that's liberty. He can wear fancy shirts. But why should we say he can't be a Canadian?"

Senator Pouliot said Lord Thomson—whom he has never met—has proved himself a success in business, both in Canada and the United kingdom and in other countries. If he is rewarded for his success by the Queen in the U.K., he should not be denied the right to carry the Queen's passport as a Canadian.

The senator — long-time and usually puckish MP for Temiscouata constituency in the House of Commons—said he became interested in Lord Thomson only because of what he considered the denial of liberty in his treatment by the Canadian government when he became a peer.

CAN STILL LIVE HERE

In writing to Lord Thomson and in raising his case on the floor of the Senate, Senator Pouliot pointed out that under Canadian law he could still live and carry on business in Canada, vote in general elections and even run for elected office. Qualification in these matters is based on residence rather than citizenship.

If Senator Pouliot had his way, he said, Lord Thomson should be given the Canada Medal—a medal struck by the late W. L. Mackenzie King as prime minister, but not yet awarded to anyone.

Accompanying the medal, Senator Pouliot would present a special commendation to Lord Thomson as a man who epitomized the achievements that could be attained by a Canadian both at home and abroad

Johnson Win Opens Doo- To New World Summit

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

President Johnson's landslide victory opens the door for resumption of world summitry on a grand scale. It gives him both the mandate and power to meet Communist leaders on his own terms.

For years United States leaders were handicapped by the fact that serious negotiations with the Kremlin would be misinterpreted in the American public and that an unfruitful summit could react to the detriment of the chief executive at the polls.

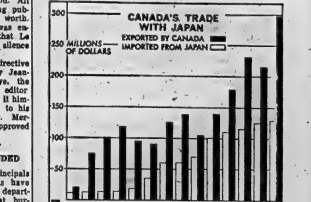
But Johnson made peace and co-existence the major plank in his campaign. His choice of running mate—Senator Hubert Humphrey, a dyed - in - the - wool strengthened world belief that the Johnson team was determined to press on East-West detente that could effectively take the world back from the nuclear abyss.

The American people had the option of choosing Senator Barry Goldwater's hard - line pledge of a stiffer American approach to Communism. They got his answer — a shattering defeat.

HAS MANDATE

Johnson now can meet the Soviets without fear of what the electorate will say at home. He undoubtedly will move quickly to step up the diplomatic conversation with the new boss in Alexei Kosygin and Leonid Brezhnev, Communist party first secretary.

But before he moves towards the summit, he undoubtedly will have to move to help heal the split within the Western alliance. The sickness of disease also appears to be spreading in Europe. Old - fashioned friendship has given way to almost open animosity.



His first test therefore may not be between East and West but within the Western family —whether he can use his personal charm and Humphrey's special compassion to cement the European breaches and urge old comrades once again along the road towards unity.

Europe realizes that Johnson negotiates now from a position of power unparalleled since the end of World War II. The spectre of war has begun to recede and the fear of the Soviet threat has diminished.

Faced with this united voice it now may be more difficult for European leaders to foil it respond.

IMPORTS UP

OTTAWA (CP)—Imports of non-farm machinery shot up 32 per cent in the first five months of this year. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics Wednesday said imports for January-May total at $382,985,000 compared with $279,782,000 in the same period of 1963.

EXPORTS INCREASE — Canada's trade with Japan has increased to the point where exports are more than double imports in 1963 and is expected to be higher this year. During 1963 exports totalled $297,895,829 while imports were only $130,471,048. The 1964 exports to June 30 reached $158,443,000.

Swami Imlach Crystal - Balls . . .

"Moore Will Score 1st Against Habs"

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Punch Imlach's $30,000 gamble on Dickie Moore's gimpy knee is supposed to pay off tonight.

The Toronto Maple Leafs coach laid down that much cash last June to secure the 35-year-old left winger from Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League draft. Ere Habs, sarcued by doctors that Moore was only 40 per cent fit to play left him unprotected.

But Imlach disagreed. He believed that a competitive who scored 254 goals during 11 NHL seasons would still be of help to his club, despite one year's retirement and a subsequent operation to cure his knee ailments.

"I don't care what the doctors say," Imlach insisted. "he's a fighter. Moore will come into the Forum and see a goal in our first game against Canadiens."

Given little opportunity to see regular ice time, Moore has not earned any points with Toronto so far and has picked up a whopping 36 minutes in penal ties. But he gets a chance to make his coach look good tonight.

Toronto visits the Canadiens at the Forum for the first time this season while Detroit plays host to New York in the two NHL games scheduled.

Even Montreal coach Toe Blake has a feeling Moore will score, but he's not taving any extraordinary precautions.

"He'll be treated rust like anyone else on the Leafs but if I know my team," he said, "Moore will probably score a goal. We seem to have the bad habit of being generous to former Canadiens."

Henri Richard, Montreal's offensive spearhead, will be back in the lineup after missing the opening of the season with a severe groin injury. He indicated he's back in excellent shape by scoring a pair 18 seconds after he stepped on the ice in practice Wednesday.

Tonight's action may help unravel the traffic jam atop the standings. Toronto, Montreal and Detroit are all tied with 11 points while New York and Chicago are deadlocked two points behind.

Tops In East, West

Shatto, Coleman Battle For Best

TORONTO (CP) — The choice of Canada's outstanding professional football player has narrowed down to a two-man fight between halfback Dick Shatto of Toronto Argonauts and fullback Lovell Coleman of Calgary Stampeders.

Shatto, 31-year veteran with Argonauts, was named the best in the East Wednesday night in a ballot of football writers and broadcasters in the Eastern Conference cities of Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal. Coleman was named his counterpart in the West by voters from the Western Conference cities of Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver.

Tommy Grant, a native of Windsor, Ont. and a pass-catching half with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, was named the outstanding Canadian player in the East and teammate John Barrow, defensive tackle with the 1963 Grey Cup champions, was named lineman of the year in the East.

CHOSEN IN WEST

Defensive half Larry Robinson, star of the Calgary club and a product of minor football in Calgary, was chosen the out standing Canadian in the West. Lineman-of-the-Year honors in the WFC went to linebacker Tom Hinton of the Alouettes.

A further ballot will be held among voters in the nine Canadian Football League cities to name the winner in each category from among the six named Wednesday night. Results will be announced Wednesday, Nov. 9.

Barrow was chosen Canada's outstanding lineman in 1963 and was named to the all-star team.

Quarterback Russ Jackson of Ottawa Rough Riders, who won both the outstanding player and Canadian player awards in '963, did not gain recognition in this year's balloting. Jackson joined the pro ranks from McMaster University in Hamilton

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CANTER, Sports Editor

TWEED — It is Indian summer-time here in "Curryville," the jumping-off place for deer-seeking nimrods from points south, east and west.

And the Maniton of the weather is smiling benignly on an invading army estimated at between 15,000 and 18,000 restless-hungry doctors, lawyers, merchants chiefs, etc.

Some of them from the faraway places trundled in snowshoes and other winter paraphernalia. They would be more at home with bathing suits and tennis racquets.

Temperatures up to this point have hovered in the mid-sixties. It is a November springtime in the forest fleeciands. And both hunter and hunted are enjoying it to the utmost.

Tweed conservation officers tell me there is plenty of deer cavorting through the wooded byways. And they are taking advantage of the unusual weather and forest conditions to play hide-and-seek with gun toters.

The consensus of hunters over a number of Tweed district areas, up to this writing is "Too warm and too dry."

This condition was evident in such hunting spots as Derby, Bancroft, Plevna and Tweed. Hunting-wise the kill was considered "fair." It seems that on occasions both hunter and deer took turns out from spring gambols to cross paths with the inevitable result.

It is reported that two city hunters and a big buck said to weigh 275 pounds tangled in a quiet runway. Shots rang out, the deer lost and will be entered in the Fish and Game Club contest.

Tweed officials reported that another hunter, probably with a touch of belated spring fever, wandered off the beaten paths and got lost on Monday. The weather man was good and he emerged safe and sound on Tuesday.

And up to that point, they added, the hunters have been checking their own speed closely, and confining their shooting to the four-legged quarry. So far—no accidents.

While the weather is unusual and not conducive to good hunting, the nimrods are enjoying themselves with many recalling the rain-soaked opening days of a year ago where they were confined to cabin and lodge and the enjoyable pastimes that such enforced confinement brings.

Occasionally a wolf howls his appreciation of the offbeat conditions but the Brer is not causing any grief to man or beast, officials say.

But some of the boys, forgetting their Boy Scout and conservation training are a bit careless with the result eight fires broke out on Monday and Tuesday.

Four Monday blazes reduced some 40 acres to nothing, while the Tuesday outbreaks spelled another ten acres. All fires were extinguished by forest rangers.

The "second pieces," the hunting squad that always waits for the second week of shooting is expected to be as large as the first battalion.

But they are warned not to expect the spring-like conditions that greeted the "pioneers." The weather man is as fickle as a money-hungry chorine and they're liable to run into cold-weather conditions that are to be expected at this time of the year.

Tweed Leads and Parents officials had no idea of the actual kill as of this writing. However, they are establishing check points at Eldorado and Northbrook this weekend and by the first of next week will have a general idea of the extent of the kill.

Despite the weather on and after opening day a number of hunters got their kill. One city party of three was back by noon Monday, each with his venison supply.

LATER

Rain seems from the skies, sprinkling the tinder-dry forest floors today, brought sighs of relief from alerted conservation officers.

But it was only temporary and the weather man forecasts sunshine tomorrow with considerably lower temperatures.

National League Names Mauch Manager Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Mauch, who led Philadelphia Phillies to their highest standing in 44 seasons despite a late-season slump, was named National League Manager of the Year for 1964 Wednesday in the annual Associated Press poll.

The scrappy 38-year-old collected 66 votes in the balloting by 84 baseball writers. Johnny Keane of the pennant - winning St. Louis Cardinals was second with 15 votes. Leo Durocher, who filled in for the ailing Fred Hutchinson at Cincinnati, had three while Hutchinson drew one vote.

Mauch also was named NL Manager of the Year by the AP in 1962. Last season he directed the Phillies to a 664-game lead with only two weeks left to play. However, the team lost 10 games in a row from Sept. 21 through Sept. 30, then relegated to win the final two from Cincinnati.

The Phillies wound up in a second-place deadlock with the Reds, one game behind St. Louis. That was their highest since 1960, when they won the pennant under Eddie Sawyer.

Claims Rider Was Out For A Lark

Now He'll Settle

By JOE DUFUIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Really, fellows, Nat Craddock of Montreal Alouettes is a likeable guy and not one to bear a grudge.

His ball - like crunching through the line to gain yardage never asserts itself of the playing field. Well, almost never.

But now he has his dander up about a guy by the name of Jim Conroy, that mean old halfback for Ottawa Rough Riders.

When these two teams meet in Saturday's sudden death Eastern Football Conference playoff at Ottawa, Craddock assures he will be "anything but nice" to Conroy.

"I am going to settle a score with that No. 25," he said Wednesday night. "Man, I mean, I am going to give him a whole lot of attention."

No. 25 is, of course, the number of the sweater worn by the veteran Ottawa back, 23 pounds lighter and one inch shorter than Craddock who weighs 228 pounds.

WASN'T SAYING

Eliciting a reason for Nat's animosity was like trying to boot a deflated football. Nat wasn't saying. But he mentioned the game Oct. 25 between the Alouettes and Rough Riders here, won by the Als 23-21.

Craddock was a star of the game, galloping on a 73-yard touchdown run, and one other long sprint that led to the winning touchdown late in the game.

Obviously, Conroy earned Craddock's displeasure some time in that game.

Craddock, 23, the New York giant cast who joined the Als in mid - season from Montreal's Portland farm team, has become a vital addition to the team's offence, a weak area all season.

With all-star halfback George Dixon slowed by injuries and the fact that opposition teams constantly key on him, Craddock's appearance was like a dream come true.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Belfort came back at Greenwood Race Track Wednesday.

The four-year-old colt, once a top handicap thoroughbred, won his first race of the season when he took the seventh race but the way he did indicates he might be on the way back to the top of his class in stakes company.

Last season the son of Third Brother, owned by Sol Santangelo of Hartford, Conn., won the Friar Rock, Toronto Cup and Heresy Stakes as well as $34,-370.

In what probably would have been his last race of 1963, Belfort popped his right knee. He was racing against the likes of Never Bend in that $50,000 added race at Suffolk Downs, near Boston, when the mishap occurred.

Usually thoroughbreds don't come back after such an injury and if they do they usually end up in the claiming ranks. Not Belfort. His trainer, Joe Augeri, nursed the handsome bay until mid-summer of this season before testing the knee. It held up and he's been getting stronger on it ever since.

In Wednesday's seven-furlong race Your County was steamrolling through the stretch in the lead when Belfort accelerated. He made up ground slowly and just poked his nose in front at the wire. The time of 1:25 3-5 was a second and one-fifth behind the track mark.

Belfort returned $8.00, $5.50 and $4.20 to his backers in the crowd of 7,746.

Rider Boss Throws Out Hint

Fat New Contract Awaiting Frank Clair

Barry O'Brien of Ottawa Rough Riders hinted Wednesday that there's a fat new contract waiting for head coach Frank Clair.

"We may put an end to these fantastic stories sooner than you expect," he said, referring to reports that Clair might be let out by Riders to return to Toronto Argonauts.

Clair has a five-year contract with the Eastern Football Conference club and it runs through 1965.

O'Brien said: "While Frank has another year to go, we may sit down immediately after the football season and discuss plans for giving him a new contract. We're happy with Clair. His record speaks for itself."

Clair himself declined to discuss the matter.

"The playoff is the only thing worrying me right now," he said.

Riders meet Montreal Alouettes here Saturday at 1 p.m. EST in the Big Four sudden-death semi-final. The game will be telecast on the CTV network with Ottawa blacked out.

Clair said there's good spirit in his team and that "I think the boys are ready to come up with one of their top efforts."

Guard Merv Collins and defensive halfback Tommy Neck are unlikely to play because of injuries but the rest of the club appears in good shape.

Kaye Vaughan and Don Estes will be the offensive guards and Bill Sierkierski will replace John Kenerson at defensive tackle. Defensive ends will likely be Billy Joe Booth and Bill Quinter.

With George Dixon back in the Montreal lineup, Clair will have to worry about Dixon's outside running as well as Nat Craddock's inside rushing.

Canada On Top By 1968

MONTREAL (CP)—Canada's Olympic hockey coach, Rev. David Bauer, said Wednesday this country will regain its lost prominence in the sport by the 1968 Winter Olympics.

"Our Olympic team will be comparable to a club from the Central Pro Hockey League for the 1968 games, he said. "We feel we must attain 'ois calibre of player to retain the title.

Father Bauer, whose 1964 team came home without a medal but performed with distinction, said he would like to blend a combination of reinstated amateurs and collegians from the University of Manitoba.

"We feel the most dedicated amateurs play hockey in Manitoba," he said. "Thus we have arranged for the promising college players to attend the University of Manitoba. We hope we can keep them all together this way."

The club will try to avoid using junior players because of the emotional pressure, Father Bauer told the Montreal Advertising and Sales Club. He cited the case of Rod Selling, a star on the Olympic team and now with the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

"Rod was pacing the floor at night before every big game. And the kid was one of the finest and most mature juniors in the country last year."

Giants May Lose Shofner

NEW YORK (AP)—Del Shofner, star pass catcher of New York Giants, may be lost to the National Football League club for the rest of the season because of stomach ulcers.

Shofner sat out last Sunday's St. Louis game with a liver virus and severe cold. He entered hospital Sunday night for the rest and examination. Blood tests revealed the aggravated ulcer condition.

To Oakville Sportsman

Leg Loss No Handicap

OAKVILLE (CP)—Jim Fowler, 44, is an unusual man.

Not because since 1942 he has coached, played and refereed in four hockey leagues, or because he is an ardent swimmer and golfer. But because he has done these things with only one leg.

Fowler, a cost analyst for 18 years with the Ford Motor Company here, had his right leg amputated above the knee when he was struck by a streetcar outside his home in Kircaldy, Scotland, at the age of two. He came to Canada when he was nine with his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Fowler, and settled in the Windsor suburb of Riverside.

Almost immediately he took up hockey and has been playing, coaching or officiating almost every season since.

"In a way, I'm fortunate the accident didn't happen when I was 16 or 17," he said in an interview. "Then there would have been a great adjustment to make. When I played, I always managed to keep up with the other players and they didn't seem to notice the handicap because they never knew me any differently."

Fowler said he quit playing hockey at 20.

"It was only scrub hockey, anyway."

To play he fashioned a special "skating crutch" on which a large, sharpened rivet replaced the rubber tip.

After he quit playing, Fowler became involved in several leagues as a coach or referee—notably in the Ontario Hockey Association's juvenile league in the Windsor area. In 1961 he dropped out after serving as league secretary and referee.

Transferred here three years ago from Windsor, where he joined Ford in 1941, Fowler was back in hockey as a coach within a year after his son Dennis began to play.

Last season his squad of eight-year-olds won the Oakville Tyke A championship. Competition hasn't started this season, but most of Fowler's boys are back for play in the nine-year-old category.

What other sports would Fowler like to try?

"I think tennis is out because my crutch would probably dig up the clay courts, but I'd like to give skiing a try."

National Horse Show

Halt Canadian Sweep Bid

NEW YORK (CP) — Kathy Kusner of Arlington, Va., halted a Canadian bid to sweep both Wednesday's major events at the National Horse Show when she piloted Untouchable to victory in the Frederick B. MacKay Challenge Trophy contest. The team of Miss Kusner and Untouchable, winners of last year's open jumper title and of Monday night's Democrat Memorial Trophy competition, outlasted three other entries in the second jumpoff Wednesday night.

Tom Gayford of Tweedside rode Miss Beau to second place. Like Miss Kusner, he had clean performances in both jumpoffs but time was the deciding factor on the second round and the American rider was clocked in 40.5 seconds to Gayford's 44.4.

Earlier, Top Gallant, owned by the Dunn Brothers of Parry Sound, Ont., and ridden by the veteran Sonny Brooks, won the $775 Stake, clearing the 12 fences flawlessly in 42.2 seconds and earning five points toward the open jumper championship.

Jim Elder of Aurora, Ont., on Johnny Canuck, was third in the opening event, recording the fastest time, 38.5 seconds, in the second jumpoff but hitting one fence. ..

Baseball Bigwigs Blow Off

PHOENIX, Ariz. (CP)—Will the major leagues expand to two 12-club circuits by the start of the 1965 season? By 1967? Ever?

That is a set of questions which baseball bigwigs are discussing here at informal meetings that, officially, aren't happening. The club owners and commissioner Ford C. Frick, plus other officials, agreed some time ago to meet here in private for a long look at baseball but the date and site leaked out.

Sam Smith, president of the Southern League, has suggested to the majors that a timetable of expansion be drawn up because the constant rumors of franchise changes are hurting the minor leagues. He suggested that Dallas - Fort Worth, Seattle, Oakland and Atlanta are the logical sites for major league clubs.

Other questions likely to be studied at the annual conference, which likely will produce the agenda for the annual winter meetings in Houston late this month, are a national television game weekly, a successor to the retiring Frick, what to do with the pro football menace, and a possible draft of young players.

Springfield Starts New Farm System

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Springfield Indians of the American Hockey League announced Tuesday they have acquired forward Ruhnor B Mariando of the Central Ontario B loop as the start of a farm system.

Manager Bob McVicars of Ingersoll said the move should help both clubs considerably in the long run. It will ultimately provide the Indians, only AHL club without a sponsor, with a number of young players.

The Indians hope to line up further teams, possibly in the Junior A classification.

No financial details have been released.

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Tom Keck, who qualified as a horseracing driver in a training spill at the Western Fair Raceway here this summer, made an auspicious return to the London track Wednesday night when he won with Sue K Harmony in the sixth race.

Sue K Harmony, his own mare, raced the mile in 2:00 4-5 and, despite the fact she has not been to the races since July, was made odds-on favorite in the betting and paid a meagre $3.60.

ST. CATHARINES (CP)— Bishop Song took the featured $2,000 Mainliner Purse at Garden City Raceway Wednesday night, paying $44.70 for each $2 ticket. Reader in taking a 1½-length win over Flash Song.

Ken Earle piloted the winner, the big, brown gelding from the Beckingham and Kenney Stables of Hamilton, Ont., stayed in contention throughout the mile trot and made his move in the homestretch. Flash Wilt, the early leader faded to fourth at the wire and Guess Who finished third.

Highlight of the nine - race card was the $130.40 return on a $2 ticket on longshot Emlen Hanover, winner of the fourth. It was the highest winning payoff of the 1964 Ontario harness racing season.

The nine-year-old gelding, off at 59 to 1, parked in third until the field hit the final turn before moving on Menlen Hanover took a nose victory over Famous Wick while MacDuff's Laszle finished fourth.

Baron Hal won the sixth with a ho-length victory over Direct Vista. The two-horse finish provided a $50.70 quinella payoff.

GORDIE HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

Gary Bergman is a husky (6-foot, 185 pound) defenseman who had Lake of the Woods at Kenora, Ontario, for his skating rink. It's just 50 feet in front of the house where this handsome defenceman of Scotch and Swedish descent was born.

He was with the Winnipeg Braves who won the Memorial Cup in 1958. Yet he didn't make it to the National Hockey League until this season, with Detroit, just before his 26th birthday.

This isn't surprising. Jimmy Skinner, the Red Wings' chief scout, says defencemen mature later than forwards.

However, you take youngsters of nine and 10, I'd say the defencemen are ahead of the forwards at that age. The reason I say this is because it is so much easier to play, looking at the play.

In contrast, when you're forward, up in the offensive zone digging for the puck, there are players all around you. So you have to be guessing, trying to anticipate plays, as well as looking around.

But when you're a defenceman, that play is in front of you. You can move with it or defend against it or throw the forward pass ahead. As a forward, you have to remain calm and go all directions and look everywhere.

Therefore, at the tender age of 9-10, I think the defencemen are ahead of the forwards. Then as youngsters grow older, I think the forwards take over the play, certainly are more spectacular because they're carrying the puck more.

However, later on, I think the defencemen take over again actually dominate games. As they become older, they play more defensively. They know the moves of the forwards, their strong points and their weaknesses. They know which way they're going to shift.

Take Bill Gadsby, and Marcel Pronovost, for example. Bill is in his 19th season in the NHL, Marcel in his 15th. Yet they were outstanding for Detroit in the later stages last season. They've learned to pace themselves a little more.

They're less ambitious when it comes to grabbing the puck and going the length of the ice. On rare occasions they'll surprise everybody with a rush. But you don't see them get trapped up there. They're real solid defencemen.

Western Hockey

LOS ANGELES (CP)—Vancouver Canucks Wednesday night outclassed Los Angeles Blades 5-1 to take over sole possession of second place in the Western Hockey League.

After a scoreless first period, Canucks exploded for three unanswered goals in the second period.

The win broke a second-place tie between the Blades and Canucks. Vancouver now has 12 points, two less than Seattle Totems and Portland Buckaroos.

Buddy Boone scored twice for Vancouver. Phil Maloney got one goal as did Bev Bell and former Blade Bruce Carmichael.

Brian Smith scored the lone Los Angeles goal early in the third period.

The Town Built Round a Bathtub

By ALAN WALKER

BATH, England (CP)—Bath is a bath; it's as simple as that. It is rare to build a town around a bathtub but that's what happened centuries ago at the site of an amazing natural spring that still pumps 500,000 gallons of hot mineral water through the earth's crust every day.

Ailing Roman soldiers came to wallow in steaming tanks. Now, 1,500 years later, this southwest England town boasts some of the finest Roman ruins in Europe.

Time has laid a heavy hand upon the majestic structures. Roofs and columns have fallen and lie in fragments. But the great bathing basins are still here and parts of special vapor rooms still stand eight feet high.

Murky hot water seeps into pools, spurting through the same lead pipes that the Romans installed. Invalids come every day to sit in hot, radioactive water, to breathe steam or even to drink from the three springs whose temperatures vary from 114 to 120 Fahrenheit degrees.

FOUNDED IN 836 BC

The Roman buildings, constructed in stages during the first three centuries after the birth of Christ, stretch 100 yards long and 50 wide in the valley of springs near the Avon River.

There were six basins of hot water large enough for swimming. Two survive. In addition there are the rooms with hollow areas under the floors where heat was applied, producing something akin to a modern Turkish bath.

High - ranking officers and footsoldiers once sweated side by side and cleaned in Latin.

For shock treatments there was a cold bath next to a hot one.

An early legend says this city of 80,000 was founded in 863 BC by Bladud, father of King Lear. Bladud is supposed to have been cured of leprosy by wallowing himself with mineral water.

The Romans called the city Aquae Sulis—the waters of Sul. She was an early native deity and patroness of the springs.

After the Roman occupation of Britain ended early in the 5th century, the Saxon hordes seem to have ignored the baths although they settled in the area and called the city Abemancester.

BATHS ABANDONED

The brittle shell of a bird's egg was laid by a cock known to love quiet solitude, near the baths during the Saxon period. Archeologists who found the shell say it indicates the immediate area of the baths was desolate for many years. Chaucer's famous Wife of Bath, in the 14th century, probably missed the plunges.

In the 18th century, the baths attracted attention again. Excavations began, centuries of mud were shovelled aside and the baths emerged from their burial place.

Other Roman relics have been found outside the baths. There is the temple of Sul, whom the Romans identified with their goddess of wisdom Minerva. There are portions of Roman roads.

Most painful of all, there are cemeteries filled with the skeletons of those sick persons who came here and bathed in vain.

"Antigonus of the Sergian tribe, of the town Nicopolis," begins the translation of one Latin gravestone. "Time expired soldier from the 20th legion, aged 45. Erected by his heir Gaius Tiberinus."

NATURAL HOT BATHS — Ailing Roman soldiers came to wallow in the steaming baths at Bath, England about 1,500 years ago. The baths, built by the Romans, is fed by an amazing natural spring that still pumps 500,000 gallons of hot mineral water through the earth's crust every day. (CP Photo)

Teen-Age Canada

Writer Asking Question That Is Hard to Answer

By JACK HUTTON

A controversy is simmering in public and secondary schools across Canada that is likely to become more heated before it ends.

The question: how far should we go in catering to the best brains in our school systems?

Several weeks ago an 11-year-old boy entered Michigan State University in the United States, apparently capable of handling any course that his far older classmates were tackling.

How many similar students are there in Canada possibly sitting at the back end of a country classroom or bored to tears in a city class that never seems to go fast enough?

A Two or three? Even this small number is a terrible waste if we could aid these students further and later reap the benefits of their accelerated work.

SHAKESPEARE

I remember one student (I won't embarrass him by mentioning his name) who entered Grade 3, skipping Grade 1 entirely, four years ago. His teachers were amazed that their new charge had read all of Shakespeare's works.

While the other youngsters concentrated on learning the basic multiplication facts, our friend busied himself with creating theories about the sun's energy and heat sources.

The lowest mark on his report card that year was for writing. Not that was understandable. He'd been typing since he was 4 - years - old and found writing too slow.

That facility with the typewriter got him in trouble more than once, I remember. He became a devoted fan of give-away offers in the newspapers and magazines and wrote all over the continent.

Finally a stamp company decided it should have payment for "free" offers our friend had not ordered. A New Jersey lawyer was startled to receive a letter which read: "If you don't stop mailing those nasty letters you may be sued for persecuting a 9-year-old boy. That's me."

I used to hear from my friend occasionally but he hasn't written for years. And I often wonder how he's doing.

TWO THOUGHTS

There are two schools of thought about giving special treatment to the bright student. First, many Canadian teachers still believe that separating the bright students from the others creates a form of snobbery that does them more harm than good.

(I can't agree with this. After all, we separate those who are good at woodworking, typing, car mechanics and other skills).

I was in Winnipeg several years ago when "major work classes" were first established. And I still remember vividly the controversy that swirled up over giving these selected students enriched academic work.

The second school — and I like to think this is the majority now — believes the time has come to stop pretending that we all proceed at the same pace. Some of us are better in some subjects. Others shine in other areas.

Several different ways are being used to meet this challenge. Some school systems believe in acceleration, pushing students ahead one grade at a time as they seem to be ready.

Others believe in enriching the work of selected students rather than pushing them ahead of their own age level. A great many school systems use a combination of both methods, starting this as early as kindergarten.

It all boils down to one conclusion: we can't afford to waste any of our resources in 1964. And our schools are our most precious resources.

OUR FANS

The letter of a Halifax reader praising the recorded work of the Animals brought a deluge of rebuttal from angry Beatle fans — most of them, curiously, from Winnipeg.

Typical was this letter: "How dare you print that hogwash written by Miss Marshall! We would be pleased if she jumped in a lake and why don't you join her? Signed: A Beatle Fan Club."

Young Ukrainians Keep Culture Alive in Canada

By EDDY COLLISTER

MONTREAL (CP) — A rich repertoire of folk dances is one of the features of Canada's Ukrainian community of 475,000, and a group of young people in Montreal is helping preserve this cultural heritage.

Fifteen years ago Per-er Marmeszak, now 35 got the idea of forming a company of Ukrainians devoted to folk dancing. Today he is director and choreographer of the Marmeszak-Ukrainian Dance Ensemble, a group that performs regularly in Montreal and has been invited to dance in other cities in Canada and the United States.

It has two main groups of dancers—the seniors in the 16-to-21 age group, and the juniors between 13 and 16. They are drawn from three schools operated by the Ukrainian National Federation in the city.

There are 22 dancers in the senior group—eight boys and 16 girls a chance in practice assemble—23 girls and 18 boys.

"Boys are harder to train," says Mr. Marmeszak, explaining why there are more girls.

Besides preserving the traditional dances of the Ukraine, the organization also gives the girls a chance stagecraft as another art—embroidery. Each of the colorful costumes depicts the section of the Ukraine in which the dance originated.

PAINSTAKING WORK

The girls spend two to three months making a single costume. The boys' costumes are usually made by their mothers.

The groups have appeared together and separately on television and dance annually at the Canadian Folkforique at the Montreal Forum.

A highlight for the group comes when it gives an hour-long performance at the State Pavilion of the New York world's fair in September.

A year ago they performed at Ukrainian resort in New York. Last November they danced in Toronto. And they are booked to appear in Sudbury, Ont., next May 17.

The ensemble, which is strictly amateur although the dancing is decidedly of professional calibre. is also trying to get a spot on the Ed Sullivan TV show.

"We wrote Mr. Sullivan this year but he was all booked up for the season," Mr. Marmeszak says. "We'll try again next season."

The director, who has been dancing since he was seven, still performs with the senior group.

"Many of the dances in our repertoire are very old but I have modernized them so they are suitable for presentation on the stage," he says. "After all, you do have to keep up with the times."

Dignity Is Death to Comic Says Comedian Ken Murray

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Comedian Ken Murray, who barely won a diploma from the Kingston, N.Y., high school before matriculating in vaudeville, will be lecturing at the University of California at Los Angeles Saturday night.

It's possible that he will be the most entertaining lecturer at the university this semester, because Ken is also bringing along the movies he has been taking of Hollywood actors for the last 37 years.

The films comprise a rich history of the faces and fashions of Hollywood's golden era, and Ken's accompanying lecture will mark a return to comedy for him.

"Van Heflin told me something that is absolutely true," said Murray. "You should always go back to your basic business. Mine is comedy. I had gotten away from comedy in recent years, but my television specials. I did character roles in Death Valley Days and for John Ford in The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance.

"I did a lot of dignified things, and dignity is death to a comic. The essence of comedy is loss of dignity, and all the great comedians knew it instinctively while they're performing—Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Red Skelton, etc.

ALL-OUT FOR FUN

"From now on I'm not going to produce anything unless it's for myself. And I'm going to do everything I can to make it funny."

His personal movies may be occupying him for years to come.

He started taking them back in 1927 when he landed in town as a brash young vaudeville comic. He continued through the years he was featured in films, radio, television and his annual run-in Blackouts on Vine Street.

"But I never realized what I had until I appeared on the Jack Paar television show and plug my autobiography," he explained. "I took some of the old films assig to help fill the time, and they attracted a tremendous response. Bob Hope and started putting them into shape."

Now he feels brave enough to tackle Broadway. He will open April 26 in New York under the auspices of Theatre Corporation. Nina O'Clock Theatre, which has also presented Victor Borge, Mitchell and May, Rexrond the Frings, etc.

Income Tax Explained

By C. A. MILLER

Retired Conservation Assessor, Income Tax Department

There is always some confusion each year among taxpayers who have investment income from stocks and bonds. They are at a loss as to how depletion allowances and tax credits affect their taxable income from these sources.

Depletion allowance is applicable to mining stocks only. Mining means any product that comes out of the ground, and this also applies to certain petroleum companies. It is known the fact that any mine or oil well, has a limited life and is productive and any taxpayer will have worthless stock on his hands when this occurs. To give the taxpayer some relief, he is allowed to reduce the dividends he is now receiving by a certain percentage which is determined each year depending on just how much of the companies profits came out of the direct mining operations.

Dividend tax is any depletion of bonds, neither is there a tax credit. Interest is taxable in full. Only the mining stocks is deducted from the dividend itself and only the net taken into income. The dividend tax credit is deducted directly from the tax payable in the space or the return provided for this purpose. The reason you are allowed a tax credit on dividends is because the corporation paying the dividend is taxed on the profit made before it is distributed to the shareholders in the form of dividends. The tax credit allowed to the shareholders is a means of avoiding double taxation. There is no depletion or tax credits allowed on dividends originating from outside of Canada.

For personal replies pertaining to income tax problems please enclose a self-addressed five cent stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin for each question you wish answered.

QUESTION: Does the depletion allowance vary from year to year?

ANSWER: This allowance depends on how much of the company's profit was derived from direct mining operations.

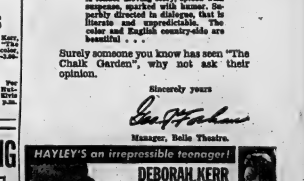
He succeeds George Kahama, now ambassador to Bonn.

HERE'S WHY YOU SHOULD SEE "THE CHALK GARDEN"

DEAR FOLKS:



In my years as Manager of the Belle Theatre we have played some magnificent pictures; some have played to over 9,000 patrons, but yet none has impressed me as being perfect. I consider "The Chalk Garden" the perfect motion picture and unqualifiedly endorse it to one and all, young and of age. It has four excellent STARS giving brilliant performances.

A tender moving story, spiced with suspense, sparkle with humor. Superbly directed in dialogue, that is literate and unpredictable. The color and English country-side are beautiful . . .

Surely someone you know has seen "The Chalk Garden", why not ask their opinion.

Sincerely yours

Manager, Belle Theatre.

MARINER STARTS FLIGHT TO MARS — Cape Kennedy, Fla., missile workers watch at a safe distance as an Atlas-Agena D rocket blasts away from its launch pad giving a boost to Mariner 3, on an intended journey to the planet Mars. Something went wrong and Mariner is orbiting the sun.

(AP Wirephoto)

Mars-Bound Mariner Becomes Helpless Captive Orbiting Sun

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The stricken Mariner III spacecraft whirled through space as a helpless hulk today, unable to fulfill its mission as the first spacecraft to probe the planet Mars.

With Mariner III a $25,000,000 loss, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration turned attention to Mariner IV, a twin spacecraft which officials hope to launch within two weeks.

Exact date for the launching depends on evaluation of information from Mariner's failure.

The space agency has until Dec. 1 to fire the Mariner IV rocket. After that, Mars will not be in position for a launching until December, 1966.

Mariner III was to have crossed 350,000,000 miles of space in 8½ months, skimming within 8,600 miles of Mars next July 17. During a brief encounter with the planet, the craft was to have snapped pictures and gathered scientific data.

Instead, it is racing in a silent orbit about the sun on a path that will miss Mars by 42,000,000 miles.

There were indications that the failure resulted because a

Fulton Denies Conspiracy

TORONTO (CP)—Davie Fulton still has his eye on federal politics but denies he is trying to undercut John Diefenbaker, Progressive Conservative party leader.

The 48-year-old British Columbia party head, a candidate for the leadership against Mr. Diefenbaker in 1956, said Thursday he is not in any conspiracy against the Conservative chief or involved in an "axis" with Quebec leader Leon Balcer.

Mr. Fulton became entangled in a touchy intra-party situation when a public memo he had written to Mr. Diefenbaker and other Conservative MPs, advocating part with Mr. Diefenbaker's expressed views about the new formula for amending the constitution, leaked out to the press. Mr. Balcer is reported also to have op-

Ford Co. Tied Up By Strike

DETROIT (AP)—The United Auto Workers union went on strike today against key Ford Motor Company manufacturing and assembly plants in the U.S. and two unsettled local labor agreements.

At least eight out of 11 unsettled units were hit.

The walkout left Ford with a selling supply of about 32 days of autos and a 38-selling-days supply of trucks.

The effect on production could not immediately be detailed, but indications were Ford could make some autos for two weeks or more.

The Ford spokesman said assembly plants were shut down this morning at Dallas; Wayne, Mich.; Wayne, Mich., assembly; Chicago stamping; Ypsilanti, Mich., manufacturing; Sheffield, Ala., manufacturing; Sterling Township, Mich., manufacturing, and Louisville assembly.

There is a Ford parts depot plant at St. Louis and manufacturing plants at Bedford, Ohio, and Buffalo, N.Y., was not immediately determined.

The bargaining units had their international union's approval to walk out at 10 a.m. EST if settlements were lacking at that hour.

ONLY FEW STRIKE

Only those plants with unsettled local contracts which supplement the national agreement, signed in September, were given permission to strike.

Ford has 160,000 production workers in 90 bargaining units across the country.

The number of men off the job was not immediately determined.

While only a handful of Ford's bargaining units were on strike, those were at key plants.

The Ford strike came as General Motors Corporation reached 92 per cent of its production capacity.

PCs Want Details Of Trip

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — For almost the entire afternoon Thursday, Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson held the attention of the Commons, and he was 5,000 miles away at the time.

The catch, so far as the opposition was concerned, is that Mr. Thompson is that far away at government expense. He emerged as the chief debating topic after the Commons finally settled the argument of whether it should come first in the discussion—Russia's power struggle, China's nuclear explosion, or Mr. Thompson's trip.

The subject actually spilled over from Wednesday, when Conservative members were firing a barrage of questions about the Social Credit leader's current trip to Africa, with repeated demands for details. Was it on behalf of the government? Who was paying the shot? What was the purpose?

External Affairs Minister Martin, who made only brief appearances in the Commons Wednesday because of a meeting with Belgian Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak, agreed to have his department estimates called Thursday when this and other matters could be dealt with.

MAKES PROTEST

He chose the other matters first Thursday — Russia's change of leadership and China's bomb blast. Gordon Churchill (Prince Winnipeg South Centre) quickly protested that there was a clear understanding that the Thompson trip was to be dealt with first.

"This is the subject to should deal with first instead of dodging and trying to hide behind something."

This brought Transport Minister Pickersgill to his feet to say Mr. Churchill was misusing the good faith of the government into question and he set out a list of other items to declare that the Conservative member "is not perhaps the leading authority in the chamber on good faith."

Mr. Pickersgill later apologized for the remark. He said all he had meant to say was that Mr. Churchill should not "set himself up above the rest of us."

With the preliminaries cleared away, Mr. Martin turned to the External Affairs Minister Martin told the Commons estimates of the main reasons for sending Social Credit Leader Thompson to Africa was that his have him use his influence in an attempt to free 26 Canadians held by Congolese rebels.

Conservative House Leader Gordon Churchill called the Thompson trip a junket and Creditiste Leader Caouette said it was in repayment for Social Credit support in the Commons for Liberal policies.

The Senate approved the government's interim supply bill for $1,600,000 and Chief Justice Taschereau later gave the measure royal assent.

State Secretary Pennellegave said during Commons debate on his department's estimates that 50 additional translators will be hired by the government translation bureau to catch up on work that is running behind.

Douglas Fisher (NDP—Port Arthur) complained there is a profusion of responsibility in the cabinet for economic affairs but it is difficult to know precisely what department is ultimately in charge.

FRIDAY, Nov. 6

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. to consider estimates of the defence department. The Senate stands adjourned until Nov. 24.

Aussie Athlete in London Ships Self Home in Crate

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — An Australian athlete had himself shipped home c.o.d. from Britain in a wooden crate because he couldn't afford a passenger ticket for the 11,000-mile flight.

Reginald Spiers, 22, of Adelaide, spent 63 hours in the box without food or water, Sydney newspapers reported. Friends and relatives in Adelaide confirmed the story today.

The account said a friend nailed up the box Oct. 17 in London and Spiers landed in Perth Oct. 20. As soon as his flight, then hitchhiked 1,800 miles to Adelaide.

"There was enough space between the planks to give me air and allow me to peep out," he said.

An Air India spokesman said an empty wooden crate big enough to hold a man was found today at the air cargo depot in Perth. Sent c.o.d., it was consigned to a nonexistent shoe factory at a nonexistent address.

"My blood runs cold when I think of the terrible risks he took," the spokesman said. "Had the cargo could have been offloaded and left in some tropical depot over a weekend . . . or he could have been packed with other freight and suffocated . . . or the pressurization in the cargo hold might have failed."

Sydney newspapers gave this account:

A 170-pound javelin thrower, Spiers worked his way to London in hopes of making the Australian Olympic team in trials. He didn't make the team and, because he was broke, seized on the idea of flying home in the crate.

He gave notice to Air India that he wanted to consign a crate of plastic emulsion to a Perth firm. Friends drove him to the airport.

The crate, five feet long and three feet wide, was big enough to allow him to sit up with his legs stretched out and tight enough to prevent his being tossed about.

Spiers said the crate with him inside weighed about 300 pounds and the freight charge was about $850. That is $280 more than the passenger fare, but passengers can't travel c.o.d.

"As far as I know, no freight charges has been collected on this consignment," said the Air India spokesman.

Rightist General Installed As New Bolivian President

LA PAZ (AP) — Vice-President Rene Barrientos, a general, former air force chief of staff, has emerged from the Bolivian revolt as president just as ousted president Victor Paz Estenssoro said he would.

Barrientos, a rightist leader of the revolt against Paz, flew from his home in Cochabamba to La Paz Thursday, and the chief of the armed forces, Gen. Alfredo Obando Candia, announced that the vice-president would be co-presidents.

Obando had taken control in the capital after Paz fled to Peru Wednesday morning, but the crowd in front of the palace booed the announcement that he would be co-president. Civic groups and students who participated in the overthrow of Paz considered Obando's installation a "continuance" of the Paz government.

Obando's withdrawal in favor of Barrientos eased the tense and chaotic situation, but the country still was far from stable. The army has taken possession of public buildings in La Paz, but armed civilian bands roamed the streets. Possibly 40 persons were killed and 150 wounded in fighting Wednesday and Wednesday night between supporters and opponents of the deposed president.

About 200 officials of the Paz regime were said to have taken refuge in foreign embassies.

Civilian politicians were split into at least six factions. Already they were making it clear the military set a time limit on its stay in power.

A fundamental question for the military rulers was whether the United States would recognize the new Bolivian regime. Aid which kept the Paz regime afloat. Bolivia received $200,000,000 from the United States in the 12 years after Paz first took office.

Republicans On Wrong Side Of Every Issue Says Governor

WASHINGTON (CP AP)—Bitter quarrelling among leaders of the Republican party continued Thursday as one of the day's shattering national election defeat and the chairman of the Republican Governors Association said the party must broaden its appeal.

Governor Robert E. Smylie of Idaho, the chairman, said today in Boise, Idaho, that his party was "on the wrong side of every major issue" in the presidential election campaign.

If it doesn't change leadership it will face a long period in the 1966 and another disaster in 1968.

He said that in view of Tuesday landslide defeat on the national ticket he believes even Barry Goldwater, who defeated Republican presidential candidate, will recognize the need to broaden the appeal of the party.

Smylie suggested that Gover Nelson Rockefeller of Kansas who describes himself as a middle-of-the-road Republican, be given a chance next party control from the Goldwater conservatives.

At a press conference in New York, the former vice president, who campaigned widely for Goldwater, said Rockefeller, who was cool to the Arizona senator's presidential campaign "got his share of licks."

Nixon said Rockefeller was the "principal divider" of the Goldwater forces and that the party's future rests with "unifiers rather than dividers."

Rockefeller is vacationing in Spain, but a spokesman in New York released a statement calling Nixon's remarks a "partisan, post-election utterance."

Rockefeller, a member of his party's liberal wing, said:

"This is a time for constructive unification of the Republican party as a vital force in the mainstream of American political life. Name calling and manoeuvre is hardly calculated to advance this effort."

Many moderates are expected to press their drive for control of the party at a governors conference here Sunday. And if they make any headway, they can be expected to pull out the knives at a meeting of the Republican national committee in January.

Goldwater said at a press conference Wednesday he wants to keep the party on a conservative course.

In Augusta, Ga., where he was on a holiday vacation, former president Eisenhower called for a period of consultation among party leaders to discuss the party image—an image which Eisenhower said "has confused so many of our citizens and led them to think of it as a political doctrine designed primarily for the rich and privileged."

Henceforth, Eisenhower said, the Republican party must represent a wide spectrum of political thinking.

Chinese Premier Hears Pledge By Soviet Chief

'Ready to Abolish Nuclear Weapons'

From Reuters-AP

MOSCOW (CP) — New Communist party leader, Leonid Brezhnev, today declared in the presence of Chinese Premier Chou En-lai that the new Kremlin leaders regard the strengthening of the unity of the socialist camp as their "sacred duty."

Brezhnev also said Russia was forced to arm itself with nuclear weapons by the threat of the imperialists, but is ready to get rid of all nuclear weapons in a disarmament pact.

Brezhnev said in a major policy speech that the presence of Communist leaders here "symbolizes the strength of proletarian internationalism."

He said in the name of the Soviet central committee and the Soviet government he wants to declare that they regard the strengthening of the unity of the socialist camp as their sacred duty.

Brezhnev, who succeeded Nikita Khrushchev as Soviet party leader in a power shuffle three weeks ago, was making his first big speech to a 8,000-strong audience in the Kremlin's Palace of Congresses.

AT HIS SUMMIT

The audience included the leaders of 13 Communist states, including Communist China.

Chou sat five places from Brezhnev on the rostrum. His decision to come to Moscow after two years of bitter feuding between the two countries was a major political development.

The Communist leaders, who came for Saturday's 47th Revolution Day anniversary, were expected to have crucial talks on Communist bloc unity.

Brezhnev described rucuses achieved in industry and economy in the seven years of Soviet power, but was critics, of one closely connected with Khrushchev—agriculture.

He said there is much to do to improve agriculture and how to achieve an increase in agriculture.

But he paid tribute to policies personally advanced by Khrushchev in the last year—increased prices for cereal crops, increased farm pensions and a boost in the output of consumer goods.

WAR NOT INEVITABLE

Brezhnev said the Soviet party believes "that in present conditions a world war is not inevitable." He added "peace on earth can be ensured."

The question of an inevitable war with capitalism has been a major point of the Sino-Soviet ideological feud.

The Soviet Communist party will do everything it can to achieve such peace, he said.

Brezhnev, who spoke for an hour and 25 minutes, said "the

Newsmen Get Run Of Jail

By BOB EXELL

TORONTO (CP)—They were house-cleaning at Mercer Reformatory Thursday, and not all of the barred cell doors had their drapes on.

The lounges outside the cell blocks were in a moderate state of disarray. Lamp shades and carpets were missing.

"I'm sorry it it doesn't give you a very good picture." Superintendent Jean Burrows apologized to a group of newspaper men.

The picture, however, was not one reporters expected after reading a severely critical report from a grand jury.

A seven-man jury under fore man Richard H. Lyall, an insurance broker, had condemned both the 84-year-old three-storey building and its staff in an unprecedented report.

STAFF NOT QUALIFIED

It accused the reformatory of having unqualified personnel and inadequate medical supervision, and criticized its basement detention cells where prisoners who misbehave are confined for one to five days at a time.

It said dental care is not available apart from teeth-pulling and plaster, unless paid for by the prisoners who earn six cents a day; lesbianism is admitted and accepted; training and rehabilitation is a travesty and, there is no qualified teacher at the institution.

In reply to the report, Allan Grossman, Ontario minister of reform institutions, personally led a press tour through the reformatory Thursday, venturing as far as security would allow in giving newspaper men the run of the place.

He also asked for an investigation of the report by MACTO —the minister's advisory committee for treatment of the offender.

REPORT INACCURATE

Mr. Grossman said the grand jury report was inaccurate and uninformed. Accusations that Mrs. Burrows was not qualified to be in charge of the institution were thoughtless and unjust.

A number of grand jury reports in the past had nothing but commendation for Mercer's personnel and for the operation of the reformatory, Mr. Gross man said. He agreed, however, that the building is outdated.

Macaulay Urges Parley to Study Canadian Goals and Aspirations

TORONTO (CP) — A former Ontario cabinet minister urged the government Thursday to convene a council on Canadian goals and aspirations next spring, one in which Quebec is intent to the Roman Catholic ecumenical council in Rome.

Robert Macaulay, who held several portfolios in the Conservative government fare between 1943 and 1957, suggested the council all health last year, said there should be delegates to the council "from every walk of life and every segment of Canadian social and economic society."

He contended in a speech to the Institute of Chartered Life Underwriters that the root of Canada's current problems is the contention by French-Canadians that they have been scurvy agreement between two races rather than among a group of governments.

"I for one don't object to negotiating that point away in the spirit of national unity and in the light of the facts today, but I object to it being laid down at this stage when only the present circumstances—not because of what it says but because of what it implies.

"It implies, among other things, that no change can take place even if 10 provinces concur, unless the two races, French and English, accept the change.

"This means unanimous consent to every national change that may be impossible, and nations have been torn asunder to prove it."

New Antibiotic Drug, Ceporin, More Potent Than Penicillin

LONDON (Reuters)—A new antibiotic drug likely to prove the biggest discovery since penicillin has been developed by British scientists, it was announced today.

Equally as potent as penicillin, the new antibiotic, ceporin, works even better, will be cheaper to produce, and is successful with patients allergic to penicillin itself, according to scientists who produced the drug.

Ceporin was developed and will be produced solely in Britain. A research team of hundreds spent eight years on the project which cost a total of £1,500,000.

The firm which undertook development of the drug was Glaxo Laboratories.

Dr. F. J. Wilkins, chairman and managing director of Glaxo, told a press conference the discovery was "a major breakthrough for the British pharmaceutical industry."

Ceporin, he said, had been found to be highly successful in the treatment of infections to it. lungs, kidneys, bladder and infections resistant to penicillin.

About 200 patients had been treated with ceporin, he said and the results were "tremendously rapid."

He added: "Another important feature is that it is non-toxic and so far absolutely no side effects have been observed. Clinical trials have shown that patients who are allergic to penicillin can be given ceporin quite safely as this new antibiotic shows no cross-sensitivity with any of the penicillins".

Film Board Will Mark 25th Birthday

The National Film Board marks its 25th anniversary with a special attraction here Sunday, Nov. 15th, at the Park Theatre, Belleville.

James R. Skillings, local representative of the N.F.B., will be host for the November 15th event. Complimentary tickets of admission to the jubilee attraction can be obtained by telephoning Picton, Trenton, and Belleville Public Libraries.

Sunday's show is booked for 8.30 p.m.

The National Film Board created by an act of parliament in 1939, just prior to the outbreak of the Second World War, was charged with the responsibility of interpreting Canada to Canadians and to people of other lands through the medium of film.

Developing from the news reel and straight informational type of film, the NFB has gone on to dramatized documentaries and experimental films.

Today the board is still best known around the world for the quality of its documentaries.

The film has won more than Hollywood Oscars and one Palme d'Or from Cannes.

Four films have been chosen for the jubilee program here on Sunday, November 15th, one of them the Fields of Sacrifice, a memorable visit to Canadian war cemeteries in several countries, recalling the battles and showing the well-kept graves.

Rhodesian Whites Favor Independence

SALISBURY (Reuters)—The predominantly - white Rhodesian electorate today appeared to have voted overwhelmingly in favor of independence now under the existing constitution in a referendum Thursday.

With results in from 39 of the country's 50 polling districts, 44,640 votes were cast in favor of independence and only 5,065 against.

The results indicated a high proportion of the 13,726 Rhodesian Negroes entitled to vote had abstained.

Blacks outnumber whites 16 to 1 in the country, but there are 83,000 whites and only 13,000 blacks on the voting rolls.

Early last month it was feared Prime Minister Ian Smith would use the referendum result as a mandate to proclaim immediate independence. But after the British government said this would outlaw Rhodesia from the Commonwealth and isolate it from most of the world, Smith withdrew his threat.

United Appeal Total Nears $80,000 Mark

Belleville United Appeal received two corporate gifts, the returns from one employee canvass and returns from one professional group yesterday, to bring total receipts to more than $79,000. About $75,000 of the total is in the Appeal's head office; more than $4,000 is in individual campaign offices.

A corporate gift from Dominion Stores Ltd. is about 20 per cent larger than the firm's gift last year and a corporate gift has been received from Black Diamond Cheese Ltd., which gave through one of the firm's directors, Fred Ney. Returns from a group of nine doctors, one optometrist and two of their employees total $670. Returns from employees of Black Diamond Cheese Ltd. total $333, a one-third increase from the group's giving last year.

Returns from about 25 per cent of the city's businesses have not yet been received.

New School Regulations Are Explained

Approximately 100 ratepayers of Ameliasburg township turned out last night for a special meeting at the township hall to hear explanation of the new provincial legislation concerning township school areas.

Special speaker for the occasion was R. A. Dunsmore, district public school inspector. Township Public School Board Secretary acted as chairman for the meeting.

Under new legislation passed this year by the Ontario House, all school sections in rural municipalities are to become a single township school area with education costs spread over the entire township.

In Ameliasburg there are 13 school sections, this year managed by as many school boards.

At the municipal election next month township ratepayers in addition to a council will be asked to elect five area school trustees to form a joint board to look after school affairs for the entire township.

Under the new legislation, when a township school area is set up, property assets of the various school sections are taken into consideration, thus existing school facilities.

Prince's Essays Said Stolen

ST. HELENS, England (Reuters) — Two London policemen are being tried by a man seeking the return of a school exercise book with essays believed written by Prince Charles.

Terry Smith, director of the Mercury Press Agency in this northwestern English town, announced he had issued writs against Sir Joseph Simpson, commissioner of the Metropolitan (London) police, and Detective Superintendent Cyril Gould.

The book, which had been missing for six weeks, contained essays on democracy and the monarchy said to have been written by the 15-year old heir to the British throne.

Smith told reporters he had obtained possession of the book after visiting Scotland to arrange a contract some weeks ago.

The young prince has been a student for the last two years at Gordonstoun school in Scotland.

Those passing the Beginner's test are as follows:

'Rotary' Bed Purchased by Hospital Board

To assist nurses in the handling of critically ill patients a new electric "rotary" bed has been purchased for Belleville General Hospital.

Hospital boardroom representatives of the firm supplying the equipment, demonstrated the mechanically operated bed for the benefit of doctors and members of the hospital nursing staff. The bed in hospital parlories volunteered as the "patient."

The special bed is used mainly for patients with severe burns or spinal injuries and other necessary equipment can be used to turn patients, or, if necessary, to transfer them from the bed to a wheel chair.

The first of such specialized beds was purchased by the hospital about four years ago with this latest model now being purchased to augment the existing equipment.

Still closer when we meet again.

HOWE — In loving memory of a dear mother and grandma, Alberta Howe, who passed away November 6, 1961.

HOWE — In memory of Albert T. Howe, who passed away November 6, 1961.

Within the heart I'll always keep,

And try to do my best to live,
That you would want me to,
It's sad to walk the road alone,
And know that you are not by my side,
But to all there comes a moment,
When the ways of life divide.
You gave me years of happiness,
These cannot grow, and learn,
But you left me beautiful memories,
I will treasure throughout the years,
Memories of loving wife and family.

Triggered Profumo Affair Now Is Paymaster-General

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—Col. George Edward Cecil Wigg, 63, the man who blew the whistle on former War Minister John Profumo, is paymaster - general in Harold Wilson's new Labor government.

The sad-faced Wigg, a one-man opposition intelligence unit on army matters for 13 years, electrified the House of Commons March 21, 1963, with the first question on what was destined to become the Profumo affair.

That question had a sensational outcome but Prime Minister Wilson knows well the dogged persistence of Wigg as a sleuth on more mundane military matters through the years.

Thus in his new job Wigg will not really be a paymaster. He is described as a sort of personal watchdog and sanity-warning system for Wilson's over-broad field, including security.

"Mr. Wigg holds the record for asking not fewer but more quickly than anybody else in Parliament," says the evening Standard. "Mr. Wigg will be a useful man to have inside the government—if only to ensure that he is not twisting its tail himself."

Although the home office continues to have responsibility for general security questions, Wigg's duty will be to look into anything serious that arises. He is particularly sensitive about security—a subject he shares with Wilson's love, the army.

Wigg had doubts about Profumo long before he heard that the Tory minister had an affair with call-girl Christine Keeler. But he was particularly concerned over reports that Miss Keeler—who also was sharing a Soviet diplomat—was raising a question of security danger.

He let air into the whole thing by asking Home Secretary Henry Brooke in a series of rumors involving a "figure on the government front bench," prompting Profumo to make a personal statement to the Commons, denying any improper link with Miss Keeler. Profumo later retracted and resigned in disgrace, causing a ructus that rocked the Conservative government.

Wigg, who calls all men "mate," served 18 years in the regular army before 1937, referred to it in the Secret World War and later served as parliamentary secretary to War Minister Emanuel Shinwell in the post-war Labor government.

When the Tories came to power in 1951, Wigg retained informal lines of army information, by getting back to Opposition benches. He kept track of various army units, for instance, by getting base and garrison newspapers and checking who played whom in football and other sports.

He attacked Profumo over the Kuwait operation in 1961 and formed the opinion that the minister was evasive. He distrusted him from the start when the Christine Keeler business began to simmer.

The old soldier, with his air of dogged determination, differs from many of Wilson's other appointees, caustic Chairman Pincher, defence correspondent of The Daily Express, commented:

"I rejoice in the fact that Wigg is no intellectual. The prime minister promises to have so many intellectual 'whiz kids' around him that will sleep sounder for knowing that their academic proposals are being learned by at least one man with more than his quota of horse sense."

Curling Season Opened With Mixed Spiel

With pomp and ceremony, the curling season in this city was opened on Wednesday night with a mixed bonspiel, which will continue until Saturday night. Two draws are being played each night at seven and nine with three draws on Saturday for the 32 rinks entered.

This spiel is being directed by the Board of Directors of the club in order that all new members will be introduced to both sections of the club. Gil Wambolt, the president, welcomed the curlers on each shift, the first night after the curlers were piped onto the rinks and the president delivering the first stone. Ken Pinder, vice-president of the club, is in charge of the spiel and he has as his helpers Arthur Row and L. E. McLear, as scorekeepers and drawmasters.

The ice committee, under the chairmanship of Ron Bean, and icemaker Harold Wannamaker, has done an excellent job in producing the finest sheet of that has ever been in the rink. The ice is exceptionally fast and the rings, against the perfect white background makes an imposing picture. Regulations as to footwear to be worn on the ice will be strictly enforced this season and in this way the ice surface can be kept perfectly keen with no dirt, which will make for more pleasant curling.

Not only will the curlers in the spiel enjoy the good ice and accommodation but the directors have gone out of their way to make the spiel a real success. Prizes will be offered to the winners. A delicious luncheon will be served on Saturday night and a social evening for the new members welcome and have a good time.

Already the inside glass skips have started their season but the club has not yet elected a president and this will be done at a later date. The "T" room is also a busy place with the keens figuring out how they lost and the winners explaining the good shots that won. The season is off to a wonderful start and let's keep it rolling.

Arctic Frustration; Summer Failed to Show

ESQUIMALT, B.C. (CP)—Summer forgot to come to Canada's Arctic this year and as a result the scientific exploits of a Pacific Naval Laboratory expedition were almost frustrated.

Aim of the expedition, Icepack'VI, was to study reverberations of sound in water under ice.

"At first we thought it was going to be a complete washout," says Thomas Hughes of the lab team. "We achieved the main task but others we could not carry out."

However, expedition leader Ray Brown says the limited achievements were "well worth the effort."

"It all contributes to the understanding of the problems and use of sound under water in detecting submarines and navigating under polar ice.

"While we would have liked to get to 1,000-fathom water we did obtain a great deal of data on shallow water under smooth one-year ice which will make a good comparison with similar data obtained last year under rough polar ice."

The six-man team left by air in August and joined the transport department icebreaker John A. Macdonald at Resolute 750 miles inside the Arctic Circle, for a one-month stay in the North.

The air temperature stayed at an all-time low," Mr. Hughes says. "It was around freezing most of the time we were there. It usually gets up to 40 and has been as high as 60. Added to this was 50 per cent less sunshine. The ice just did not break up."

When the expedition flew into Resolute Bay there was five feet of shorefast ice where last year there had been none.

The icebreaker d'Iberville broke the ice out of the bay and a very demolition crew cleared a small channel to allow passage of small landing craft, but when the John A. Macdonald arrived she had to anchor half a mile offshore.

Expedition members were transferred from shore by helicopter and the heavy equipment went aboard by lighter.

Mr. Hughes says ice team had hoped to do its work in the Beaufort Sea (north of Alaska and the Yukon) "but the heavy ice prevented this. Instead the experiments were done in Viscount Melville Sound, not far from Resolute.

He says the weather was uniformly bad. There was a lot of mist which both held up the work and prevented helicopters from searching for passages through the ice.

The team set up a shelter on the ice for their electronic equipment but lived aboard the icebreaker.

Other members of the team, besides Mr. Brown and Mr. Hughes, were David Brown and David Street of Victoria, Pat Green of the Pacific Oceanographic Group at Nanaimo, B.C., and David Crowe, a student from Edmonton.

Shake-up in Municipalities Said Coming

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says the Ontario government is moving toward the biggest shakeup of municipal organizations in the province's history.

The newspaper says the reorganization will likely provide two basic and sweeping reforms:

1. "Replacement of the existing 38 administrative county governments by a series of regional governments that will have far broader responsibilities and be based on economic, geographic and population factors as well as current boundary lines.

2. "Granting to the department of municipal affairs of powers to initiate boundary changes and substantially reduce the province's 973 municipalities, many of which are considered small and inefficient."

The newspaper says proposals for the major changes are likely to come from the legislature's select committee on the municipal and related acts, which since 1961 has been studying the need for an overhaul of municipal legislation.

Earlier, Hollis Becke', chairman of the select committee, suggested tentatively that new regional governments would take responsibility for planning, assessment, health and welfare services, public transportation, sewage disposal, water supply, fire and police services and the provision of water at sources.

Municipalities might retain responsibility for distribution of water, local sewage facilities, sidewalks, local streets and the collection of taxes, he said.

Labor Meeting Ends in Fight

TORONTO (CP)—A meeting of the Toronto and District Labor Council (CLC) broke up here Thursday night with shouts of protest and flying fists.

The meeting had been expected to vote on a political education committee recommendation that the council endorse Mayor Philip Givens in the Dec. 7 mayoralty contest. But Chairman Donald Montgomery was unable to restore order and adjourned the meeting without the vote.

When the meeting dissolved about 20 members of the Amalgamated Toronto Typographical Union (CLC) jumped to their feet to protest a motion still on their feet after a motion to adjourn was declared carried.

Controller Allan Lamport, Mayor Given's opponent and a supporter of the striking printers, was in attendance to oppose the recommendation of the political education committee.

At one point, a delegate advanced on Mr. Lamport with fists in the air, yelling: "You're a dirty liar." Mr. Lamport was enough to stand up and. . . ." He was restrained by other delegates.

Eskimo Recalls Boyhood In Northland as Hunter

By IRA DILWORTH

WINNIPEG (CP) — William Noah doesn't look like a man easily scared. There's a calm, steady look in the lean young Eskimo's eyes.

But he recalls his boyhood in a primitive village beside the Back River, 1,100 miles north of Winnipeg, as one scattered with events that filled him with fear.

William, 31, now lives at Baker Lake, 130 miles south of his childhood home. He was in Winnipeg this summer learning carpentry.

His own experience refutes the popular myth that a boy born and raised in the wilderness is fearless by nature and a hunter by instinct.

He talked about fear as a matter of fact, as natural to him as eating caribou meat, fishing in igloos and trapping the white fox.

The untimely death of his father brought him face to face with fear early in life because, while still a boy, he had to tackle the man-sized job of trapping.

His first white fox was alive when he found it in his trap. He was 13 at the time.

"I was afraid. I did not know how to kill it. I wanted to have nothing to do with it."

URGED GIRLS HUNT

He knew that veteran trappers could put a foot on a fox's shoulder to finish it off, but he didn't know how. And to shoot it would spoil the pelt. So he killed it with the butt of his rifle.

As he talked, he occasionally chuckled at things that used to frighten him. When he went hunting with his father for expeditions that frightened him, he would stay behind in the settlement with the women.

But there were other fears that took time to overcome. When trapping alone he sometimes returned to the igloo without reaching his traps—"I was afraid there might be a wolf."

Once after supper he went with a friend to check trap lines and they got caught in a blizzard. With a snow knife they built an igloo "just big enough for two."

The sky was blue when they crawled out the next morning, their clothes frozen stiff. They climbed a hill to see where they were and spotted William's home.

"My sister was waiting for us outside. It was early in the morning but nobody was sleeping. I didn't understand why they were crying. I didn't understand they were crying because they were happy to see us."

Sickness hit the Back River village of four to six families in the next year and William was sent to Baker Lake. There he met fear again. He was afraid of the teacher and of other boys.

Eventually, he reached the Grade 5 level and learned some English. "This summer the brothers at Mr. Affairs department brought 11 Eskimos here to learn the carpentry course at the Manitoba Institute of Technology.

It was William's second year in the course and he was making a chair and stool to take home to his mother.

Already William has helped build a community hall at Baker Lake. And although he's not sure what he will do in future he may continue with carpentry.

He says that, young as he was, he had started to become a "good" trapper, and now misses hunting and fishing. He may do some trapping out of Baker Lake but he has the impression that he won't return to the life of a trapper in the north.

"It's a better life now."

Concorde Supersonic Jet Project Is Being Reviewed

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

LONDON (CP) — Amid wild shouts and jeers from the opposition, Aviation Minister Roy Jenkins assured the House of Commons Thursday night the Anglo-French Concorde supersonic airliner project is currently being reviewed—not necessarily doomed.

Jenkins denied Tory suggestions that some sort of deal had been hatched between Britain and the French to kill the project whereby Britain would get out of the Concorde enterprise.

Conservative backbencher Jenkins unmercifully all the way through his statement on the 1,400 - miles - an - hour aircraft, billed as the world's first supersonic plane.

Jenkins said he detected anti-Americanism in some opposition hints that a deal was suspected between Britain and the U.S. by which Britain would bow out of the Concorde project, leaving the field clear for the U.S., in return for Washington sympathy toward Labor policies.

Prime Minister Wilson had conveyed "legitimate doubts" about the Concorde to Premier Pompidou. Doubts followed up by visiting Paris and making representations to the French government.

No decision had been taken except to ask for an urgent review. The project would be judged on hard-headed calculations. The major worry was the sonic boom, which would be louder than foreseen at the time the project was decided upon in 1962.

The official estimated cost, being shared equally by Britain and France, now has climbed to £300,000,000 ($840,00,0), with unofficial estimates going as high as £1,000,000,000 ($3,000,000,).

Topsy-Turvy Politics

In the political world, it is sometimes difficult to recognize the players, even when you have a program.

Terry Nugent of Edmonton Strathcona riding, says there has been a "disgraceful" erosion of federal power since the Liberals took office.

Mr. Nugent may be exaggering slightly, but certainly there has been some erosion of federal powers and equally as certainly there threatens to be more unless the champions of a strong central government speak out.

Mr. Nugent may be exaggerating slightly, but The "program" says he is a Progressive Conservative.

In today's world one of the accepted trademarks of a conservative is opposition to "big government," to the centralization of control over every facet of a nation's affairs which is generally considered to be one of the aims of socialists.

Circumstances may be casting the Progressive Conservatives in an unusual, and perhaps for them an uncomfortable, role in Canadian politics in the next few years.

Because it has chanced to be a Liberal regime which was in power at Ottawa when the first waves of French-Canadian nationalism roared westward out of Quebec, it has been the Liberal party which has had to seek compromises which would provide some hope for the continued existence of Canada as a nation.

Perhaps because the Prime Minister was once a career diplomat, there are indications that compromise has not been endured as an unhappy necessity, but rather almost welcomed as an exercise in virtue.

It may even be this, under the existing circumstances, but it is surely obvious that if the advantages of a strong central government are to be given proper attention and the rights of the federal power to be respected, some change in attitude at Ottawa will be essential.

Because they constitute the Official Opposition, the Progressive Conservatives have not been loath to criticize what they consider "disgraceful" concessions to the provinces, particularly to Quebec. Indeed, the particular form which Quebec provincialism is taking, involving as it does a disdain for past imperial connections and for the British tradition, are nicely calculated to arouse the ire of the Conservatives.

Yet, in the final analysis, while this provides assurance that they would be more than willing to "stand up to Quebec," it gives little comfort to those who prefer a strong central government as a matter of principle. The Conservatives may support such a principle, but it is evident that many of them will support it for what, to the believers in centralization of power, will be precisely the wrong reasons.

To maintain a strong federal regime, some compromise will be essential; a refusal to compromise at all would eventually prove as fatal as a willingness to go to any lengths to compromise. The Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives thus face the advocates of a strong central government with equally unacceptable alternatives.

Let Trouble-Makers Pay

Are United Nations peace-keeping forces too efficient?

Some of those attending an Ottawa conference on UN missions believe that, by quickly discovering temporary solutions for tough problems, the UN forces reduce the urgency which would otherwise be felt to discover permanent solutions.

This is an unexpected difficulty. Before the Ottawa meeting it was, we think, generally agreed that the UN peace-keeping program faced two major obstacles, the difficulty in acquiring sufficient authority to do an efficient job and the even greater difficulty in finding nations ready to foot the bill.

The latter difficulty resulted in the UN force being withdrawn from the Congo long before order was established—but it might have been established had UN commanders been given a free hand in dealing with trouble-makers.

It strikes us that the reason why some nations are willing to accept the continuance of temporary solutions, with UN supervision, lies in the fact that the authority of the UN forces is strictly limited, and that their continued presence is not costly.

Why not give the UN more authority to do the job required, and made the countries where UN forces operate foot the bill? That, we suggest, would revive the feeling of urgency in seeking permanent solutions which would make the continued presence of UN troops unnecessary.

Canadian Views on Election

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Star: The American election result, was, above all, a deliverance from peril. Even without the ominous uncertainties generated by the leadership change in Russia and the Chinese atomic bomb, the world could not have afforded to have a shallow, ignorant and militaristic man in the White House in rejecting Barry Goldwater, the American people demonstrated a political steadiness and judgment for which they have often received too little credit abroad. . . .

Toronto Telegram: To the world this means that American policy will flow along the even stream that has made this great power an enriching ally of all parts of Western civilization for at least two decades. It means that there will be no rash adventures in meeting the contest of Communist powers, that there will be no retreat from the forward movement to encourage the concept of brotherhood among Americans of different race, that the policies which have made America rich and have nourished its friends in the international community will be continued.

Lethbridge Herald (Ind.-Lib): Renouncing its Lincoln heritage the Republican party became a white racist party. Renouncing Lincoln's moderation, it became an extremist sect. To avoid being flabby, Goldwater became factious; to avoid drift, he became dictatorial; to attack Democrats, he attacked democracy; to champion states' rights, he seemed to fight the United States. To avoid inevitability, he appeared to be only a mud-slinger.

Moose Jaw Times - Herald: Sharing the continent's fate with the U.S., Canada has reason to be satisfied that in the common problems, understanding will be reached and that where there is sharp division of opinion, solutions will be obtainable by the use of reason and negotiation.

Edmonton Journal: For Senator Goldwater and the Republican view - presidential candidate, Mr. William Miller, it was a humiliating defeat. . . . The morality of Mr. Bobby Baker, Mr. Billy Sol Estes and Mr. Walter Jenkins and the television industry in Austin, Texas . . . did not compare with the truly important issues that the Republicans largely avoided.

Regina Leader-Post: A sharp switch of U.S. international policies under the immature, extremely reactionary Mr. Goldwater might have caused incalculable harm to mankind's progress . . . We know now that President Johnson is secure in office for a full term with a sweeping mandate such as few presidential victors have received, that the main successful foreign policies of the United States under the preceding Democratic and Republican post-war administrations will be continued.

Brandon Sun: The election of President Johnson comes as a relief to most Canadians. Even more of a relief is the overwhelming defeat of Senator Goldwater. Our ties with the United States are close; our concern for world peace is great. Whatever his deficiencies, President Johnson is a known quantity. Senator Gold water is not. . . .

Vancouver Sun: The forces of right - wing extremism have frogmarched their candidate Barry Goldwater, to one of the most humiliating defeats in Republican party history. There could scarcely be a more clear verdict rendered upon Goldwaterism. It would be idle to pretend that most of America's friends and allies are not immensely relieved. . . .

London Free Press: Senator Goldwater failed in his crusade to convert the United States to his version of conservatism. Whether this was a personal shortcoming or whether the United States has finally embraced the welfare state and is unlikely ever to go back to the traditions broken by Roosevelt will undoubtedly be argued. . . . The American people evidently decided that President Johnson embodied a higher degree of responsibility than Barry Goldwater. . . . Canadians will feel better because of the John son victory.

Windsor Star: Voters in the United States showed sound political judgment . . . in giving President Lyndon B. Johnson an overwhelming victory over Senator Barry Goldwater. It was a contest, in the presidential race at least, between the progressive moderates and the reactionaries.

Victoria Times: It is simply truth to say that all of the United States allies, as well as neutral and anti-Western countries around the world, breathe more easily today because of Mr. Johnson's victory. His foreign policy of peaceful overtures from a position of strength is seen as both logical and hopeful.

Saskatoon Star-Phoenix: Now will Republican party control continue in extremist hands or revert to the moderates? Canadians welcome the results because Democratic presidents and congresses are more friendly to us than Republicans . . . and Canadians prefer peace to the war-scored language of the annihilating anvil of unclearism . . . Americans have given Johnson an awesome trust . . . chances are good that he will be an able president.

Montreal Metro - Express: Goldwater, and John Birch Society, the Ku Klux Klan, the far right, this seed of fascism was crushed. Yet almost 26,000,000 Americans did vote for Goldwater. That means that in the country which dominates the world, there are 26,000,000 men and women who think the demagogue is right, that his ideas represent democracy That's frightening.

Vancouver Times: . . . It was a reaffirmation of the splendid common sense of adult appreciation of the realities of the world today, by the American people as a whole.

Strictly Personal
Anti-Social Conduct Stems From Boredom

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

About a week before the drunken driving episode in Darien, Conn., erupted on the front pages of the newspapers, my daughter returned from a few days in Darien, where she had been visiting a college roommate.

Having heard something about the community, I asked her what the young people did there. "Not much of anything, really," she said. "They seem to be terribly bored."

They are bored because they are given too much too soon; while, at the other end of the economic scale, slum youngsters are bored because they lack space, money and the facilities for wholesome recreation.

And it seems to me that boredom, rather than viciousness, is at the root of anti-social conduct among adolescents. Especially among those who have too much or too little — for it is the idle rich and the upper-crust suburbs that sullenness, anger and ennui combine to explode in what we call "senseless vandalism."

But it is not at all senseless if understood in its proper emotional context. Young people know too fast in both the upper and lower strata of society: they acquire a patina of false maturity that cannot carry them equably through the turbulent years of adolescence.

The slum children become little men and women before they have a chance to work their way through childhood; they become prematurely cynical about jobs, welfare, corrupt cops, devious politicians, and all the sleazy devices that keep the lumpenproletariat going.

The children of affluence suffer from the sins of overprivilege. They are pearls in their oyster, but each oyster comes with an Instant Pearl. They arrive too soon, and too young, to mimic their elders in formal clothes, and enter the adult world physically long before they can cope with it emotionally.

In both cases, a necessary stage of development has been skipped over or at least skimmed. Overexposure to the adult world has aroused needs and desires in these young people that cannot and should not be satisfied. Yet, they are merely following the examples of their elders; and their resentful credo is "What's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gosling."

The children of the poor don't know what to do with them; there is nowhere and no place to do it in and no money to do it with; the children of the rich have done it all before they should have, and are irked at the few remaining restrictions on their freedom. And both are attacked by the insidious psychological disease of boredom. Never to have been a child, at the proper pace, is to fail to learn what adulthood means

To Your Good Health
Punishment Will Not Curb Bed-Wetting Problem

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My five-year-old son has a bed-wetting problem. I have taken him to doctors and they say nothing is wrong with him.

Could you please write and advise me what you think I should do now? — Mrs. R. H.

You did the right thing by having him examined first. In some cases, an infection or a defect is such that a child can't stay dry no matter how he tries.

If that isn't the trouble, then it is time to look at the commonest causes: tensions of some sort; or a matter of habit; or perhaps sleeping too soundly to be aware of the need to get up and go to the bathroom. This last may, in final analysis, just be failure to have developed a right habit.

Punishment and scolding can not be expected to do much good, if any, and they may do some harm. At the age of five, a child is ashamed of being a bedwetter.

But stating that one method of getting at the problem is better than another is something I don't like to do. Different methods fit different children and their needs. I've put the reliable methods in a booklet, "Enuresis — or Ten Ways to Stop Bed-Wetting." If you would like a copy, send 25 cents in coin and a long, unstamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of the Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 156, Dundee, Ill.

Decreasing fluids for the child in the late afternoon and the evening is usually helpful, even though other measures may be needed besides. I do caution you however, not to try to "dry out the child." Everyone needs a good deal of fluid to be healthy. Indeed, too little fluid can contribute to irritation of the urinary tract and thus contribute to bed-wetting. So be sure that, in the morning and middle of the day, the child gets plenty of fluid — including of course his daily supply of milk.

Overcoming bed-wetting is not often accomplished quickly. It takes time, and it takes patience both for the child and for the parents, but if you go at it the right way, there are mighty few cases of failure.

If you go at it the wrong way, putting too much pressure on the child and not really trying to help, then the opposite is the result: Success is more remote and the child may acquire some emotional quirks that will last a long time.

Dear Dr. Molner: When I had burning feet so that sometimes the pain was almost unbearable I followed a friend's suggestion to wear cotton instead of nylon and my troubles were over. I either wear cotton pads inside my all-nylon hose, or I wear cotton-footed nylons. I thought others might want to know. — A. B.

Thank you in behalf of readers who have this trouble. But remember: Not all cases of burning feet are due to the same thing. The hard part of the solution is to find the cause. It may be local irritation. It may be faulty circulation, defective arches, improperly fitting shoes or even neuritis.

Thus if the irritation is from nylon, switching to some other fabric may be the whole answer. If the cause is from something else, changing fabrics won't help.

Note to Mrs. M. J.: The "freezing technique" for stomach or duodenal ulcers is very useful in some selected cases which do not respond to standard treatments. But when I tell you say, "most of the stomach has been removed," the problem involves something more than ulcers. It then becomes intricate, and you must depend on your physician's advice.

The two-day pheasant shoot held in the township of South Marysburgh on Friday and Saturday last, brought out a horde of hunters to that game preserve.

The armed invasion of the English ringneck pheasant coverts, brought heavy casualties among the birds the first day, and many a fine cock bird fell before the two-day pheasant season closed. Guns boomed from dawn until dusk, and the attacking force of hunters moved slowly through the township's square miles of marsh and brushland.

One of the hunters from Millford was the first man to fill his bag with the three birds the law allowed for one day's shooting.

While hunters from Picton, Bloomfield, Wellington, Belleville and North Hastings participated in the shoot, game overseers kept a check on bag limits and confined shooting within the allotted hours.

The origin of McArthur's Mills can be traced to this way, close to 70 years ago; Mr. McArthur, father of Mrs. Harvey, was attracted to the location by the giant pine trees and water power. The only other person to lay claim to the land then was an Indian named White Duck, whose abode was a nest of leaves and brush beside an turned up root. Bringing his family from Toronto, Mr. McArthur built a home and also a saw mill. Later he added a planing and turning mill. In his workshops furniture of svrious designs was created. Gradually the sparsely settled area grew into a community. In the face of overwhelming odds, finally the post office was established and named Mr. Arthur's Mills, in honor of "Archie." Eventually Mrs. Harvey fell heir to the post office, a job for 40 years discharged well in duties of the office.

Weekly Livestock Review

TORONTO (CP)—A light supply of top grade dry-fed slaughter cattle sold on a fairly good demand at steady prices at the Ontario public stockyards Thursday.

Heavy receipts of plain unfinished cattle traded slowly on a demand that lacked dependability.

Cow prices were lower and bull prices were steady. Replacement cattle were steady.

Veal calf prices were actively strong on the top grades, while numerous lower grades and heifer runner calves were slow and under pressure. Hog prices were high and lamb prices were strong to higher.

Cattle receipts were estimated at about 9,000 head, about 2,000 head less than last week and about 500 head less than the same week in 1963. Western cattle receipts numbered 878 head, a decrease from last week of 386 head. Included in the western receipts were several loads of well finished slaughter cattle. Western stock calf receipts totalled 2,128 head, 213 head more than last week. Other out-of-province receipts were 20 cattle and 83 calves from New Brunswick. There were no shipments to Eastern Canadian slaughterers. However, 68 head were shipped off the market for slaughter in the United States.

Labor Minister Shys Away From Flag Issue

GALT (CP) — Labor Minister MacEachen declined to say Thursday night whether there will be a new Canadian flag by Christmas, as Prime Minister Pearson has promised.

Mr. MacEachen, in Galt to support Liberal candidate Roderick Stewart in Monday's federal by-election in Waterloo South, would not commit himself on whether the flag debate would begin before next year.

In answer to a question at a press conference, he said party leaders would meet on the question today.

"I can promise there will be a flag debate," Mr. MacEachen said.

"When?" a reporter asked.

"That's a good question," he answered. "There are other matters currently under consideration."

In his speeches to Liberal rallies, Mr. MacEachen accused Opposition Leader Diefenbaker of obstruction in Parliament on the issues of the flag, interim supply and redistribution, and said Mr. Diefenbaker's motives are partisan and power - centred.

First Budget Of New Govt. On Wednesday

LONDON (CP) — Britain's Labor government will unveil its first budget next Wednesday and the powerful financiers of London are beginning to worry. Stocks are sagging as investors wonder what the budget will disclose.

Various reports indicate that Britons, now among the most heavily taxed in the Western alliance, may be in for an added tax load or higher contributions for social security.

One newspaper suggests higher corporation and capital gains taxes are inevitable.

Another suggests the axe will fall on allowable expence - account deductions. A third maintains the exchequer's concentration will be on closing tax loopholes.

The inevitable conclusion is that the Labor regime, planning to boost old-age pensions and other social benefits, needs more money. It also needs parliamentary approval of its temporary import tariffs imposed to narrow a trade gap and curb the drain on Britain's official gold holdings.

Diefenbaker Believes Govt. Plans Flag-Debate Closure

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Diefenbaker suggested Thursday in the Commons that the government plans to impose debate-limiting closure in the flag debate.

Without confirming or deny ing the suggestion, Acting Prime Minister Martin replied that it is desirable in the national interest that Commons business not be unduly protracted.

Mr. Diefenbaker retorted with a suggestion that Mr. Martin tell Mr. Pearson, who was absent at the time, that the opposition is only too happy to go ahead with the legislative program.

Legislation, he said, is being held in abeyance by the flag question.

Mr. Martin promised to give Mr. Pearson the message, adding that he's happy Mr. Diefenbaker agrees there should be no undue delay in taking care of Commons business.

Mr. Diefenbaker in his references to closure noted television remarks by Mr. Pearson Wednesday night in which the prime minister said the recommended flag design will be adopted by Christmas.

The political party leaders assemble in Prime Minister Pearson's office today in a new atmosphere of confidence that the Commons soon may come to a decision on the flag.

The opposition leaders are supposed to be reporting back to Mr. Pearson the views of their followers about setting an agreed time limit on the flag debate. They also may go into the question of how soon the debate will start.

Lord Thomson's Maiden Speech Well Received

LONDON (CP)—Lord Thomson raised a chorus of "hear hear" in the House of Lords Thursday when he lambasted British industry and unions for outmoded ways.

The plain-spoken Toronto native, best known as Roy Thomson despite his peerage, said flatly that much pf British business is inefficient. It fails to "measure up." Workers are underpaid and unions are guilty of feather-bedding.

Lord Thomson's maiden speech in the Lords seemed well received on both sides of the House and Lord Sainsbury, Labor peer who rose after him, said it was the most stimulating and challenging address he had heard there.

Sainsbury, who owns one of Britain's biggest supermarket chains and competes in that line against the Canadian-born food king Garfield Weston, added:

"I think we should be very grateful to that great member of the Commonwealth, Canada, for sending us so many of her famous and very successful sons.

Thomson, 70, spoke from the cross-benches between the Tory and Labor sides of the House and emphasized his independent position by stating he hopes the new Labor government will tackle Britain's serious economic problems with "courage and energy, irrespective of party."

"If they do so, they should have the undivided support of everyone who has the future well-being of Britain at heart, and I am sure that includes all of us."

Quiet Revolution in Quebec Against Obsolete Traditions

Speaker Tells P.C. Women

"Our country today is in trouble," Fernand Guindon, M.L.A., chairman of the St. Lawrence Parks Commission, told the Ontario Progressive Conservative Women at their annual meeting in Toronto recently.

Delegates from Belleville at the convention were Mrs. Stuart Howell, president of Belleville Ladies' P. C. Association, and Mrs. H. Yorke and Mrs. M. Waller from Foxboro.

In the course of his remarks Mr. Guindon said, "One reason his troubles are so bad to deal with is that there are people who think more of the province where they were born than of Canada; who are more concerned with the language they speak than with the freedom that lets them speak it; who are more interested in the future of their race than of their country. There are such people among both French and English speaking Canadians. But they are minorities in both cases and I think the time has come for the majority of us who are Canadians first to let them know where we stand.

"Over a million Canadians of French origin live outside Quebec. There are half a million of us right here in Ontario.

EQUAL EDUCATION

"Because of the generous policies of grants of various Progressive governments, and particularly since the introduction of the Foundation Tax Plan by the Roberts' government, French Canadian students in Ontario primary schools can justly say that they have educational opportunities fully equal to those available to their English-speaking compatriots.

"But we French Canadians are first and foremost Canadians. We know that Ontario cannot have enduring success as the mind of national failure. In a century of living together, parts of Canada have become an interdependent whole. Ontario workers will be unemployed if western farmers or Maritime fishermen are in trouble. And they will be in trouble if we weaken our national government so much that it cannot truly look after its national responsibilities.

NO SYMPATHY

"I have no sympathy for the nonsense we sometimes hear about this country being doomed to disintegration. I believe in the future of Canada. I insist only that it must be a Canadian nation in which French-speaking Canadians and English-speaking Canadians are equal partners, in fact as well in words.

"In the main, the 'quiet revolution' in Canada is not a revolt against English Canadians, but against obsolete traditions, customs and institutions in French Canada itself. This revolution is long overdue; but its success will depend upon continuing and expanding level of economic growth and prosperity.

PROPER GOAL

"I believe that French Canadian culture can best survive and develop in the province that it has in the last two centuries as a living, growing and dynamic part of larger Canadian complex. The proper goal for French Canadians is full participation from Canada but equality within Canada.

"The issue that we face is not an issue between English Canadians and French Canadians. It is not an issue between those Canadians whatever their language who stand for unity and those Canadians, whatever their language who would destroy it. Canadians must take place myself and I believe most other French-Canadians place Canada first, simply on the basis of a united and strong Canada.

Home and School News

QUEEN VICTORIA

The November meeting of the Queen Victoria Home and School Association opened with the business session followed by the program which began with an address by Mrs. J. Smith after which a film "Sociable Sizes to the Noisy Nines" was shown.

In her talk, Mrs. Smith stressed that education is a joint responsibility of the home, school, playmates and community and a never ending process extending from the cradle to the grave.

FOUR TEACHERS

These four teachers establish how the child feels about himself, others and his place in the world.

The home influence was studied in the film shown and this was followed by discussion groups and refreshments.

Future meetings will deal in turn with the remaining three teachers.

In the room count Mr. Frink's class won for the seniors and Mrs. Powell's class for the juniors.

Successful Tea Held at Church Hall

A successful tea and bazaar was held on Tuesday afternoon at St. George's Anglican church hall. The guests were received at the entrance by Mrs. R. Ferguson who gave them a cordial welcome. Mrs. G. Gulliver was treasurer for the occasion.

Mrs. D. Domoday was convener of the tea room where the table was attractively decorated with 'mums arranged in a crystal bowl and yellow and green candles in crystal holders. Small tables were placed about the room.

The tea poured by Mrs. L. Jordon, Mrs. D. Wright, and Mrs. R. Ferguson. Assisting in the tea room were Miss Brient, Mrs. W. McLeod and Mrs. F. Markel, and others who served the guests, made the tea, and supervised the kitchen.

A variety of good things to eat was displayed on the home baking table convened by Mrs. Garow and her assistants. Attractive decorations of the committee looked after the sale of candy, and a plant table where African violets, 'mums and artificial flowers were on sale was convened by Mrs. W. Colleyer.

Women Ask Abortions Be Made Legal

TORONTO (CP) — A resolution asking that abortion be made legal was passed almost unanimously Thursday at a convention of the Central Ontario Area Women's Institutes.

Addressed to the federal minister of health and justice, it requests:

"That the Criminal Code of Canada be amended to legalize abortion on grounds which would include criminal assaults and the health, both physical and mental, of the mother, and be kept free from the restrictive medical practitioner under the authority of a medical board of three qualified men when carried out in a duly accredited place."

More than 1,400 delegates passed the resolution without discussion except for a comment from the floor that "we know this has to come."

The resolution moved by Mrs. Alexander Munro of the Toronto suburb of Scarborough She told the delegates that 90 per cent of criminal abortions are performed on married women and that more than 1,000,000 are performed in the U.S. and Canada every year.

"Legal abortion is dangerous mostly because it has been forced underground.

"The existing law is archaic and futile because it does not prevent abortions from being performed, only makes the operation dangerous, makes criminals out of the innocent and provides a lucrative sideline for the guilty."

Ann Landers

Rules for Separated Parents Are Effective

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Because we of the family relations division of the Twelfth Circuit Court of Connecticut are aware of your concern for all children, and because we know that a vast number of faithful readers are influenced by your splendid advice we are sending you a copy of our "Ten Commandments" of proper conduct for separated parents.

ANN LANDERS

As family relations officers we work not only with separated parents, attempting to reconcile them, but we also set support amounts and visitation hours, arrest non-supporting parents, and investigate domestic situations.

These "Ten Commandments" were drafted after we received thousands of complaints from separated parents in regard to visitation problems and other aspects of separated living. We have noted a sharp drop in the number of complaints since these rules have been made available to both separated parents.

You have my permission to reprint the list in part or in full. And please keep up the good work, Ann. Your top-notch advice to readers is more helpful than possibly even you realize. — THOMAS H. ELLIOT, FAMILY RELATIONS OFFICE, 12TH CIRCUIT COURT OF CONNECTICUT.

Proper Conduct of Separated Parents

To Husband and Wife: As you know, your children are usually the losers when their parents separate. They are deprived of the full time, proper guidance that two parents can give guidance and direction essential to their moral and spiritual growth.

Although there is probably some bitterness between you, it should not be inflicted upon your children. In every child's mind the parent must and should be an image of two good parents. Your future conduct with your children will be helpful if you will follow these suggestions:

1. Do not poison your child's mind against either their mother or father by discussing their shortcomings.

2. Do not expose your children to any member of the opposite sex with whom you may be emotionally involved.

3. Do not use your visitation as an excuse to continue arguments with your spouse.

4. Do not visit your children if you have been drinking.

5. Do not visit your children at unreasonable hours.

6. Do not fail to notify your spouse as soon as possible if you are unable to keep your visitation. It's unfair to your children to keep them waiting — and worse to disappoint them by not coming at all.

7. Make your visitation as pleasant as possible for your children by not questioning them regarding the activities of your spouse and by not making extravagant promises which you know you cannot or will not keep.

8. The parents with whom the children live must prepare them both physically and mentally for the visitation. The children should be available at the time mutually agreed upon.

9. If one parent has plans for the children that conflict with the visitation and these plans are in the best interests of the children, be adults and work out the problem together.

10. Always work for the spiritual well being, health, happiness and safety of your children.

DEAR MR. ELLIOT — I deeply appreciate your sending on the "Ten Commandments." In my opinion they are solid and if faithfully followed, should prove beneficial to the blameless victims of broken homes. I applaud you for job well done. — SINCERELY, ANN LANDERS.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Nurses View Slides, Films On Radiology and Pathology

The third of five lectures in the fall series of Nursing Education was held at Belleville General Hospital Education Hall, Monday evening. "Radiological Examinations and Preparation" was clearly presented by Dr. P. G. Loder, Director of the Department of Radiology, B.C.H. Dr. A. Rota, Director of Pathology, B.C.H., discussed "Pathological Tests, Indications, Preparations and Readings." Both doctors were introduced in turn by Mrs. Joan Young.

PREPARATION FOR X-RAY

The nurses watched with interest as Dr. Loder showed numerous X-ray films of the gastro-intestinal tract, colon, gall bladder, bile duct, kidney, bronchil and thoracic, while discussing common X-ray procedures in which nursing preparation is required. He stressed that the area filmed must be free of food particles, gas or fecal matter which tend to distort the true picture. X-rays showed that fecal matter we gas in a healthy intestine resembles cancer tumors. It is therefore essential that an effectual laxative or enema be given the evening prior examination to ensure a completely empty intestine.

USE POLAROID FILM

The doctor stated that one of the recent advances in radiology is the use of Polaroid film. With this film, X-rays can now be taken in the operating-room during an operation and be developed ten seconds later.

Dr. Rota began by saying that laboratory tests are only aids in assisting the doctor to diagnose a patient's condition. Mimeographed sheets with 21 names of tests were distributed, containing space for taking notes.

The pathologist clarified how various functions within the body can be detected in urine and blood specimens. From urine specimens, interpretation can be made about bone marrow destruction disease of blood pigment, calcium in the blood, various types of kidney functions, liver function, free hydrochloric acid in the stom ach, functions of hormones and diabetes as well as various other types of diseases. From blood specimens, readings indicating clotting time, liver function, heart impairment, infection, diabetes and numerous other diseases.

EARLY DETECTION

Several slides were then shown on "cytology." Early detection of cancer of the cervix can now be determined before a tumor can be seen by X-ray, and before any physical symptoms appear. Cancer cells will show up in a "smear" specimen as having a larger and denser nucleus as well as being enlarged and irregular in shape, in comparison with normal cells.

Dr. Loder and Dr. Rota were both thaked in turn for their enlightening discourses by Mrs. Margaret Hutt. Refreshments were then served by the student nurses.

These nursing educational lectures are sponsored by the Community Nursing Registry each Monday evening for the next two weeks. Next Monday, Dr. W. S. Totten will speak about "Radio Active Isotopes in Clinical Medicine."

Any graduate nurse interested is urged to attend.

What causes BACKACHE and how Dodd's Kidney Pills may help

One widespread recurring form of discomfort is what is commonly called backache. One frequent cause of backache can be traced to sluggish kidney action. This condition often may result in irritation of the urinary system, followed by backache and tired feeling.

Based on a formula introduced over 70 years ago, Dodd's Kidney Pills stimulate the kidneys to help overcome the irritated condition, and so bring relief from the backache and tired feeling. Dodd's Kidney Pills are available at any drug counter in the blue box with the red band. The important thing to look for is the name. You can depend on Dodd's. 25

I own a wine cellar

(And we live in an apartment!)

No matter what I whip up for an evening meal, I've a wine on hand to make it mean something. Stew will do—if there's chilled DuBarry Sparkling Vin Rosé on the table. And just taste what Manor Claret can do for hamburgers. Manor Sauterne for fish and chips! And my whole cellar hardly cost the price of a box of good handkerchiefs.

74 Sherry An appetizer wine, most popular in Canada. Serve with hors d'oeuvres, and the soup course.

74 Port A delightful dessert wine. After dinner, with snacks, with cheese — perfect!

Manor St. Davids Sauterne Chilled, it does wonders for white meat of any kind—fish, fowl or pork—and salads.

Manor St. Davids Claret Canada's most distinctive "wine of the country". Ideal with steaks, hamburgers, red meat of any kind.

Mazel Tov A rich "kosher" wine. Delicious—appeals to everyone.

DuBarry Sparkling Vin Rosé An "anytime" wine that's light and tingling on the tongue. Serve before, during and after any meal at all.

Successful Living

Fortunately, Fortune Will Not Come True

DEAR DORIS — Our health class is doing projects for class discussion. My group's topic is "The Escape Mechanisms From Our Emotions." Could you send us some information on this subject? — STUDENT.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR STUDENT — It would take a whole library to do the subject justice. Since I only have a few lines to give it, here's the general idea:

From the day you were born, you've been reacting to something or somebody. When what you did worked, you did it again. When you were frustrated, you tried something else. The thing that succeeded tended to become your habitual response.

We call these responses defence mechanisms, because by using them we defend our personalities against insecurity, fear, anxiety. Some are good; some, used too much, start us on the road to mental maladjustment.

Common ones are: Identification (imitation), rationalization (making a seemingly reasonable excuse), introjection (unconscious absorption of ideas from others), compensation (making up for a drawback by doing well at something else). There are others. Ask your librarian to point you in the direction of psychology.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — Do you believe in fortune telling?

I had my fortune told quite a few times and each time I was told that the boy I go out with now will be my future husband. Well, he certainly acts funny. I see him about once a month. He seems to love me when he is with me, then he goes off and forgets about me for weeks.

I have been going out with him going on three years now. He has never bought anything. Not even a Christmas card does he send me. I buy him anything I think he likes.

I love this boy. I would like to leave him sometimes, but I just can't. Do you think my fortune could be true? — CONFUSED.

* * *

DEAR CONFUSED — No. Fortunately for you.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — My husband and I have a friend who is celebrating 25 years of priesthood. I would like to know if it is proper to send him a gift. If so, what kind?—DESPERATE.

* * *

DEAR DESPERATE — Not only proper but the friendly thing to do. What kind? What does your husband like? A fishing rod, hammer, socks, cuff links? Priests are human, have hobbies, wear clothes—even civilian ones, in off times —may love music, books, birds.

If you don't know his hobbies, consider a merchandise certificate redeemable at the most convenient Catholic book store. He might even need a brand new Sick Call Outfit, after 25 years of parish work.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I have been married one year and I am now having an affair, with another man. I love my husband but this other man seems to satisfy me more. I am beginning to like this other man very much and don't know what to do. My husband does not know what is going on. — WORRIED WIFE.

* * *

DEAR W.W. — Nor should he! It shouldn't happen to a husband.

You will show your true colors now, by how you handle this; whether you indulge your urge for excitement or have the good sense to honor your promise of just one short year ago.

Your love for your husband can grow into something highly satisfying, if you will let it. But not while you are carrying the torch for someone else.

* * *

Confidential to WORRIED SICK — What you fear could not possibly result from what you say happened. Your own worry could cause the symptom you describe.

Susanna's Family Fare

NO NICKS

Dear Susanna: Runs in nylon stockings are almost a thing of the past with me since I started washing them in my own special way.

I put them in a plastic bag with mild soapy water and squeeze and rinse them the same way — this avoids nicks, snags, and pulled threads. The water can also be used quite hot which seems to tighten up the threads, and the stockings last longer. — Mrs. G. Miller

Nylon stockings when cut in small pieces are also excellent for stuffing small pillows to relieve pressure on a sprained, broken or sore limb. You can cut the covering, just the right size and shape to fit the contour of the bone or joint that needs a soft resting spot.

Many resourceful gals use stockings for making handy throw rugs too, and if anyone would like the instructions for the dying, braiding and sewing technique these rugs require, just let me know. I think the multicolor round ones are particularly attractive as gifts or for selling at a church bazaar. "Impress all your friends with the fruits of your labours; braid a gay rug for a sale or a neighbor!" — Susanna

LITTLE BOY BLUE

Dear Susanna: One bleak, rainy afternoon when time was hanging heavily on my little family and me, I made the suggestion that we all go into the kitchen and make gingerbread men.

Now everyone knows that even very grown up grownups can't resist the appeal of these comical little fellows — so of course my suggestion was greeted with great enthusiasm.

We used little silver balls for the buttons, and each one designed a mouth by using the handle end of a coffee spoon to indent the dough — some smiling some sad. For the eyes we hit on the idea of using a breakfast cereal that has the general outline of little xeros; but there are so many variations in the shape and size that you can have a barrel of fun. Press them well into the dough, and when they are baked the finished product is delightfully bug-eyed.

The children thrilled at doing the designing (we still make them this way) and I can tell you that quite often they resemble "Peanuts" or our favorite comic strip. — Madeline Roberts

I hope you told them all the story about the one that got away — you remember, the gingerbread boy who always sang "Catch me if you can!" and nobody could. — SUSANNA

U.C.W. Meeting

AIKENS' U.C.W.

Mrs. E. Kells was hostess for the October meeting of Aikens' United Church Women. The president opened the meeting.

A life membership certificate of the United Church Women was presented to Mrs. Murney Jeffery by Mrs. K. Jones. This was given to Mrs. Jeffery by her aunt, Miss Louise Rush of Toronto. Mrs. H. Hamilton presented her with the pin and wished God's richest blessing in all her work. Mrs. Jeffery with mixed feelings made a gracious reply.

A committee was selected to arrange for the banquet to be held at the Masonic Temple. Several invitations were read to attend banzars

A pot-luck supper will be held in the hall on November 7th, the proceeds for the new wash rooms.

Mrs. G. Wilman conducted the Bible study, taken from the book "God and His Purpose." After the introduction, prayer was given. Mrs. K. Bush led in a litany of Thanksgiving. Mrs. Perry Hamilton and Mrs. O. Pearson read different portions of scripture. Mrs. G. Wilman led in a discussion and closed the meeting with prayer. Mrs. Wells and her assistants served lunch and a social time was spent together.

Readers' Friday Column

QUESTION:

Will you please send me a recipe for a Madeira Cake — Mrs. John N.

ANSWER:

My recipe for Madeira Cake is old, so early this morning I made a Madeira cake to be sure the recipe is good. It turned out to be very similar to the one my grandmother used to make in the Twenties.

FRIDAY

Dinner Menu

Main Course Rich Clam Chowder; Boston Brown Bread; Individual Salads of Endive, Tomatoes and Green Peppers with Roquefort Dressing; Chilled Compote of Pears; Rolled Oats Cookies (see Wednesday); Coffee.

MADEIRA CAKE:

6 medium-large eggs, 1 1-3 cups plus 1 tablespoon granulated sugar, ¾ cup soft butter, ½ teaspoon lemon extract (or grated lemon rind), 2¼ cups sifted but not sifted all-purpose flour, ½ teaspoon baking soda, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ cup finely shredded citron peel or candied pineapple (optional — see note).

Beat eggs 10 minutes or until thick and foamy. Gradually beat in sugar. Beat in butter and lemon extract. Sift together the unsifted flour, baking soda and salt. Add finely shredded peel or candied pineapple (if used) to flour mixture and fold into batter. Line standard loaf pan with wax paper, butter it, turn in batter. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for one hour or 70 minutes. Cool on cake rack. Cake will crack on top and when sliced, the edges are all golden brown. Chill and slice thinly.

NOTE:

The peel or pineapple has a tendency to fall, but is a good addition. So use your own judgment.

QUESTION:

An old English lady remembers that, on a visit to Canada, she had enjoyed "Canadian Buttermilk Bun Loaf". She would dearly love to have the recipe. — Mrs. J. W. L.

ANSWER:

BUTTERMILK BUN LOAF:

1 package granular yeast, 1-3 cup lukewarm water, 4 cups sifted all-purpose flour, 1 2-3 cups buttermilk, scalded, ¼ teaspoon baking soda, 2 teaspoons salt, ¾ cup sugar, 4 tablespoons melted butter, divided (see below).

Soak the granular yeast in the lukewarm water 5 minutes. Scald, then cool the buttermilk to lukewarm. Add the yeast liquid to it with the soda, salt and sugar. Mix, then beat in half of the flour and 3 tablespoons of the butter. Now add remaining flour and knead by hand on floured board until dough is velvet smooth. Return to greased bowl, turn dough over so all sides are greased, cover and let rise until doubled in warm place. Knead for 1 minute on floured board, shape into 2 even long rolls 3¼" in diameter. Cut each into 12 even pieces. Roll pieces in remaining melted butter and arrange, touching in, two well-buttered 8 x 8 x 2" pans. Let rims of pans- Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. until doubled and above Fahr. 15 to 18 minutes.

WHAT'S YOUR E. Q.?

Some people just can't resist calling attention to themselves even when someone else presumably has the floor. Are you a scene - stealer? For instance:

1. Do you interrupt with distracting comments when another person is telling a story

2. Do you laugh and talk when entertainment is going on?

3. At a lecture, do you draw attention to yourself by fidgeting in your seat and constantly talking behind your hand?

4. At a meeting, do you talk so long and loud the chairman doesn't get a chance to lead the discussion or express her views?

5. Do you insist on helping your hostess to such an extent she almost has to take a back seat at her own party?

6. At the theatre, do you make so much noise it distracts not only the audience but the actors on the stage?

7. Do you "take-over" the after dinner entertainment by insisting others do what you want instead of courteously deferring to your hostess?

8. Do you always steer conversations so that they centre on you and your interests?

9. Do you monopolize a guest of honor to such an extent that you end up sharing the spotlight with her?

10. In short, do you try to be so much the life of the party that it gets to be a bore?

TURNS OVER ZONE FLAG — Brig. Alfred James Tedlie, (right) 48, of Montreal, turns the Nicosia zone flag over to his successor Brig. Norman E. Wilson-Smith of St. Catharines, Ont. Brig. Tedlie directed the operations of more than 3,000 men of five nationalities in the UN peace force on Cyprus. (CP Photo)

Big Jim: Keeper of Peace

By RUSSELL PEDEN

NICOSIA (CP) — The first time Big Jim Tedlie came to Cyprus, nearly 10 years ago, he was here to get a rest from a peace-keeping mission in Indochina.

The second time, it was his job to help maintain the peace on Cyprus itself.

Late last April, as the structure of the United Nations force in Cyprus was taking shape, Brig. Alfred James Tedlie, 48, of Montreal, was appointed to command the central Nicosia zone, largest on the island.

For six months he directed the operations of more than 3,000 men of five nationalities—nearly half the entire UN force —until Brig. Norman E. Wilson - Smith of St. Catharines, Ont., took over Oct. 21.

Big Jim is what his staff officers and area commanders called him, and the nickname fits.

With his abundant energy and his six-foot-two, 195 - pound physique, he looks as though he could still be carrying a football in the Big Four or a puck in intercollegiate hockey.

He has done both of these things and more, but it's like pulling teeth to get him to talk freely about his achievements in either sport or the army.

The composite picture put together by his staff officers is that of a perfectionist commander who does not spare himself and expects the same effort of his subordinates.

EYE FOR DETAIL

"He leaves nothing to chance, and this is why he's a good commander," says one. "He was interested in every detail of his zone, no matter how small."

One such "detail" showed up in his dealings with Greek- and Turkish-Cypriot local commanders. He dealt with all local leaders on a first-name basis, and greeted each with a hand shake and a few personal words.

Another was his practice of carrying packages of candy in his jeep and passing them out to Cypriot children as he made his rounds.

His area commanders appreciated his reluctance to interfere with their handling of a local situation.

"He doesn't look over your shoulder," one said, "but he sets a high standard and expects everyone to live up to it.

The brigadier's day started before 8 a.m. every day of the week, when he swam two lengths of the pool at zone headquarters with one of his staff officers. It usually ended at about 11 p.m.

The physical conditioning that makes it possible to keep up this pace started a long time ago, but Tedlie himself scorns his athletic background.

PLAYED FOR MONTREAL

"I've wasted a lot of time in the army fooling about with sports," he says.

"They tried to make a PT instructor out of me, and I coached some soccer and track. I was out twisting muscles when I should have been getting myself qualified as a small arms instructor or something."

He is vague about his own athletic achievement, but recalls the date of his last Big Four football game.

"It was in November, 1939, against the (Ottawa) Rough Riders," he said. "But turned if I can remember the name of the Montreal team." It was the Royals.

That last football game took place just two months after Tedlie joined the army as a trooper with the 17th Duke of York's Royal Canadian Hussars.

He served during the Second World War with several armored corps units in Britain and on the Western Front, and returned to Canada in 1946 as a lieutenant - colonel, after a year of occupation duty in Germany.

He attended the army staff college at Kingston, Ont., and staff jobs followed in rapid succession.

One posting he remembers with special affection was his appointment in 1947, at the age of 30, to command Fort Churchill in northern Manitoba.

"Since then I've always had a keen interest in northern affairs," he said.

"The government sent me to the Royal Military College school to study geography, and I later ran the army's specialized warfare section in Ottawa."

Tedlie went to Indochina in August, 1954, where he spent a year as deputy military adviser with the Canadian delegation, and helped supervise the withdrawal of French troops from Hanoi. Canada was one of the countries asked to supply observers to the truce that followed the defeat of the French by the communist Viet Minh.

On his way home to Canada, Tedlie spent a week's vacation in Cyprus.

He became chief of staff at Prairie Command headquarters in Winnipeg in 1956, commander of the armored corps school at Camp Borden, Ont., in 1958, and armored corps director at headquarters in 1960.

In 1961 he became director of combat development and last December, promoted to the rank of brigadier, he was named commander of the 2nd Infantry Brigade group at Camp Petawawa, Ont.

One of the things the brigadier liked about his Cyprus posting was the "tremendous scope" offered by the wide areas the UN must cover.

"This brigade covers 840 square miles of territory, and the usual brigade area is much smaller than that.

"Another professional advantage of working here is the polyglot organization. You get an insight into the workings of other armies that you wouldn't get in an ordinary Canadian job."

Tedlie is due for a respite in Canada before taking up new duties in December as commander of the 4th Canadian Infantry Brigade in Germany.

If Cyprus was a welcome posting, how does he feel about going back to Germany?

"I'm as happy as a cat with a saucer full of cream. And you can quote me."

Will Lay Cornerstone of Church

PICTON (Staff) — The new Picton Free Methodist Church on East Main Street, Picton, will be officially opened this Saturday, November 7th, when the cornerstone laying ceremonies are held at 3 p.m.

Taking part in these ceremonies will be Mrs. Veta Eaton, one of the church's first members, and Mrs. Amanda Hegadorn who joined the church in 1905.

Rev. T. J. Riddall, minister of the Free Methodist Church, advised that Bishop C. V. Fairbairn, who was to have attended the dedication services, will be unable to attend due to the illness of Mrs. Fairbairn. Mayor and Mrs. H. J. McFarland will be in attendance to extend greetings from the town and to take part in the ceremonies.

Special services continue on Sunday, with Rev. Dr. Stonehouse, Area Superintendent, as speaker and the Watertown quartet giving special music. The official opening ceremony is at 2.30 p.m. with Dr. Stonehouse also speaking.

NO CRIMINAL CASES

PICTON (Staff) — The fall Supreme Court sittings will begin on Monday, Nov. 9th, at 2 p.m.

The Hon. Mr. Justice d. L. Ferguson will preside. There are no criminal cases to be dealth with, however, the grand jury is legally required to be in attendance. Jury cases which will appear on the docket include three motor vehicle damage actions: Wilkie Orr, plaintiff, versus Herbert W. Brooks, defendant; Charles and Mary Todd, plaintiffs, versus Adrian J. Droag, defendant. R. E. Nourse, Q.C., Picton, will act as solicitor for each of the plaintiffs.

LOAD LIMIT REDUCED

PICTON (Staff) — The Department of Highways announced Wednesday morning that the load limit of the Glenora Ferry will be reduced by half beginning Thursday. Officials say the load limit will be cut from 20 to 10 tons until further notice. The reason for reducing the weight limit of vehicles is the low water level of Lake Ontario. The two ferries operating between Adolphustown and Glenora have many times come close to hitting bottom near the shore while docking. Similar action was taken last year when the water level was down.

MR. MELTZER ON REAL ESTATE
"What's Your Problem?"

By BERNARD C. MELTZER

Individual ownership of property has its satisfactions and rewards. It carries with it, however, obligations: debts, damages, lawsuits, etc.

Should incurred obligations exceed his equity in the property, recourse can be made (for redress) to seize the property owner's personal belongings or any other assets he may have — savings, other property, stocks and bonds, his automobile, etc.

Corporate ownership of property limits the amount of liability to the amount of an individual's investment and as such is a protection. This is not to say that each person should form a corporation to buy his home, but if he plans on professional, or semi-professional investment, as our correspondent does, it is a good idea.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: A group of my friends and I (we are all professional or business men of moderate means) are forming a real estate investment club, putting aside a small amount of our incomes each month into an investment pool. We are planning at first to deal in some of the more speculative types of real estate with high potential returns — as we feel we can afford to risk the money we are saving.

Following your column has alerted us to the hazards as well as the possible gains of real estate investment. We have heard that professionals in real estate have ways of insulating themselves against extra-ordinary personal liabilities. We would appreciate it if you would advise us amateurs how to protect ourselves. — Dr. A. F.

ANSWER: Your Investment Club should provide you with excitement, pleasure, possible good profits, and an education in real estate. You are wise in being alert to the hazards, however, as this will save you from getting part of that education the hard way.

It is advisable for a group such as yours to form a corporation and operate as a corporate entity — especially as you conceive speculative investments. This will limit each individual's liability. Should the club members hold title as individuals and sign notes, mortgages, etc., as such, each one would be individually, as well as jointly liable for all debts and obligations. The corporate form of owners hip avoids this and limits liability to the amount each has contributed as investment.

It will be necessary for you to engage an attorney to form the corporation, draw up the by-laws, allocate the stock and design the structure of the company's operation.

• • •

Dear Mr. Meltzer: Our savings, a small inheritance, and a bonus will get from the sale of our present house, will permit us to buy a new house either for straight cash, or with a very small mortgage. Some people think this is foolish. We asked bankers and brokers what they thought we should do, and have received so many conflicting opinions I'm still not make up our minds.

Some say it is better to own free and clear as quickly as possible. Others have pointed out advantages in getting the largest mortgage possible so we can invest the money in something else — and collect the interest on our income tax.

What would you advise? — M. T. T.

ANSWER: The confusion arises because the analysis hasn't been carried far enough. For the individual, there are two basic classes of real estate: his own home; and other real estate he may own for investment purposes.

In my experience it is nearly always advisable for the individual to attain complete ownership of his home as quickly as possible. One's home is his security in many ways: physical, emotional and economic. Any financial advantages that may be possible by having a large mortgage must defer to this feeling of security.

In investment real estate (by contrast) it is best to hold as large a mortgage as possible, making only the minimum payments required. The surplus income from the property can be used to buy additional real estate — with similarly high mortgages.

The reason this is done is that investment return on real estate is usually much higher than the cost of money (i.e. the interest rate on the mortgage.)

The financial leverage obtained through the compounding of maximum indebtedness and maximum income return, is how real estate fortunes are made (and form the basis for their possible vulnerability).

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I am planning to build a house and was prepared to get a construction loan, and then, after the house was built, a long term regular mortgage. This as you know, means I must pay for two settlements, two title charges, legal fees, etc.

I was resigned to this until the other day when a friend of mine told me he heard of cases where people got a single mortgage loan to cover both the construction and permanent mortgage.

Can you tell me if this is possible, and how it is done? — C. M. W.

ANSWER: Normally, when building a house, first a construction loan is arranged, and the permanent long term mortgage is available only after the house is complete. In such cases, as you point out, two settlements are required, and two sets of charges must be paid.

Although far less common, it is possible to get a single construction - permanent mortgage loan from one lender. This combination mortgage has the financing features of both. It is granted for a long term (i. e. 20 years), and the first regular monthly payment is deferred for one year, or until the house is completed — which ever comes first. The mortgage fund is not paid out to the builder in stages, as the house is built.

Not all lenders handle this type of mortgage, and those who do may charge a small premium for inspections (usually more than offset by savings in settlement fees.) If this is the kind of mortgage you decide on, it will be necessary to canvass the lenders in your area to find one who grants them.

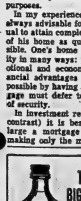
Dear Mr. Meltzer: I have cleared up some obligations, have some extra money, and would like to start paying off my mortgage faster. I notice, however, that each month part of my payment goes for the principal and part for interest.

The bank never gave me anything as a gift, and I have the feeling if I double up on my payments I will be paying them extra interest they aren't entitled to — as well as paying on my principal.

Is there any way I can get around this? — A. F. T.



ANSWER: Your fears are groundless. You pay interest only on the unpaid balance of your mortgage. The remainder of the payment is applied to reduce the principal. Therefore, the amount taken out for that month's interest charge is based on the total still owed, and is the same no matter how large a payment you make that month.

For example, if your monthly payment is $100 ($50 for interest, and $50 to reduce the principal) and you make two payments that month, the bank will collect only $50 for interest. The remaining $150 will be applied to the principal. In addition, in the following month you will be figured on a smaller unpaid balance, the amount deducted for interest will be less, and the extra payment had not been made.

Mr. Meltzer welcomes your letters and comments. Unfortunately he is unable to enter into personal correspondence with readers, but will attempt to answer as many letters as possible through his column.

matter of Mr. Thompson's trip.

He said Mr. Thompson was asked to go to Africa by the government to perform duties for which he is "eminently qualified." These include the possibility of helping to gain the release of 36 Canadians who are among 500 persons being held in hostage by Congolese rebels in the Stanleyville area.

"The government is using every method at its disposal to protect these Canadians and, indirectly, others, from the regrettable and dangerous position in which they have been placed." Mr. Thompson knew the area and "some of the personalities involved."

The Social Credit leader would visit Prime Minister Kenyatta of Kenya, whom he knows and who was a key figure "in efforts to ensure the safety of our people in The Congo. He would also confer with the Ethiopian government, and Mr. Thompson had a "very special relationship" with that country's emperor.

Both Kenya and Ethiopia are members of the commonwealth commission of the Organization of African Unity.

In addition to this assignment, Mr. Thompson would meet officials of the Organization for African Unity, and go to Cairo in connection with the recent conference of non-aligned states.

The debate, lauched in an uneasy mood Wednesday and resolved with some gaiety on Thursday, tapered off to a less explosive finish, even punctuated with humor.

Creditiste Leader Real Caouette noted that minister without portfolio, Paul Martin, was late in Africa. He wondered whether he was selling bumper stickers of the government's three-leaf flag design. "Over here he sells pulp wood, over there he says too much. The honorable member for Red Deer (Mr Thompson) does not say anything."

Fulton

posed the leader's criticisms in caucus.

Mr. Fulton—here for a speech to the Empire Club on Confederation problems—told reporters he had nothing to do with the leakage of the memorandum and was "extremely concerned" that material written by him in a helpful vein had been used in an attempt to embarrass Mr. Diefenbaker.

While he said he maintains a keen interest in federal politics and has been under "considerable pressure" to return to that field, he fended off questions as to whether, and when, he might be in the running for the party leader's job.

"There's a leader of the Progressive Conservative party and as far as I'm concerned, he's my leader and the question of a new leader does not arise," he said.

He added, of his possible return to the federal arena:

"That's a decision I have to make. But it's not for the present time. I have a very sizeable job to do in British Columbia."

Mr. Fulton's group has no seats in the B.C. legislature.

"Of the conspiracy" suggestion, he said he had written his memo comparing the present constitution - amending formula with the Conservatives' "Fulton formula" of 1961—which failed to get approval of all the provinces—and had sent copies to Mr. Diefenbaker and about 10 MPs. He had given their names to Mr. Martin privately.

"A pretty poor way to run a conspiracy," he said, adding that the under stood Liberal headquarters had obtained a copy and circulated the document.

Sunday School Lesson
Everyone an Evangelist

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Every once in a while a man of action who makes an outstanding evangelistic impact on his day. Such persons include Dwight L. Moody and Billy Sunday. Undoubtedly, the best-known evangelist today is Billy Graham. Hundreds of thousands have heard him preach. Millions listen to his broadcasts. He has probably preached to more people than any other person in the history of the world.

We can't all be Billy Grahams but every person can witness to his faith. In fact, if a person has a faith that is satisfying to him, he is almost duty-bound to share it with others. The Psalmist said, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so." (Psalm 107:2) And Paul's advice to Timothy applies to laymen as well as clergy when he said, "Do not be ashamed then of testifying to our Lord." (II Timothy 1:8).

One reason a person should try to pass on his faith is because others have passed it on to him. In fact, if a person's first ones to do so were his parents. Timothy, for example, had known the teaching and godly example of his mother and grandmother. (II Timothy 1:5). Their influence made him receptive to Paul's message.

Parents can transmit things they give their children, parents should seek to give them the finest evidence of a religious faith. But this obligation does not stop with the family circle. One does not have to be ready to show all others that he is not ashamed of his faith. Religious faith is the greatest heritage we possession. One should never be ashamed to let others know he has this priceless gift.

FIRE KINDLES FIRE

Obviously, before one can kindle the fire of faith in another's heart, it must be burning in his own heart. This is why Paul had charged Timothy, "Rekindle the gift of God that is within you." (II Timothy 1:6 R S V) Paul had done his part. The rest was up to Timothy. He must, by his own willingness to witness, fan the coals of faith in his own heart.

In Colonial days, if one's fire went out, there were only two ways to relight it. One was to borrow a live coal with sparks caused by striking flint against steel. The other was to borrow some burning embers from a neighbor's fire. In the New Netherlands there was a law against carrying live coals through the dry woods except in a covered container. Our problem is that we have the fire of faith contained all too well. Others hardly know it is there. We are shy about speaking to them about the things of the spirit.

The Uniform Sunday School Lesson for November 10 is "An Unashamed Witness" II Timothy 1:3-8.

Timothy was timid, too. Paul had to admonish him that "God did not give us a spirit of timidity, but a spirit of power and love and self-control." (II Timothy 1:7 RSV) It is easy to be apologetic about one's religious faith. We say that others will think it is a sign of weakness, or unscientific to believe in something one cannot prove. What men need is the spiritual power that comes from a confident faith. Paul had such a faith. He could say, "I know whom I have believed and am sure that he is able to guard until that Day what has been entrusted to me." (II Timothy 1:12 RSV)

In certain areas, people used to greet each other by saying, "What do you know for sure today?" There are some things a person of faith can know for sure. Millions can say, "I know for sure that the God has helped me in time of sorrow, or temptation. It has given me moral courage and guidance, and assurance, when faced by the thought of death."

POWER TO LOVE

The power of religious faith is not power to dominate. As Paul says, it is the power to "love" and exercise "self-control." Love and self-discipline are the themselves alongside humility, the power of religious faith in a person's life. This is why Paul says God has "called us with a holy calling," which Moffat translates, "to a life of consecration." (II Timothy 1:9)

Men can witness to their faith in God with their lives, and, as opportunity presents itself, with their lips. After Henry Ford had purchased a large insurance policy, a close friend, who was an "Why didn't you buy it from Jonathan agent, asked him, me?" Mr. Ford answered, "Because you never asked me." Perhaps thousands stand outside the church and a life of faith in the Resurrection because no friend has ever invited them in. A word of faith spoken in love can kindle a similar fire in the path to faith and inner assurance and peace.

fibreglass shroud did not separate from the spacecraft. The shroud is designed to protect Mariner III from aerodynamic heating during the upward push through the earth's atmosphere, then was to eject.

Jack N. Mitchell, Mariner project director, said early today the shroud may not have separated cleanly and somehow "hung up" on the space craft. He said this was not certain but that tracking data indicated there was a distinct possibility.

A fuller evaluation of the data should pinpoint the exact cause of the failure in time to make a correction for Mariner IV launches said. He added this may take several days.

Soviet Union pursued and pursues the policy of peaceful coexistence.

It is the warm wrist of the Soviet people that "the presentrelaxation of international tension should continue," he said.

Besides Chou, the gathering included the premiers of East Germany, Poland, Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria, North Viet Nam and Mongolia.

Albania, China's tiny Balkan ally, is the only Communist country not represented.

EXCHANGE VIEWS

There has been no announcement that a summit meeting was to take place but Soviet officials confirmed the Communist leaders will exchange views on all major issues facing the Communist movement. The most important problem was the feud between Russia and China.

Chou's agreement to come to Moscow was seen as a major development indicating that moves to heal the Sino-Soviet rift must have started immediately after, or possibly just before, the Kremlin's invitation to remove Khrushchev from power.

Chinese leaders today extended their "sincerest and warmest" greetings to the new leaders of the Soviet party and expressed hope the two estranged Communist giants would "draw closely" to oppose the common enemy—the United States.

Chinese imperialism headed by the United States tremble before our strong unity . . . and powerful, unbreakable friendship between the Chinese and Soviet peoples," said the Chinese message to Moscow, broadcast by Peking radio.

The message was telegraphed from party chairman Mao Tse-tung, President Liu Shao-chi, Marshal Chu Teh and Premier Chou En-lai to the Soviet leaders.

Construction Roundup

By ANDY TURNBULL

CITY HALL

Bellerive city hall employees will be warmer next week, and the building will no longer smell of coal gas, according to city manager J. R. Reynolds. The boiler in the basement, which reached two weeks ago, will be replaced over the week-end.

Steam pressure was reduced, for fear of an explosion, after the boiler cracked and second floor offices have not been getting enough heat. To be first floor employees have been having it rough too — small, attributed by some to coal gas, when the furnace was working.

New equipment is at the hall now, and one of the conditions under which Charles Hyde and Son got the contract is that the new equipment be installed and put in operation over the week-end. The new furnace will run on coal, we did the old one, but it can be converted to oil.

ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER BUILDING

Front entry to The Ontario Intelligencer building was poured yesterday afternoon, and more work was done on the stairbricking the building Monday morning. The blocks are already laid up to the penthouse on the roof, to house elevator and air conditioning equipment, and Bellerive contractor Abe Dick is using one gallon-hopper of a fork lift truck at the job. It can hoist about a ton of bricks 36 feet above ground level. With a ramp up each side of the building, it has been delivering concrete blocks and mortar direct to the men working on the pent-house.

Quinte Roofing has the roof just about finished now, and Andre's own men are installing the flashing around the edge. Stark plumbers are working on the site now, also Acme electricians. Forms are being prepared from the east wall now and forms are being built for the second floor. Superintendent Nathan Carr hopes to have the building closed by Christmas.

NEW HYDRO CRANE

Foley Foundry and Machine has a new Hydro Crane now, bigger than the first. The new one is 15 tons capacity (the old one takes 12 tons) and a boom with a jib in place and a total reach of 80 feet, (the old crane carries the jib on the carrier, and has a total reach of 70 feet). Costing about $53,000 to buy, the new crane will supplement the service (the smaller one will be) Mounted on a slightly faster carrier; it will probably take most of the heavy-range jobs. There are two of only four hydro-cranes between Toronto and Montreal, in the area, the rest 75 miles or so between jobs.

One small hitch—Foley's machines are normally blue but they wanted the crane in a hurry so they took what they could get—red. Finkle Machine gives its equipment red and yellow. Foley plan a repainting as soon as possible, but that may not be within the next month or so.

NEW LIQUOR STORE

Window frames were installed Wednesday on the new liquor store on Station St., and glass may be in by the end of the week, according to superintendent Don Jackson. Additions are in now except one that cannot be finished until after the air conditioning ducts are installed. Acme Electric is working on the site now, installing electric heat and the parking lot will be finished before snow falls if all goes well. Plans are to have the building finished and open in time for the Christmas rush.

NORTHERN ELECTRIC PLANT

Looks like it's all over but the shouting at the new Northern Electric plant on Adam Street. Shell of the building is finished, electricians are installing the lighting and inside doors are being hung. Suspended ceiling is being installed in the office section. Air conditioning ducts are being installed, hot air heaters are in and landscaping of the outside has been started. No plumbing in sight yet.

SMITH TRANSPORT GARAGE

This is going to be one solid building. Four passageway door frames and one wicket frame are on site now, all made. That's about the same stuff most car frames are built of. There is still some block to lay on the job and men are still working on the grease pit and making forms for the floor. Plans are to pour floor today.

ARGOSY TRANSPORT

Looks like most of the footings are in now at the new Argosy Transport terminal, across the street from Smith's. Blocks and cement are in site.

ADAM ST. WATER MAIN

Lightfoot Construction men have more than 1,200 feet of the Adam St. water main in. The line will go a total of about 1,900 feet from near the Smith Transport terminal to the new Northern Electric plant. Norm Lightfoot says his men laid 600 feet of the total on Tuesday alone. Some rock at the beginning slowed the job and there's more rock to go through at the end. About now, they're probably going through a bit of a swamp, near the end. Had they not laid 600 feet on Tuesday alone, they'd probably be going through a bit of a swamp, near the end. Had they not laid 600 feet on Tuesday alone, they'd probably be going through a bit of a swamp, near the end.

RAY, HEDGER MOTORS

Ray Hedger hopes to pour the floor in the garage floor of new auto-sales centre next week, and he should have the rest of the small glass around the back and in the doors in place by tomorrow night (Friday). After the glass the big front windows are supposed to be in place by next Wednesday, and the glass will follow soon after. Heating is supposed to be installed next week, by Harvey Frid of Belleville.

AMODEO'S

Seiger Vandermeer hopes to pour the rest of the concrete foundations next week at the new Amodeo supermarket on North Front Street. Basement floor is next, then Wilson's will come in to place the pre-cast first floor. Side and back of brick and concrete block can start then.

STRADWICK'S

Seneca Steel put roof decking on this week at the new Stradwick's store on North Front Street, just south of College. Composition finish goes on next week, but the contract or had not been decided as went to report. Rex Bridge is in charge of the job for McCallum and Bridge, subcontracting for Kemp Construction.

DIXIE LEE CHICKEN

McCallum and Bridge are preparing the site now for a new take-out fried chicken centre on Coleman St., just north of Bridge. To be called "Dixie Lee Fried Chicken," according to Rex Bridge, the firm will be in a building designed to look like an expensive house, with the chicken sales in the centre and offices at each end. Plans are to open during December.

HOLLOWAY ST. CHURCH

Shell of the building is finished now for the Holloway St. Church extension Quinte Roofing was at work on the site last week, but there is no power or plumbing in the building, no glass in place and the inside doors are not yet hung.

UNION CARBIDE

Part of the aluminum siding is in place now on the Hexagon plant at Union Carbide and some more machinery is in place now. Ken Fox put on a bit in Wednesday, with a crane and crew from Central Bridge. No doubt it makes sense to chemists and the like, but the inside of the building now looks like a layman as though Union Carbide is building one whale of a big coffee-maker. If they run a pipe from the new plant to the firm's canteen, we'll know for sure.

ONE GOLLYWHOPPER of a fork lift truck is being used to lift blocks and material to men working on the Ontario Intelligencer building. It can hit about a ton 36 feet straight up.

Watchmaker Slain, Wife Seriously Hurt

TORONTO (CP) — An elderly watchmaker was slain and his wife seriously injured late Thursday in a ritual-stabbing attack by a man who invaded their downtown apt.

Howard Emerson Ison, 37, of Toronto was arrested shortly after and charged with capital murder.

Police said a man grabbed one of several rifles in the shop — a combination second - hand and watch-repair store — and killed Michael Pagnello, 70, and his 57-year-old wife.

Police said the couple was trying to fight off a holdup man. Both husband and wife were beaten about the head with the rifle. Mrs. Pagnello was reported in fair condition in hospital.

"HEXA" PLANT at Union Carbide is being aluminium clad now, and some of the machinery is being moved in. In the picture, a Central Bridge crane directed by Ken Fox is used to fit a funnel-like whatchamacallit.

Republicans Are Already In Struggle Over Direction And Leadership of Party

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Barry Goldwater said of himself and his advisers on the day after Tuesday's election, with the wreckage still being counted from coast to coast: "I can't think of any major mistake we made."

They made some beauts. But Goldwater does not seem to consider his defeat by the presidential campaign, one of the worst in American political history, a repudiation of him or his philosophy of government.

He says he does not think the conservative cause has been hurt, indicates he intends to remain in it and fraternally blames part of his defeat on those Republicans who didn't work or vote for him.

But Republicans are making an agonizing inquest on their election disaster and already are in a struggle over the direction and leadership of the party. None of the party's mistakes was more basic than in misjudging or simply not understanding the interests and thinking of an overwhelming number of Americans, as the election showed. This gets to the root of the struggle.

DISCARDED ON LABEL

Some other Republicans don't share his opinion when he calls himself a conservative. Therefore, an understanding of what conservative label is essential to the party's future. It requires a definition. The dictionary says:

". . . A political party whose characteristic principle is opposition to change in the institutions of the country." This was the closest to describing the party in the 19th century when the government participated little in American life.

But by this same definition Goldwater is not a conservative at all. He proposed drastic and only changing but eliminating many government functions, long accepted by Democrats and Republicans, which have become institutional since over the years of this century.

Through his philosophy he made a major mistake before the campaign began in advocating the elimination of various government functions and programs.

He suggested getting rid of the graduated income tax, selling the publicly-owned Tennessee Valley Authority hydroelectric power project, making social security voluntary, pulling the government out of public housing and power, eliminating farm price supports and many social welfare programs, and cutting veterans' benefits.

LOST NEGRO VOTE

By voting against the civil rights legislation before it even began he lost the vote of most American Negroes. Yet, to win, he needed a big share of this individual he could find.

He was before he was a candidate needed votes that he felt free to make such statements. He considers himself to be a rugged individualist, although he was a millionaire, and endeared himself to the right wing in American politics.

But when he became a candidate in search of votes he could pedalled much he had said before or forged it with vague terms. He made no specifically constructive proposals: cutting taxes and ending the draft.

He made some statements on how he'd handle foreign affairs but he later soft-pedalled them in order to overcome the charge of irresponsibility lacked on him by the Democrats.

He even gave voters cause to question the ability to run the country—just a few weeks before announcing his candidacy, by raising that question himself about himself. In an interview in Marshall's magazine he was quoted:

"Doggone it, I'm not even sure that I've got the brains to be the president of the United States."

RETURNS PARKING TICKET

WINNIPEG (CP) —Police Chief Robert Tait told the Winnipeg Police Commission he received a letter written in heavy French returning a parking ticket issued last week. The letter, translated by a bilingual constable, said in essence: "Keep your English tag." The sender, who lives in St. Boniface, a largely French-peaking city across the Red River from Winnipeg, was told he must pay the fine.

Rebel-Held City Captured By Congolese

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)— Congolese government forces recaptured the important insurgent - held city of Kindu Thursday and liberated 84 Belgians and other foreigners, the national army headquarters said today.

The headquarters said no resistance was reported.

Diplomatic sources here said Kindu airport was attacked by B-26 bombers piloted by Cuban exiles with rockets and machine-guns before the ground forces advanced on the city.

The diplomats were surprised the insurgents offered no resistance to keep Kindu, which leaves the way clear to the insurgent heartland in the east and to their capital city of Stanleyville.

The army said that apart from Belgians, 140 Greeks, Indians and Pakistani merchants who also were in the city when the insurgents took over control there have been liberated by the advancing forces.

A government force of about 2,000 troops and 200 mercenaries has met little resistance in its offensive which started last week-end from Kongolo, about 150 miles south of Kindu.

Each day runs fresh protests of rot in the fabric of the rebel "Congolese People's Republic" in Stanleyville. Now there is fear that the revolt's collapse will bring barbarism and darkness in its wake.

Born of frustration and discontent, the rebellion so far has

SPORTS

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

An old hockey friend, Jack Roxburgh (Liberal-Norfolk), apparently tiring of parliamentary haggling over the national bunting, tried to obtain a switch in the argumentative menu the other day.

Jack introduced a bill that would declare hockey the national game. And at present sets you a dollar that he got across-the-floor backing by another hockey buddy, Mike Weichel (PC-Waterloo South).

This charge of the puck brigade was met by a counter attack by Robert Prittie (NDP-Burnaby, Richmond) who claimed lacrosse was the national pastime because it originated in the country and not invented, like hockey, by upstart whites from Britain and France tired of their cricket and croquet.

Rory said there was nothing in the statutes designating lacrosse as the national game, but Mr. Prittie quipped this was an oversight on the part of the daddies of Confederation.

If origin swings the pendulum, lacrosse gets the nod by as many years or centuries as you can conjure up. Those bloodgrouse with the cross-shaped heads the Indian sagwoses waved at Columbus when he stepped ashore, were original lacrosse sticks.

The chiefs and young bucks of the tribes played lacrosse, a name given by the French since the sticks resembled a priest's "crosier."

The Indian game was played by a limitless number of players in the wide-open spaces. The first period of limitless time, was spent in cracking skulls with the sticks. In the second period the survivors started playing the game—and scoring the goals of the era.

Modern hockey has an affinity for lacrosse in the skull-cracking department, but this is held to a minimum by people called referees who uphold the laws set down by people called owners, then face attacks by people called coaches and managers.

If popularity swings the pendulum, lacrosse would finish an also-ran nationally. Ten or more years ago, hockey would have got the nod by a wide margin. During that period other sports have caught the eyes and wallets of Joe Fan.

Hockey has slipped over the past decade. Today, the National League, minor pro loops and junior "A" leagues hold the attendance spotlight. Fans have deserted the once-proud amateur junior "B" and senior brackets in droves. Today, the majority of these clubs are struggling for existence.

Nation-wise what percentage of hockey fans get the chance to see professional hockey "live?" The National does not extend west of Toronto. Pacific coasters get a chance to see the western league in action. The vast majority of eastern fans see their National League favorites in action on the living room's old squareface.

Curling is making an exceptional bid for mythical "national sport" honors. From the minors' viewpoint I don't think it will replace hockey, but it is a sport that out west, curling has taken over and it taking over from hockey in schools—and in the smaller centres.

The game is growing in popularity by leaps and bounds. Curling clubs and rinks like mushrooms are springing up all over the place. And it is significant fact that the teen-age groups are taking to the game—young fellows who might be playing hockey.

And don't pass up professional football when you are voting for the "national sport." Twenty years ago it was just another game that attracted passing attention. Today it is a sports institution climaxed by the Grey Cup Spectacular that brings millions of dollars to a day of thrills, the host city a couple million bucks, not to mention a countless number of hangovers.

Soccer has gained in popularity, in fact, become professionalized over the past few years. But despite the almost-star efforts of the "world sport" aficionados, I doubt if it will even reach the national sport of Canada entry list.

Although it has deteriorated in some places, softball still holds a high place in participant and spectator sports. The Ontario Amateur Softball Association reported an all-time high record in 1964. Upper brackets baseball in some parts is showing improvement.

Golf is showing a sharp increase in popularity. Clubs all over the country report increased playing membership. Tournaments are on the upgrade and national organizations are readying for a record year in 1965.

Basketball never a marked spectator sport in the country, trudges along at the same level. Track and field prodded by secondary schools, clubs and imported coaches is making a strong bid for bigger and better public recognition. National and International meets attract large crowds but the average "Joe on the street" does not show much interest in local exhibitions.

The national sport? You name it. Anyone for tiddley-winks?

STRYKER DIES

RED BANK, N.J. (AP) — Sterling (Dutch) Stryker, who pitched briefly for Boston Braves and Brooklyn Dodgers, died Thursday after undergoing surgery. He was 68. Stryker appeared in 20 games for the Braves in 1924, winning three and losing eight. He worked in two games for the Dodgers in 1926 with a 0-0 record. Much of his career was in the International League.

Wings Whip Blues' Zoom Into Lead

Mikita May Miss Sat. Game

CHICAGO (AP) — Centre Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks, leading scorer in the National Hockey League, may miss the Hawks' game in Montreal Saturday because of a bruised shoulder and sprained ankle, coach Billy Reay said Thursday.

Mikita was injured in Boston Sunday and aggravated a shoulder injury Tuesday in a game against New York Rangers.

Montagnards To Play In Europe

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Montagnards of the St. Lawrence Senior Hockey League are to make a 12-game European tour this winter, it was announced Thursday.

The Monties, Eastern Canadian Allan Cup finalists last season, plan to leave just after Christmas. The tentative schedule for the three-week tour calls for games in Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Austria and Czechoslovakia. Final arrangements are yet to be completed.

By The Canadian Press

Hopefully third, likely fourth, possibly fifth and even last.

Those were the pre-season predictions of Detroit Red Wings' destiny in the 1964-65 National Hockey League race. Even coach Sid Abel hoped, realistically, for no better than second or third.

"I feel this is a better club than last year," he said during training camp. "I'll be very disappointed if we don't move up a spot or two from fourth."

But look where the Red Wings are today: First place.

Detroit, riding a seven-game unbeaten streak, climbed into the top spot Thursday night with a 3-1 win over New York Rangers while Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs dropped one point behind because of their 3-3 tie in the only other game played.

SCORES ON POWER PLAY

A power play goal by Normie Ullman in the second period put the Wings ahead to stay as a crowd of 10,763 cheered Detroit to its sixth win in seven games.

Floyd Smith had opened the scoring for Detroit in the first and Bruce MacGregor bagged his fourth in three games for Rangers in the third. New York's Dick Duff tied the score briefly in the second.

Ullman's winner came 44 seconds after Rangers' Vic Hadfield had been sent off for high-sticking. He shot the puck over goalie Marcel Pallie, who had failed to block Alex Delvecchio's close-in drive.

Detroit outshot the Blueshirts 22-23 as wings goalie Roger Crozier made 22 saves to maintain his hot average. The rookie backstop has allowed just 13 goals in nine games.

In Montreal, Canadiens defenceman Jean - Guy Talbot scored in the second period while Toronto was changing lines to tie the score 2-2 and Montreal struggled with the Leafs for the remaining 22 minutes and 23 seconds to forge the fourth tie this season for both clubs.

OPENS SCORING

Montreal opened the scoring in the first period when Henri Richard, returning to the lineup after missing the first three weeks with a groin injury, scored while Bobby Pulford was in the penalty box for the Leafs.

Rookie Ron Ellis got that one back near the end of the frame with his sixth of the year. Carl Brewer sent Toronto ahead at 11:32 of the second.

But the Leafs got caught flat-footed at 17:08 as they scrambled to change lines while the Canadiens rushed down. Talbot scored from close in on a quick three-way play with Bobby Rousseau and Claude Larose.

Terry Sawchuk made 30 saves in the Leafs net while Charlie Hodge stopped 25 for Montreal.

The game may not have produced a better team, but it did decide one point; television of week - day home games costs steeply into the attendences.

DRAW BIG CROWD

A whopping crowd of 13,231 watched this encounter. Last season, when Montreal's home games against the Leafs were called locally, attendence hovered around the 13,000-mark.

Detroit now has 13 points, one more than both Toronto and Montreal. New York remained tied with Chicago at nine points after losing their second straight game.

Montreal and Chicago will be the only two teams to play twice this weekend. The Canadiens play host to Chicago Saturday while New York visits the Leafs. On Sunday, Montreal is at Detroit and Chicago is in Boston.

Stan Mikita, leading scorer with 13 points, may be lost to the Hawks for the weekend games. A bruised shoulder and a sprained ankle have made him a doubtful starter, says coach Billy Reay.

The Big Seven

By The Canadian Press

Roger Crozier and Ron Ellis have been campaigning for the National Hockey League rookie award in opposite fashion.

Crozier is keeping pucks out of the net while Ellis is putting them in.

The young Detroit goaltender has captured a lot of attention to date by shutting out three shutouts and allowing just 13 goals in nine games.

Ellis, a left wing, set wing-er up from the Toronto Marlboros, is the league's current highest scorer. He bagged his fourth two goal game of the year Thursday night to move within two goals of leading Bobby Hull.

The point launched the Youngster into a tie with the Chicago star for top spot in the scoring race and the ladder at eight points. Chicago's Stan Mikita, also Thursday night, leads with 13 points.

Lacrosse Bill Declared 'Insult'

TORONTO (CP) — A private member's bill before the House of Commons to declare hockey Canada's national game was described Thursday as an "insult" and "definitely out of line" by Canadian Lacrosse Association officials, who are prepared to fight it down to the wire.

"It is the duty of MPs to give this thing a second thought and shelve it before it receives second reading," Ed Blair of Streetsville, Ont., president of the Canadian Lacrosse Association, said at a press conference.

Another private member's bill to make lacrosse the legal national game also is before Parliament.

A week ago Jack Roxburgh, Liberal member of Parliament for Norfolk and a past president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, introduced a bill that would make hockey this country's national game. He couldn't find anything in the statutes designating lacrosse as the national game.

A few days later Robert Prittie, New Democratic Party MP for Burnaby-Richmond, countered with one that would make lacrosse the legal national game.

The lacrosse people are determined to beat Roxburgh.

Jim Nasby, Port Credit, Ont., president of the Ontario Lacrosse Association, says a letter has gone out from his association to Prime Minister Pearson, honorary president of the Canadian Lacrosse Association since the mid-1950s, and to Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker.

"The letter pointed out our objections to the proposed bill," Naish said.

Lacrosse officials unveiled for the first time a flag they figured would prove that lacrosse is Canada's national game. It was a replica of one that appeared in the Canadian Magazine and it carried the words "Our country and our game," was dated July 1, 1867, and showed two lacrosse sticks and the banner of the then National Amateur Lacrosse Association.

An article in the magazine said in part:

"... And on the day on which the different provinces of Canada were united into one grand Dominion July 1st, 1867, the game lacrosse was declared as the national game of the new Dominion.

"We hope to have this flag shown right across the country to prove that lacrosse is our national game," writes Blair.

"The lacrosse bill is the one thing should be put through Parliament."

Lacrosse officials, who said that their sport is 100-per-cent amateur and has a registration of more than 30,000 players in Canada, received the support of Wilfred Pelletier, executive director of the National Indian Council in Toronto and a member of the Wikwemikong Indian reserve in Manitoulin Island.

"Any contributions made by Indians in the past have not received credit," Pelletier said.

"This (lacrosse) is something we are very proud of—a game we played before anybody. I'm speaking for the National Indian Council and we back the lacrosse associations 100 per cent."

Orr Sparks Generals

By The Canadian Press

Someone should tell Bobby Orr that 18-year-old defencemen aren't responsible for most of the team's scoring in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

But Orr probably wouldn't take the advice seriously anyway because he's been a big goal producer with Oshawa Generals since joining the club two years ago at 14.

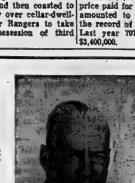
The dead - eye defenceman again proved his capabilities around the opposing nets Thursday night, scoring twice and helping on three other goals as the Generals edged Hamilton Red Wings 6-4.

The victory moved Oshawa into a first-place tie with Niagara Falls Flyers. Both have 14 points, two more than second-place Toronto Marlboros.

WHAT A PERIOD!

In other action Thursday night, Peterborough Petes collected eight goals in the first 20 minutes and then roasted to a 10-0 victory over cellar-dwelling Kitchener Rangers to take over sole possession of third spot.

Danny O'Shea also fired two goals for Oshawa, while teammates Bill White and Bill Bannerman added one each. Real Lemieux, Gary Doak, Nick Libbett and Bart Crashley replied for the Wings.



It took Fredericton - born Danny Grant just 33 seconds to score his first of two goals as Peters crough walloped the Rangers. Gary Monahan, Andre Lacroix and Mickey Redmond also fired two goals each for the Petes, while Bill Flager and Leo Thiffault got the others.

Kitchener visits Niagara Falls and Montreal Junior Canadiens visit Toronto tonight.

Quinte Hockey League

Tyr-Haar Danbers whitewashed Rossmore 6-0 while Saco and Horlocks split points with a 3-3 tie in Quinte Hockey League games last night.

Danbers scored three times in the first period, all three goals coming from R. Jeffrey, made it 4-0 on A. Ruttan's goal in the second and added a pair by D. Moore in the third heat.

R. Pointer, Ruttan and Moore also picked up assists. The winners also got the lion's share of the penalties. There were three majors and a game misconduct dished out in all.

In the tie tilt, Horlocks broke a scoreless game by moving ahead 2-1 in the second period. D. Forsythe fired his second goal of the contest to tie it for Saco in the third. A. Deline helped on most Forsythe markers. D. Hallam on the other.

D. Stewart and R. Fleming were the Horlock scorers. Bud Hill had an assist. Each side has five penalties in this one.

Juniors Defeat Picton

Belleville "B's" will be gunning for their second consecutive victory over the Picton Merchants in tonight's junior hockey exhibition here.

The "B's" whipped the junior "C" Merchants 10-5 in their first exhibition start in Picton last night. Merchants had several previous starts under their belts but Belleville dug in early and opened up a quick 3-0 lead.

Picton cut the lead to 3-2 by the end of the first period and it was a 5-3 contest, in favor of the "B's", after two periods.

Tonight's return game, at Memorial Arena, is scheduled for 9:00 o'clock.

The Eastern Junior League schedule, published in this paper today, officially opens next Wednesday with Belleville at Trenton.

Belleville manager Jim Mattice said this morning he was "quite happy with our team's performance considering it was the first game."

"The one line, with Grant Hagerman, Jim Rutherford and Bill Lang carried most of the scoring punch last night but when we get our lines set, I think our power will be more evenly distributed than last year," he said.

He also praised newcomer Gordie Potts, a defenceman from Stirling, and added that "goalie Bob Moon played well enough but he will get better as we go." Matthews said that three of the five Picton goals were deflected past Moon by Belleville players.

Rutherford was red-hot in sparking the 10-goal attack. He scored five times while Grant Hagerman chipped in with three more goals.

Other Belleville marksmen were Jim Woodbeck and Bob Doyle.

Stampeders Favored Over Saskys

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Roughriders' vaunted defence surged in the second half of the Western Conference season.

The big question as the Riders prepare to take on Calgary Stampeders here Saturday in the first game of the total semi-final series is whether the defence can stiffen up for the play-offs.

The Stamps' potent offence demonstrated what it could do when the Saskatchewan defence wasn't up to par by whipping the Roughriders 42-0 in the last regular-season contest between the clubs.

Riders' head coach Bob Shaw said the deterioration was due to a rash of minor injuries, now largely healed. Nonetheless, Stampeders are 14 - point favorites in Regina to win the two-game total-point series.

The Stampeders will enter the semi-finals with a clear edge in at least one offensive department — place - kicking. Defensive back Larry Robinson has kicked his way to the league scoring title this year, while the Riders are relying on tackler Reg Whitehouse, who lacks the power and consistency.

Both Dobbs and Shaw feel their clubs are "up" for the series.

FALONEY UNHURT

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Tiger - Cat quarterback Bernie Faloney went through practice Wednesday after being involved in an automobile accident in which he was shaken up.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Com mi s s i o n e r Ford Frick warned the major league baseball club owners Thursday they must arm his successor with the same autocratic powers enjoyed by the first baseball commissioner in order to restore public confidence and to maintain the honesty and integrity of the game.

Taking his strongest stand since he became titular head of all baseball, the 70-year-old former newspaper man told the owners in blunt terms that baseball today is in danger of losing its public image.

In almost merciless fashion, Frick charged that many of baseball's present troubles are of its own making.

"So long as the owners and operators refuse to look beyond the day and the hour; so long as clubs and individuals persist in gaining personal headlines through public criticism of their associates; so long as baseball people are unwilling to abide by the rules which they themselves make; so long as expediency is permitted to replace sound judgment, there can be no satisfactory solution," he said.

"Baseball people must face up to these problems; must settle on a sound and satisfactory policy, and must then unite in seeing that policy through to successful conclusion."

Frick, who became commissioner in 1951, has announced he will retire from his $85,000-a-year job at the end of the present seven-year term in September of next year.

Frick's speech highlighted the opening session of the three-day summit meeting which the commissioner described as "the most important and potentially the most far reaching meeting that has ever been scheduled by baseball's high hierarchy."

Specifically, Frick asked the owners to restore the authority given to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis when he was re-elected baseball's first commissioner in 1921.

Landis was given wide authority to impose penalties for what he judged to be an act detrimental to the best interest of baseball.

The Tracks

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—The McNab, rangy seven-year-old son of Ellis Hanover, set the pace throughout Thursday night's $1,300 feature at Garden City Raceway and won a good 2½ lengths up on the field at the wire.

Owned by Wilfred McNab of Maple, Ont., The McNab led from start to finish as Ensign Dillon made a valiant effort to stay within reach. However, the 10-year-old chestnut from the Edward and Arthur Stables of Oakville won't need to be content with second.

Armbro Express owned by the Armstrong Brothers of Brampton, grabbed third spot at the three-quarter pole and hung on in the face of a late challenge by Shooting Par from the Merrilea Farm of Ottawa.

The summary: Time of The McNab and Ensign Dillon was worth $71.50 as a quinella, second highest of the St. Catharine meeting.

However, the long payoffs were highlighted by a $771.50 daily double on Patsy Peters 3rd in the first and K.W.B. in the second.

First Fight 'Stupid'

PLYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Sonny Liston said Thursday he's learned his lesson from a "stupid" first fight with Cassius Clay and will approach the middle rather than try to take the long route to him.

Clay lifted Liston's heavyweight boxing title last February in Miami.

"I beat myself," Liston said of his title loss. "I had something Clay wanted. I should have let him come and try to get it."

Liston was asked by reporters if the show wasn't on the other foot now and if he might not have to go and take what Clay had.

"No, I don't think so," he replied. "He has to stop running some time. The referee is entitled to tell him to fight, isn't he?

"I'm bitter about losing the title but not enough to lose my head this time. As soon as I catch Clay he'll know I'm there."

Wolves Rely On Manager

LONDON (Reuters) — The question British soccer fans are asking this week is whether 51-year - old Andy Beattie, new "caretaker manager" of Wolverhampton Wanderers, can save his team from dropping into the second division.

Wolves have not been out of the first division for more than 20 years but Beattie will have to work quickly if his rescue operation is to succeed, for bottom - of - the - standings Wolves need a sensation recovery to get out of their present trouble.

They get their first chance under the Beattie regime Saturday when they play at Stoke City.

Stoke, without its 49-year-old genius Stanley Matthews, now practically retired, is on the verge of the danger-zone itself, and is unlikely to give anything away.

WILL BE ANXIOUS

At the other end of the standings, Manchester United will be anxious to keep its top position it took over from Chelsea last weekend.

Its only doubt for Saturday's home clash with Sheffield Wednesday is injured Nobby Stiles, who has been a great force in left half. If he is passed fit following an x-ray United is certain to be strengthened.

United, incidentally, now is even money to win the league title.

Meanwhile Chelsea, United's nearest rivals, welcome back its Scottish youth international, George Graham, to inside forward in its attack against Sheffield United Saturday. English international Bobby Tambling moves over to the left wing to make room for him.

STRICT ON CARS

VERNON, B.C. (CP) — The mobile car-testing station currently being used here is rejecting about 60 per cent of all vehicles passing through it. One car rejected came straight from the show room.

Bauer Is Top Manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Hank Bauer, whose Baltimore Orioles almost nailed down their first American League pennant in a torrid battle with New York and Chicago, was named the circuit's Manager of the Year today. He won by an over whelming margin over Al Lopez of the White Sox and Yogi Berra of the victorious Yanks.

Bauer drew 53 votes from the 83 baseball writers participating in the annual Associated Press poll. Lopez was named on 19 ballots and Berra on eight. Bill Rigney of Los Angeles Angels collected the other three.

"I'm very flattered," Bauer said of his Kansas City home. "This is quite an honor."

Bauer took over a fourth-place club from Billy Hitchcock last season and directed it to first place at the All Star break. The Orioles were No. 1 for most of the season's second half, finally succumbing to the Yanks, who came on strong to win by one game over Chicago.

The Orioles finished third, two games behind New York and 12 in front of the fourth place Detroit Tigers.

Braves Get Offer From Atlanta

MILWAUKEE (AP) — John McHale, president and general manager of Milwaukee Braves, testified Thursday that Atlanta has offered the baseball club a "satisfactory" stadium lease, but that he has no knowledge of any written agreement with the southern city.

McHale was the only witness on the opening day of a hearing before U.S. district Judge Robert E. Tehan on the Braves' petition to have a federal court take jurisdiction of Milwaukee County's legal fight to prevent the team from moving to Atlanta.

"A lease has been offered us but, to my knowledge, no one has signed it," McHale said. "They have sent us a lease and it's acceptable."

The Braves, restrained under a temporary state court order from moving to Atlanta, claim federal courts should have jurisdiction of the case on the grounds of "diversity of citizenship." The club is a Delaware corporation and contends its executive offices have been maintained in Chicago since Oct. 5 before recessing until today the judge told McHale there was an "underlying question" whether the move of the executive offices to Chicago was not made to evade supervison. McHale said it was not.

The Trots

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Wally B Byrd, a five-year-old gelding, held off a three-horse stretch to win the feature event at the Western Fair Raceway Thursday night, a pace for a $500 pu se.

Coming from behind the gate a little rough, Wally B Byrd, took over in the backstretch and stayed in front despite a threat from Prince Killean in the stretch.

Wally B Byrd paced the mile in 2:01 1-5 and, as usual, with the crowd of 2,357 persons, returned $4.20.

Fastest time of the night went to Sunday Chief in the eighth, pacing the mile in a fast 2:00 1-5 and the four-year-old mare paid $4.70.

TORONTO (CP)—Frank Merrill Jr., one of Canada's leading trainers, is making a concerted effort at the final thoroughbred meeting of the year in Canada at Greenwood, to win back the title from Jerry Meyer.

At the start of this 36-day meeting Merrill trailed Meyer for the national title, but he's been gaining steadily.

Thursday the native of Brantford saddled three winners—Noble scora in the fifth, Princess Sadi in the seventh and Falls Way in the eighth. He now has 27 winners in 110 racing days.

Merrill's first winner, Noble Score, paid a whopping $58.40 after running down the final Award and Armadan in the final yards. Princess Sadi, recently shipped back from Narragansett Park, paid $3.80 while Falls Way paid $20.50.

Jockey John LeBlanc, the hottest rider in the saddle at the start of this meeting, rode two winners as did George Gordon. Gordon also rode two Wednesday.

Hornets Snap Aces Home String

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At home or away, Quebec Aces still are tops in the American Hockey League—but they may be human after all.

Pittsburgh Hornets fired three second-period goals pas. Quebec goalie Gump Worsley thursday night, erasing a 2-0 deficit, and hung on for a 4-3 victory that snapped the Aces' home - ice unbeaten streak at six games.

It was only the second loss for the Eastern Division front-runners in 13 starts.

Ted Hampson, Zellio Toppazzini and Yves Locas brought the Hornets from behind and goalie Hank Bassen held off Quebec's furious third-period rush. Jim Mikson scored Pittsburgh's fourth goal while Ray Larose, Guy Gendron and Red Berenson connected for the Aces.

The Hornets are third in the Western Division, three points behind Rochester division leaders.

Western Hockey

SAN FRANCISCO (CP) — San Francisco Seals, Western Hockey League tailenders who demoted their coach Monday, staged a hockey blitz at the expense of Vancouver Canucks Thursday night for a 9-4 victory and their third win of the season.

Seals, who handed Nick Mickoski's coaching duties to general manager Frank Selke in an effort to put life back in the team, staged a four-goal outburst within a reply in the second period. It was their first game with Palle coaching.

Wayne Connelly was the big gun with three goals. Tom Thurlby, Gerry Odrowski, George Swarbrick, Charlie Burns and Dallas Smith got one each. The other goals came from Mickoski, now playing assistant coach.

Buddy Boone led the Vancouver attack with two and Billy McNeill and Bruce Carmichael got the others.

As Have Poor Scoring Record

Riders 9-Point Favorites Over Larks

By JOE DUFUIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Frank Clair of Ottawa Rough Riders would be the first to admit that Montreal Alouettes defence is a force worthy of the highest respect.

But you need to score points to win games, and the Alouettes had the poorest offensive record in Eastern Football Conference this season

That's one good reason why second-place Riders are nine-point favorites in Saturday's sudden death semi-final playoff at Ottawa.

Alouettes scored only 197 points in their 14 games, 5-1 points less than last place Toronto Argonauts. Ottawa had the second-best offence with 313 points, a mere 16 points behind champion Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

In a bid to do something about it, coach Jim Trimble has been spending a lot of time with his offensive units at work-outs this week. He has been concentrating on a few plays, 'the ones that worked best against Ottawa earlier in the season.

WANT IT PERFECT

"We want to get those plays, those variations of those plays, down as perfect as it's possible," said assistant coach Bob Scollege. "We want to be able to do well what we do best."

At workouts, all four backs—Nat Pendleton, George Dixon, Rene Riopelle and Jerry Fields —were running in a kind of perpetual motion with the ones on timing.

By keeping the backs in motion, Alouettes hope to keep the Riders from their difficulty decoding which one is going to be sprung loose on the ball. Both Dixon and Craddock are break away threats, each commanding attention on every play.

Dixon has been slowed all season by injuries, and the fact that opposing teams were keying on him on every game.

He missed last Sunday's game against Hamilton with a hip injury and dislocated thumb but has been scrimmaging well all week.

BORK TO START

Rookie quarterback George Bork will start the game with Pendleton, Jim McKean also a rookie, waiting in the wings.

Several Alouettes will be going both ways —among them Dick Walton, Bob Minihane, Billy Ray Locklin, and Gerry Fields. Others such as Harold Cooley, John Baker and Billy Wayte, will see spot duty both ways.

Tackle Dick Dalatri, back Bowen and Vernon Cole are likely to sit out the game.

Training In Hull

Chuvalo Meets Unknown

BY TOM MITCHELL

HULL, Que. (CP) — George Chuvalo, Canadian heavyweight boxing champion and ranked fourth in the world, intends to battle his way to a shot at the big title.

The solidly built Toronto boxer showed his stuff Thursday in a training session for his bout Monday against Don Warner of Philadelphia in a 10-rounder at Hull Arena.

Warner is unranked by the World Boxing Association and Chuvalo would take a severe drop in the WBA ratings if Warner should upset him Monday. So why the fight?

"If I can't beat a guy like this I don't deserve a chance at the title," George said in an interview after his workout.

"Warner was ranked in about 1960 or 1961 and has fought some name boys—Alex Mitteff, Brian London."

APPEARS ROCK-HARD

Chuvalo, who went four rounds sparring and appeared rock-hard at 209 pounds, was asked whether he intended to take more matches against fighters such as Warner while trying to get a shot at dethroned champ Floyd Patterson en route to a fight with either Sonny Liston or Cassius Clay.

"That's right," he replied. "You learn something from every fight, believe me."

Chuvalo said he wouldn't mind a fight a month as sort of topping-off for the spartan training schedule he has maintained for the last seven months.

What might be his next fight? "If this one goes well, I might meet McNeeley here in Hull," Tom McNeeley is a Boston heavyweight.

Chuvalo, never knocked down in 28 pro fights, has a hot streak going for him with nine wins in 10 bouts in the last two years. The big one, of course, was early last month over New Yorker Doug Jones, the victory that boosted him to fourth in the WBA ratings.

Koufax, Chance Are Tops

NEW YORK (AP) — Los Angeles pitchers Sandy Koufax and Dean Chance captured major league earned run titles in 1964, Koufax winning his for the third straight time with the lowest National League ERA in 31 years.

Koufax, the Dodgers' ace southpaw, posted a 1.74 mark, figures compiled by The Associated Press disclosed Thursday. The lowest previous National League figure was achieved by Carl Hubbell of the New York Giants with 1.66 in 1933.

Chance, the Angels' right-hander, topped the American League with a 1.65 average, the lowest in that circuit since the Yankees' Spud Chandler finished at 1.64 in 1943.

Koufax, sidelined for the final six weeks of the campaign with a sore arm, gave up 43 earned runs in 223 innings while posting a 19-5 record. He also was the ERA leader with 1.88 in 1963 and 1.54 in 1962 and the first big league pitcher to win three consecutive titles since Grover Alexander of the Philadelphia Phillies, 1915-1917.

Chance's path to his initial earned run crown was made easier by his 11 shutouts, tops in the majors. He won 20 games, including five by 1-0 scores, the latter feat tying a major league record.

U.S. Pro Football

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Charley Tolar, Houston's five-foot-six fullback, who is one of the few men in the world ever to make a living by capping oil fires, needs 41 yards to become a 3,000-yard gainer in the American Football League.

But gaining that much yardage in tonight's Houston - Boston game that kicks off the pro football weekend may prove just as difficult as extinguishing an oil fire.

Tolar has gained his yardage the yard way in five seasons with the Oilers. He's done it in consistent battering at the middle of the line—his longest run is for 40 yards. Besides that, he may never get to run against the Patriots.

Houston quarterback George Blanda almost ignored the running game against Buffalo Bills last week and filled the air with a league record 68 passes. Boston also figures to throw, with Babe Parilli right behind Blanda in the number of passes thrown in the league.

HIS TARGET

Parilli will have favorite target Art Graham, who has been out with an ankle injury, available for the key game. The Patriots, 5-3-1, need a victory to keep up with undefeated Buffalo in the Eastern Division.

The Bills, 8-0, invade New York to meet the Jets while in other Sunday action San Diego Chargers, the Western Division leaders, meet at Denver and Oakland Raiders visit Kansas City Chiefs.

In the National League Sunday, Baltimore Colts, Western Conference leaders, tackle Chicago Bears and Cleveland Browns, leading in the East, take on Washington Redskins. Elsewhere, Detroit Lions meet at Green Bay, Pittsburgh Steelers at St. Louis Cardinals, Dallas Cowboys at New York; Philadelphia Eagles at Los Angeles and San Francisco 49ers at Minnesota.

The big one in the AFL is the Buffalo-New York game in which the Bills, only undefeated team in either league, risk their string. The Jets, who were impressive last week in a 35-14 victory over Houston, have not been beaten at Shea Stadium.

The game matches Cookie Gilchrist of the Bills, No. 1 rusher in the league and his closest pursuer, Matt Snell of the Jets.

Name Pair Boxers of October

TORONTO (CP) — Joey Archer, middleweight from New York, and Paulie Armstead, Los Angeles lightweight, have been named co-boxers of October in the monthly ratings of the World Boxing Association, WBA president Merv McKenzie of Toronto announced Thursday.

Archer was recognized for his defeat of Dick Tiger, former champion from Nigeria. Armstead was honored for his victory over Louis Molina of San Jose, Calif.

Three Canadians were ranked in the listings. George Chuvalo of Toronto was rated fourth in the heavyweight division, Joey Durelle of Baie Ste. Anne, N.B., 10th among the junior middleweights and Dave Hilton of Sherbrooke, Que., eighth among the junior lightweights.

'We Will Talk On Field'-Clair

'We Can Win It All' Says Mr. Trimble.

By BEN WARD

OTTAWA (CP) — "We can win it all," says Jim Trimble.

"Our offence is finally moving," says Frank Clair

One of them is right, but it won't be known until sometime after 1 p.m. Saturday, kickoff time for the Eastern Football Conference semi-final between Montreal Alouettes and Ottawa Rough Riders. It will be played at Lansdowne Park here.

The sudden-death game, to be carried on the CBC's national TV network, will provide an opponent for Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the two-game final series to determine the eastern representative for the Grey Cup classic

Both Trimble, coach of the Alouettes, and Clair, coaching the Riders, have been talking confidently. That's normal for Big Jim but it's out of character for Clair who normally takes a cautious approach to everything.

The other day Trimble let loose a flood of words in Montreal to "prove" that his Alouettes are ready to go all the way to the Grey Cup

His comments were passed on to Frank Clair Thursday who grinned and replied: "Jim's always talking. We'll be doing our talking on the field."

Then, to everybody's surprise the lanky Rider boss kept right on going.

"Our offence is finally moving. We showed that against Toronto. In fact, the (TV coaches) saw enough in the films to convince us that our improved effort was entirely the result of a poor effort by Toronto."

Clair was referring to that 36-0 shellacking his club gave Toronto Argonauts last weekend.

Then he lapsed into his old cautious ways.

"But their defence is tough," he said, talking about Montreal "Montreal must be classed as one of the strongest defensive clubs in Canada. We're confident, though, that our offence will make some scoring possible."

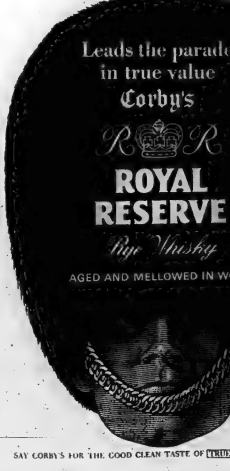
EDGED RIDERS

In their last meeting of the regular season Als edged Riders 23-21. It was a game that couldn't have made any change in the final standings.

"True enough," said Clair when somebody reminded him about that loss. "But this is a different Rough Rider team."

One of those differences only emerged Thursday when it became known that halfback Ron Stewart had been passed up in the voting by sports writers for the outstanding player in the East. The nod went to Toronto's Dick Shatto.

Unable to work out because of rain, Riders spent most of the afternoon fuming about Stewart's lack of recognition. He has had a tremendous year, piling up 867 yards rushing to lead the league and adding 334 yards on pass-receiving.



His team-mates were quick to point out that Stewart, one of the smallest men in Canadian football, also chalked up 238 yards on 10 kickoff returns, did a big job in the blocking department and worked every game despite injuries.

The steam the Riders are working up over this one could mean extra trouble for Als Saturday.

Alouettes refrained from doing any hard-hitting scrimmaging this week, because the players are still sore and aching from the Hamilton game.

Eastern Conference All-Stars

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Kuntz, veteran fullback - linebacker with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, has been voted to both defensive and defensive teams in The Globe and Mail's annual Eastern Football Conference all-star team for native Canadian players.

Kuntz was one of 10 players endorsed unanimously by the coaching staffs of al four league teams. He has been elected to the team fi every one of its nine years of voting, and this year marked the second time in four years that he was chosen for both offensive and defensive roles.

Teammate Pete Neumann, a defensive end who was also selected unanimously, was also up for the ninth time. Defensive backfielders Ron Howell and John Wydareny of Toronto, Ed Learn of Montreal and Joe Poirier of Ottawa were others along with halfback Ron Stewart of Ottawa, linebacker Ron Brewer of Toronto, and Al Irwin of Montreal and tackle Moe Racine of Ottawa.

The biggest surprise of voting was at defensive tackle, where Hamilton's Gene Cappelli and Toronto's Marty Martinello were selected. Ted Elsby, nominated in Montreal as the Alouettes' outstanding player of the year, finished a distant third in voting.

THE TEAMS

Offence — Quarter: Russ Jackson, Ottawa; Halves: Jon Stewart and Whit Tucker, Ottawa, Tommy Grant, Hamilton; fullback: Bobby Kuntz, Hamilton; centre: Norm Stoerbaruth, Toronto; guards: Jim Cain and Merv Collins, Ottawa; tackles: Moe Racine, Ottawa, Dan Nykoluk, Toronto; Ends: Al Irwin and Gino Berretta, Montreal.

Defence — Halves: Care Exelby and Ed Learn, Montreal, Ron Howell and John Wydarany, Toronto. Joe Poirier, Ottawa; linebackers: Bobby Kuntz and Zeno Karcz, Hamilton, Ron Brewer, Toronto; Tackles, Marty Martinello, Toronto, Gene Cappelli, Hamilton; Ends: Pete Neumann, Hamilton, with Don Paquette, Toronto, and Chuck Wood, Montreal, tied for second position.

Racing, who finished second in the Eastern Conference scoring, was selected to handle the place-kicking chores while Berretta was the punter.

The Beatles Have Hour-Long Show Coming up on ABC

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — The Beatles, who have been rather quiet lately even if their fans have not, will be coming back strong on television soon.

ABC, it turns out, signed the Liverpool Mopheads last August for an hour-long special which will be seen Sunday, Nov. 15, at the hour usually occupied by Wagon Train.

The show will be produced by Jack Good, who also produces ABC's Shindig, a pop music show aimed at the young audience.

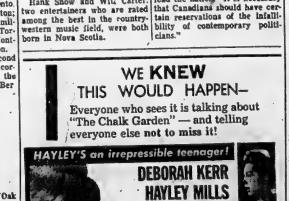
Scarcely had the ABC announcement been made than CBS said it, too, has a special Beatles show on the docket—and will show it two days before the ABC special.

This one is called Around the Beatles, and is an edited version of a motion picture about the singing group during their American tour — but without songs. It will pre-empt The Entertainers Friday, Nov. 13.

HIGHEST RATING

CBS, like ABC, has good cause to know the box office effect of the English group on ratings. The Beatles' first appearance on its Ed Sullivan Show last spring pulled an audience estimated by Nielsen researchers at more than 70,000,000 viewers. It was the Sullivan show's highest rating in its long history.

Meanwhile, ABC sent a telegram to CBS warning them that it had an exclusive contract for the group's entertainment talents.



"There won't be any Beatle singing in our show," said a CBS spokesman, "except maybe in the background as they do on our Sullivan show."

Big Hollywood Question: How Did George Do It?

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—How did George do it?

Hollywood's Liberals were still shaking their heads today over Governor George Murphy danced off with the U.S. senatorship in California.

They had refused to take the ex-hoofer seriously—until election results late Tuesday night indicated Republican Murphy had scored a victory over Democrat Pierre Salinger.

In the beginning, hardly anyone believed Murphy, former stage and screen personality, could make a serious bid for the Senate.

And now he is Senator-elect George Murphy. Gregory Peck, Dick Van Dyke, Janet Leigh, Danny Thomas, John Forsythe, Gene Kelly, Carl Reiner, Ivan Blocker.

GETS DISNEY'S PRAISE

The campaign gave widespread circulation to letters of praise from Walt Disney and Samuel Goldwyn. It was the first time that Disney a longtime Republican, had made such a forthright endorsement of a candidate.

The Murphy headquarters on election night featured some oldtime noted backers: Cesar Romero, Gene Raymond, Wendell Corey, Constance Moore, Freeman Gosden (Amos of Amos and Andy). Also present was Andy Devine, Murphy's Republican co-chairman for Orange County.

The political pundits can cite a number of reasons why Murphy defeated the former presidential press secretary. But the new senator - elect himself touched upon a factor which might support the contention that politics is not far removed from show business.

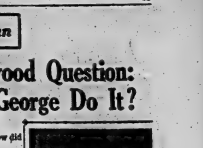
"I think our television debate was the turning point for me," he said. "People got a chance to look at me and at my opponent, and they could compare."

Passes First Crisis

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Basketball player Bob Swaffar passed the first crisis successfully Thursday in an aftermath to surgery to reimplant his severed right arm.

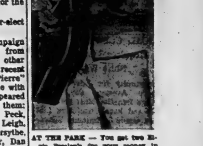
Surgeons said the possibility that the 20-year-old Oklahoma State University athlete will keep the arm "looks promising." However, a hospital spokesman said, the threat of infection and blood clots will remain for another week or two.

Doctors said the first critical period would be the first 72 hours following the reimplantation. That period passed at 8 a.m. Thursday with no complications.



The hospital said the reimplanted arm "looks good and circulation is good."

Swaffar's arm was severed when it was caught in a water extraction machine in the OSU athletic department's laundry Sunday night. The arm was packed in ice, Swaffar was given emergency treatment and sped 66 miles to Oklahoma City, where a team of surgeons reimplanted the arm in a six-hour operation.



Surgeons say perfect function of the arm if all goes well is not to be expected.

ACCENT ON LEADER

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Dalton K. Camp said Thursday night that the Progressive Conservative Party as it is found today in Canada provides in essence not so much a choice of dogma, but a choice of leader. Mr. Camp, national president of the Progressive Conservative Association of Canada, told Acadia University students "it is vital that Canadians have a real opportunity to decide who will lead the nation." It is necessary that Canadians should have certain reservations of the infallibility of contemporary politicians."

On the same program for its first showing Connie Francis and Jim Hutton, in "Looking For Love", tonight's complete shows 7.00 and 8.45. Saturday continuous from 1.00.

INVITES QUEEN

BONN (Reuters)—The Bonn city council has decided to invite Queen Elizabeth II a second unveiling of the West German capital's Beethoven monument—to make up for a 120 year-old "insult" to Queen Victoria. When the statue of the city's most famous son was originally unveiled in 1845, it emerged from its robes with its back to British royalty attending the ceremony.

Point Anne

POINT ANNE — The Tuesday evening euchre club met at the home of Mrs. Arthur Genereux. Winners were: first, Mrs. Dorothy Hart; second, Mrs. Eva MacKay; consolation, Mrs. Nellie Branch.

The community extended a welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Whetherall and family recently moved into the house formerly occupied by the H. Payne family. Mr. Whetherall works in the Research Lab. at Canada Cement Company.

The village had a great number of goblins and ghosts seeking candy and treats on Hallowe'en. A few animal heads hanging from tree limbs were in evidence the following morning but this was the only thing to remind one that strange events had taken place.

TEEN AGE DANCE

The Teen Age Club held a Hallowe'en costume dance in the public school on Friday evening. The costumes were many and varied. There were prizes awarded. Those winning were: Cathy Smith, most original; Brenda Howell, funniest. Boys' most original was awarded to Bill Smith. Boys' funniest went to Ricky Anderson. Everyone enjoyed themselves immensely.

A number of local nimrods have left the district to go north to the north woods.

Mrs. S. Green and children are staying with her mother, Mrs. Stewart DeRushie, while her husband is away hunting.

Look for Some Major Breaks On Canadian-U.S. Issues

By DON HANRIGHT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Look for some major breaks within the next year on outstanding Canadian - American issues.

The prospects have been brightened by the fact that high level consultations between Washington and Ottawa breezed merrily along throughout the U.S. election campaign.

This completely dashed the heavy notion that communication between the two capitals are effectively silenced by electioneering on either side.

That has happened before. That it didn't this time, is believed due to two main factors:

1. The absence of any truly sensitive issues that may have affected any substantial bloc of U.S. voters.

2. Virtual assurance of a Johnson victory.

NO CANADIAN JITTERS

This ho-hum confidence of a Democratic sweep probably accounted for the lack of any visible Canadian jitters over the protectionism of a possible Goldwater administration.

Meanwhile, this is the general outlook:

The talks on automotive trade which continued during the U.S campaign, now can proceed with much less political pressure.

Overhanging the pre-election discussions was the threat of U.S. countervailing duties in retaliation for the so called "Drury Plan" of Canadian tariff rebates, designed to get more Canadian products into total North American automotive production.

But Washington did not invoke the U.S. law that would have produced such retaliation. Now that the election is over, there is much less reason for any precipitous American action, Canadian observers believe.

The continuing talks are centred on the possibility of "free trade" in automotive products, each side dismantling its tariff walls. But that is at best a long term objective requiring legislation on both sides, in the face of some opposition in the industry.

President Johnson does not have such authority. Even the powers Congress granted for the Kennedy-round negotiations are limited to a cut of 50 per cent in U.S. tariffs, and these spread over a four-year period.

There are only two other major issues:

1. Civil airline routes These now are being torn apart for the first time since 1946 Canada wants deeper penetration of its airlines into American territory even in the southern states. It may not get everything it wants but certainly will gain some thing. The Canadian feeling is one of "mild optimism."

2. The U.S. quotas on steel and zinc. This is a hardy perennial imposed when world prices were low to protect American mines. But prices have since risen. A report is expected soon from the U.S. tariff commission and Ottawa hopes for favorable action.

Meanwhile, progress is reported on the attempt to devise economic principles which each country would heed in attempting to avoid actions injurious to the other.

Prime Minister Pearson and President Johnson last year handed this tough, delicate assignment to Arnold Heeney, Canada's former ambassador to the United States, and Livingston Merchant, the former U.S. ambassador to Canada.

An interim report was made to the Canada-U.S. cabinet committee on economic and trade affairs meting in Ottawa last spring. A final report likely will be ready next spring or early summer.

Try To Salvage JFK's Atlantic Partnership Aim

NATO Ministers to Hold Series of Vital Talks

By ENDRE MARTON

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Dean Rusk begins today a series of discussions with European foreign policy chiefs to find out if there still is a chance of salvaging the late president John F. Kennedy's grand design of a transatlantic partnership.

Rusk is scheduled to meet with Joseph M. A. H. Luns, the foreign minister of The Netherlands. Monday he will confer with Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium and Nov. 22 with Gerhard Schroeder, the foreign minister of West Germany.

Other meetings will be held early in December when a number of European foreign ministers are expected in the United States for the convening of the United Nations assembly.

In January, according to reports from London, British Labor Minister Harold Wilson is expected to come to Washington for talks with President Johnson on Allied nuclear policy.

HEART OF CRISIS

Nuclear weapons management and control is at the heart of the crisis facing the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The diplomatic traffic will not be one-way astreet.

George W. Ball, Rusk's deputy at the state department, will meet with Schroeder in Berlin next Thursday and with German Chancellor Ludwig Erhard in Bonn Nov. 16.

The primary object of all these sessions is to find a way to shore up the Atlantic community, now showing signs of disintegration.

A sullen French offensive is the major, though not the only reason for this feverish diplomatic activity, according to U.S. officials.

French President de Gaulle suspects the United States is trying to woo West Germany from partnership with France and he is stepping up pressure for reshaping NATO.

HUNTER DROWNS

LION'S HEAD, Ont. (CP)—William Drake, 27, of London, Ont., was drowned Friday when the boat he and four hunting companions were riding in capsized in Georgian Bay near this community 35 miles northwest of Owen Sound. The other four clung to the overturned boat until a rescue party arrived.

Seamen Given New Contract

MONTREAL (CP) — A new contract for some 6,000 members of the Seafarers International Union of Canada (Ind.) may stop long-term significance for the Great Lakes shipping industry, a spokesman for the board of maritimes trustees said Friday.

The contract was agreed upon by representatives of the SIU and 63 shipping companies at the end of October after five months of talks. Copies of the agreement are being sent to the seamen for ratification, a process expected to take another three weeks.

The proposed contract provides substantial wage increases and the industry's first portable pension plan.

It is the first contract negotiated since the trustees took over and since Hal C. Banks was deposed as president of the SIU. Election, for a new president now are under way.

"But in the long run it may be significant "as the beginning of a union - management relationship in this industry," the spokesman said. Every Great Lakes shipping company except Upper Lakes is represented. Upper Lakes bargains with the Canadian Maritime Union (CLC).

WOULD RAISE PAY

The proposed contract would increase sailors' wages by 8.4 per cent, retroactive to June 1, 1964. In the second year, wages would increase a further 5.4 per cent and in the third year would go up another 5.7. Basic wage for a deck seaman now is roughly $347 a month.

In addition, the industry has agreed to pay time and a half for overtime, for the first time in history.

A portable pension plan is to take effect Jan. 1, 1966 "covering sailors with five years of service and making them a lifetime at 60.

It means that a Great Lakes sailor will be able to ship with a number of different companies and carry his pension with him every time he changes employers.

Price Index Steady

OTTAWA (CP)—Lower food prices offset increases in clothing, housing and other goods and services in October to hold the Canadian consumer price index steady, unchanged from the September level.

The over-all index was, however, up 1½ per cent from October last year.

Over the year food prices rose only fractionally but there were gains of four per cent in prices for health and personal care, and more than two per cent for clothing, housing, and tobacco and alcohol.

The bureau of statistics today placed the October index at 135.6 points compared with 133.6 a year earlier. The index is based on 1949 prices equalling 100.

The DBS index of average weekly wages and salaries was 202.9 in August compared with 194 a year earlier, a rise of more than 4½ per cent.

REPORTS SHIFTS

These shifts in prices were reported by the bureau for the September-to-October period.

Food prices averaged 1.3 per cent to 131 from 132.7 Prices were lower for local fruit, vegetables such as beef, fresh pork, eggs, sugar and coffee. Prices went up for imported fruit and canned pork.

The clothing index was 1.1 per cent higher at 120.7 compared with 119.4 in September. This was mainly due to higher prices for women's and children's coats, and jewelry. Prices were lower for men's shoes and cotton piece goods.

The housing index advanced slightly to 139.3 from 138.9.

Lower gasoline prices were reported in Edmonton and Quebec. This plus a slight drop in interurban bus fares was enough to drop the transportation index to 141.4 from 141.6.

The health and personal care index rose 1.6 per cent to 170.4 from 167.7. One of the main reasons was a widespread increase in doctors' and dentists' fees and scattered increases for prescribed medical care and optical services.

The recreation and reading index advanced to 151.1 from 150.9. DBS reported higher prices for admission to sporting events and for radios, records and bicycles.

Higher cigarette prices in all provinces increased the tobacco and alcohol index to 121.4 from 120.3, a rise of one per cent.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

FRIDAY, Nov. 6, 1964

Defence Minister Hellyer told the Commons during consideration of spending estimates for his department he hopes to announce within a few weeks the navy's shipbuilding program for the next few years.

No decision soon would be made on a new tactical jet plane for the RCAF, the minister added.

Douglas Harkness, former defence minister, said the minister said not enough money was being spent on Canada's NATO contribution.

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) said defence of Europe should be left to Europeans.

Another former Conservative defence minister, Gordon Churchill called Mr. Hellyer incompetent, misleading in claiming defence savings are ungrateful to the militia.

Jean Marchand (NDC—Lac-St. Jean) said Canada's defence policy was unrealistic in saying Mr. Harkness's for manned bomber defence when what was needed was defence against missiles.

MONDAY, Nov. 9

The Commons meets at 2:30 p.m. to debate the Canada Pension Plan's pre-bill resolution. The Senate stands adjourned until Nov. 24.

NEW SERGEANT MAJOR of 39 Brigade, the St. John Ambulance Corps, Ernest J. Reed of Belleville (right), last night received his warrant from Provincial Commissioner Brig. Eric Snow of Toronto. Observers Sceptical About Sino-Soviet Reconciliation

MOSCOW (CP)— Many informed observers here are sceptical about the chances of a genuine reconciliation between Russia and China despite the downfall of Nikita Khrushchev, China's doughty antagonist.

They suspect that the quarrel between Moscow and Peking has gone beyond the point where it could be dissolved by the simple expedient of serving up Khrushchev's political head to the Chinese on a platter.

(In Moscow Friday, leaders of the Russian and Chinese Communist parties met face to face. With Chinese Premier Chou En-lai looking on, Leonid I. Brezhnev, Soviet party chief appealed for unity and for a world conference to deal with the split in Communist ranks.

(Chou did not applaud the call for a world meeting but clapped vigorously later when Brezhnev said Communists have one common goal.)

Until recently it was customary to regard the Sino - Soviet dispute as strictly ideological—abstract polemics between two big Communist powers as to the purity of each other's Marxism-Leninism.

In the last year or so, however, it has taken on the appearance of a straight conflict of national and political interests. This was widely demonstrated by statements that Chinese Leader Mao Tse-tung made to a group of Japanese socialists in Peking this past summer. Mao asserted that more than 500,000 square miles of territory forming part of the Soviet Union rightfully belongs to China.

In the immediate aftermath of Khrushchev's overthrow by Leonid Brezhnev and Alexei Kosygin Oct. 14, there was a lot of speculation that the change would almost automatically mean a rapprochement between Moscow and Peking.

It was Khrushchev, more than the Soviet Communist party as a unit, that the Chinese Communists were in dispute with. To them he was the inspiration and architect of all Russia's deviationist sins. Remove Khrushchev and you removed the basic source of friction.

So went the speculation.

Many Western diplomats doubt that the matter will be as simple as that. They concede that undoubtedly there will be a period of relaxed bitterness while the two sides attempt to compose their differences — and possibly even a show of newfound unity.

Over the long pull, however, this exercise unless one side or the other radically changes its policies for the ingredients of the dispute are still very much alive.

Members Call For Pull Out

By RONALD LEBEL

OTTAWA (CP) — Spokesmen for the New Democratic and Social Credit parties called in the Commons Friday for a large-scale withdrawal of Canadian forces stationed in France and West Germany.

Harold Winch (NDP — Vancouver East) and Marcel Lessard (LC—Lac St. Jean), both members of the parliamentary defence committee, said Canada should shift its emphasis to support of United Nations peacekeeping operations.

They argued that the prosperous, populous European countries now can defend themselves adequately with out Canadian help.

Mr. Lessard said the continued presence of Canadian Army and RCAF units in Europe nearly 20 years after the end of the Second World War is of much greater psychological than military importance.

When Canada's current commitments to NATO expired in two or three years, RCAF squadrons and army units should be brought back home, he said. To do otherwise would be illogical, unjustifiable and would further aggravate Canada's balance of payments deficit.

MAINTAIN NUCLEUS

Speaking on the defence department's $1,325,000,000 estimates for 1964-65, Mr. Lessard said he was not advocating a complete withdrawal from NATO. A nucleus of Canadian officers could be maintained in Europe to help co-ordinate defence policy.

Douglas Harkness (Calgary North), Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre), and Roch Lambert (Edmonton West) and J. Angus MacLean (Queens) said Mr. Hellyer's "propaganda machine" has convinced the country that the Liberals have achieved greater economy and efficiency in the armed forces.

Actually, they said, defence spending has increased under the Liberals and the forces' fighting strength has been reduced.

They criticized the government for dragging its feet in acquiring nuclear weapons, failing to equip the army with modern ships, weakening Canadian contributions to NATO defences and decimating the militia.

Mr. Hellyer said he hopes to announce decisions before long on a naval shipbuilding program, a tactical jet program for the air force and new vehicles and artillery for the army.

Guelph Reformatory School For Crime Says Professor

LONDON (CP)—The Guelph Reformatory is a school for crime for most young, first-time prisoners, a University of Western Ontario sociologist, Prof. W. E. Mann, said in an interview Friday.

The whole system, he said, needs to be changed "from the ground up."

Dr. Mann said he has written a book, Society Behind Bars, in which he hands a publisher, which deals with Ontario's penal system and its failings from observations made while he was a part-time Anglican chaplain at the Guelph reformatory and from interviews with about 40 former prisoners during the last two years.

The reformatory, which is not identified in the book but is distinguishable from the Ontario Jolinville, is too large an institution to properly carry on the work of rehabilitation that is a reformatory's task, Dr. Mann said.

"But what I object to a great extent is that there is no segregation by age," he said. "Young boys of 16 and 17 are associating every day with men in their 30s and 40s and even up to 70 years of age."

"When you mix young prisoners with men older by three or four years and men who've served several terms, it's the older ones who have the most influence."

Dr. Mann spokes of the practice of "lugging," under which young youth "carries" a youth.

"He trains the boy in ways of getting along. The boy in turn may give homosexual favors."

Homosexuality is not a major problem at the reformatory, he said, but is one of the ways in which young prisoners are victimized.

Another is the protection racket — the younger inmates have to pay to avoid being beaten up by older men. To earn the protection money, he said, boys even those whose offence was not thievery, learn to steal cookies, confectionery and "such small creature comforts," Dr. Mann said.

The addition of a canteen for the prisoners would do much to eliminate this, the sociologist said. A prisoners' council in

Russia Parades Show Of Might At Celebration

Brezhnev, New Party Chief, in Limelight

From AP - Reuters

MOSCOW (CP) — Russia today paraded several new rockets including an 85-foot intercontinental missile after Soviet Defence Minister Rodion Malinovsky warned that the Soviet Union will continue to arm itself "with the most up-to-date means of warfare."

The parade of new weapons including anti-aircraft and anti-missile rockets lasted almost a half hour in Red Square before the eyes of top Communist world leaders gathered in Moscow to celebrate the 47th anniversary of Russia's Bolshevik revolution.

Malinovsky blasted the United States for "military ventures" threatening world peace.

His charges were less than 24 hours after Leonid Brezhnev appeared to be seeking a new thaw in the cold war.

Brezhnev, the new first secretary of the Communist party, told a Kremlin meeting Friday:

"The Soviet Union is ready to develop Soviet-American relations in the interests of our peoples, in the interests of strengthening peace."

Malinovsky spoke with Brezhnev at his side.

ONE OF THE BIGGEST

The multi-stage intercontinental missile was one of the biggest ever shown publicly in the Soviet Union. It was more than 10 feet in diameter.

A television commentator called the huge weapon a "younger sister" of the rocket that hurled the first three-man space ship into orbit last month.

Experts thought the missile was a new type of intermediate-range ballistic missile.

The giant rocket made its debut together with new cigar-shaped missiles hidden inside a cube about 20 feet long.

The shorter weapon also appeared to be a long-range interceptor for use against aircraft and ballistic missiles.

USE LIQUID FUEL

None of the weapons appeared to Western observers to be of the solid-fuelled variety.

The latest American Minute man rockets burn solid fuels in the rocket for instant firing. These American rockets are too heavy for convenient launching but are easier to handle than the volatile liquid fuels.

Western observers spotted five new additions to this year's display of Soviet military hardware.

They were two groups of what appeared to be free-flight field artillery weapons, a high-altitude anti-aircraft weapon and two rockets.

Soviet Charge Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Martin has denied a Soviet charge that Canada and other nations are trying to build a "military apparatus" under cover of the United Nations flag.

Mr. Martin said Friday that a Soviet embassy statement, issued only hours after the disarmament conference on technical problems of peace-keeping concluded, was "without any justification."

In an interview he said the only way a "military apparatus could be established under the UN flag would be by the itself."

Shortly after denying the Russian charge the external, affairs minister in an appearance at the embassy where Ambassador Ivan Shpedko was holding a reception to celebrate the 47th anniversary of the Russian revolution.

EMBASSY IS OUR-RULED?

Before the conference opened Monday a Soviet spokesman told Canadian Press Russia had no objection to the meeting. Informed sources said it appeared the embassy was over-ruled by the Kremlin.

The statement purported to be a verbatim account of Russia's position on the Ottawa meeting as put forward by Mr. Martin privately last week by Mr. Shpedko.

At one point it said that Prime Minister Pearson had recently stated it is intended to create an advisory mechanism and military headquarters to co-ordinate the use of military contingents selected by different countries.

This made it "very clear" that in reality it (the Ottawa conference called by Canada) i

Rhodesians Want Independence But Not at Cost of British Ti

From AP-Reuters

SALISBURY (CP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith said today he wants early discussions with the British government on Rhodesia's independence and he hopes we can get them to see reason.

He told a press conference a few hours after his country's white electors had voted in an independence referendum: "If independence means that some member of the British Royal Family will have to come out and see the Union Jack being hauled down, then as far as we are concerned it will be over our dead bodies."

Of slightly more than 65,000 votes cast Thursday, 39,053 were for and 4,906 voted No. There were 944 spoiled papers.

The total percentage of the electorate who voted yes was 55, a bare majority in terms of Smith's wish for "massive" support.

One remarkable feature was the success of the boycott policy of African nationalists which ensured the low poll.

Smith said he again invited Commonwealth Relations Secretary Arthur Bottomley to Rhodesia for on-the-spot discussions.

Bottomley had suggested going to Rhodesia after his recent visit to Zambia. He had stipulated he must be permitted to see two top African nationalists, Joshua Nkomo and Ndabaningi Sithole, who are currently jailed by Smith's government. This was not acceptable to Smith and Bottomley therefore declined to visit Rhodesia.

Smith said he hoped Prime Minister Harold Wilson said early discussions between the two governments are essential.

(But Wilson also said it would not be possible for Bottomley to accept an invitation to visit Rhodesia unless he had an assurance he could meet representatives of all sections of Rhodesian opinion which would include the jailed nationalist leaders.)

Strike at U.S. Ford Endangers Visions of New Sales Records

DETROIT (AP) — A United Auto Workers' strike which hit nine key plants Friday endangered Ford's visions of continuing production and sales records.

Some 25,000 UAW members went on strike at four Ford assembly plants, two stamping plants and three parts manufacturing plants. The walkouts followed failure to settle local-level contracts which supplement the national labor agreement reached Sept. 18.

The strikes over at-the-place contracts covering working conditions, seniority and overtime provisions were called "completely unnecessary" by Malcolm L. Denise, UAW vice-president and chief negotiator.

"We have worked diligently with Ford to settle hundreds of unresolved issues—many of which should not even be on the bargaining table," Denise said.

Ken Bannoe, the UAW Ford department director, said every instance where an unresolved issue has prevented a settlement, a settlement on that question has been reached at another plant."

Ward's automotive reports said the Ford strike would cut some 7,000 cars and 1,000 trucks from this week's anticipated production totals.

A company spokesman estimated Ford's auto production-related losses in Canada slashed 16 per cent by the stoppages at the assembly plants. He said Canada normally turns out 1,800 daily, was cut 34 per cent.

And, he added, if the strike continued into next week plants, other assembly plants would be affected in time.

THE WEATHER

The pleasant mild and sunny weather in Northern Ontario today will cover the entire province Sunday. However, some cloudiness is likely to persist near the lower lakes during the day.

St. John Ambulance Instructors Receiving Course From the Army

The Canadian Army is teaching St. John Ambulance instructors how to teach. About thirty of the instructors from an area bounded roughly by Ottawa, Picton and Trenton are now down this weekend for a three-day course in methods of instruction taught by a two-man army instructional team from Camp Borden. The army instructors are Lt. R. F. Keegan of the Royal Canadian Regiment and Sgt. J. G. A. Stickney of the Royal Canadian Guards, are specialists in methods of instruction.

Arranged by Eastern Ontario St. John Ambulance field representative Lt.-Col. J. D. Simpson, the course started last night at Belleville armories. The army's interest in the course, according to Col Simpson, is partly due to the value to the army of having civilians trained in first aid, but arises more because the army is the only organization equipped and able to offer methods of instruction training on the scale required. Capt. Keegan and Sgt. Stickney explained methods of instruction courses for the St. John organization every weekend, around the province

Former Aide To Hal Banks Given Year

MONTREAL (CP) — Eldon (Jack) Richardson, former aide to Hal Banks, deposed head of the Seafarers International Union of Canada (Ind.), was sentenced Friday to one year in jail on a conspiracy charge.

Richardson, 38, pleaded guilty earlier this week to conspiring to assault Capt. Henry Walsh in Owen Sound in 1957.

He was also ordered to post two $250 bonds to keep the peace for two years. A similar sentence was imposed recently on Paul Carsh, also convicted of conspiracy in the beating of Capt. Walsh.

LEARN HOSTILITY

Fred Allen said youngsters at the reformatory learn an even greater hostility towards society and ways of "getting even" with society.

The guards are underpaid, the professor said, and frequently perform the task for which they are hired.

Other points with which Dr. Mann found fault at the reformatory are:

There are not nearly enough social workers, psychiatrists and psychologists to handle rehabilitation—fewer than 10 for 1,000 prisoners.

Too much stress is laid on pure custody.

But he also said of the reformatory: "Within the limitations of a big institution, I believe it is fairly run."

"What I'm indicting is the whole popular system of stressing harsh punishment, espe cially for young offenders, and stigmatizing them as criminals after one or two offences so they can't get decent jobs when they get out."

Dr. Mann said he believes the proper type of reformatory should have about 150 inmates "so that the desired attention can be paid to individual rehabilitation."

Police Deny Rumor Dog Was Rabid

Fourten students and an adult were bitten or received minor bruises yesterday when a dog ran wild at Our Lady of Fatima School.

Police denied a rumor that the dog which followed one of the students to school, was rabid. It was destroyed for examination at the Animal Hospital of Dr. H. W. Burns.

The children were released from Belleville General Hospital after treatment for minor injuries.

The dog, owned by Douglas William Hardy, 530 Sidney Street, apparently slipped its leash and followed eight-year-old Susan Hardy to the school. Police said Mr. Hardy told him that children often teased the dog while it had been tied to a post in the yard for the past two years.

At the school it apparently became excited and dashed among the pupils in the playground.

The adult, Norman Kalnay, 503 West Dundas Street, was bitten when he intervened.

TO BUILD NEW BOMB

PARIS —(Reuters) — Armed Forces Minister Pierre Messmer said Friday France will build new atomic bombs next year which will "greatly increase" the power of her strategic air force. He told the National Assembly during a debate on the armed forces budget — which increases the amount to be spent on nuclear weapons—that France will have at its disposal next year "a powerful nuclear armament together with the means of delivery and supporting installations."

Radio Series Will Tell Story Of First War

Starting Nov. 11 at 8 p.m. CJBQ will air a 17-part series of one-hour programs entitled Flanders' Fields, documenting Canada's part in the First Great War, to mark Remembrance Day. This episode will be rebroadcast on Nov. 15 at 1 p.m.

Flanders' Fields is a history told in the first person by some 300 of those who lived it and survived. Produced by J. Frank Willis, the series was based on an idea by A. B. Fowley, in charge of CBC historical broadcasts. It also relied largely on material and information gathered by Frank Lalor, and the active co-operation of Col. G. E. L. Nicholson, C.D., official historian of the Canadian Army.

The programs cover the whole period of the war, from the first enlistments in 1914 to the Soviet-German attempts to overrun Mons on November 11, 1918. The voices heard, recorded in all parts of Canada, the United Kingdom, and France, represent all of the men of the 48 infantry battalions of the Canadian Corps and the Corps' supporting groups -- the airmen, the Medical Corps, and the contingents from Newfoundland.

tion of the anti-aircraft missiles and they can "destroy any fast-flying target in the air, no matter if they fly at high or low altitudes, regardless of the time of year, day or night, in rain snow and fog."

"No radio interference can stop them," Tass said in calling the anti-aircraft missiles, the manned interceptors, which look like fantastic birds.

Other points with which Dr. Mann found fault at the reformatory are:

There are not nearly enough social workers, psychiatrists and psychologists to handle rehabilitation—fewer than 10 for 1,000 prisoners.

Too much stress is laid on pure custody.

But he also said of the reformatory: "Within the limitations of a big institution, I believe it is fairly run."

LOOK LIKE POLARIS

Other rockets appeared to be later types or modifications. One group appeared to be similar to the U.S. Polaris submarine missile.

Tass described them as long-range missiles launched by submarines and using "highly effective" fuel. Tass said they have powerful guidance systems and could be launched under water.

The Atomic submarines armed with such rockets can deal massive devastating blows at targets on land at a 4 and 5 kilometres (a kilometre is ⅝ of a mile) away, Tass said.

"The huge rocket that brought up the rear of the parade was a special type of rocket, further... appeared to be no equipment for bolstering and firing it," Tass said in another direction and that it was riding without fuel, indicating that they were liquid fuelled.

But the appearance of the world's Communist leaders together on the Red Square reviewing stand failed to dispel the shadow cast by the ideological dispute that is roiling the Kremlin.

Presiding over the festivities marking the 47-year-old Bolshevik Revolution was the Kremlin's new Communist party chief, Leonid Brezhnev, standing with Brezhnev were Premier Alexei Kosygin, President Anastas Mikoyan and other Soviet luminaries.

HAVE OPPOSITE VIEWS

Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-lai and his delegation from Peking, which demands a hard line toward the West, looked on while Soviet Minister Rodion Y. Malinovsky stressed that the Soviet Communist party has actively and consistently promoting a Leninist peace-loving foreign policy, based on peaceful coexistence of states with different social systems."

He added a warning about the danger of "imperialist policies of aggression."

Because of this, he said, "the Communist party and the Soviet people are displaying constant attention for the further strengthening of the U.S.S.R.'s military might, for equipping the army and the navy with the most modern means of warfare."

Brezhnev shared the spotlight atop Lenin's marble tomb with Chou, whose visit indicated joint Soviet-Chinese attempts to iron their party struggle for primacy in the Communist movement.

Chou and the rest of his Peking delegation have made it clear, however, that past troubles are not forgotten and that the Chinese will settle for no less than a willingness on the part ward the United States and the rest of the Western world.

Chou headed his Soviet hosts on two occasions Friday.

First, he paid homage to Joseph Stalin at the simple grave to which he was shifted in 1961 during Nikita Khrushchev's de-Stalinization campaign.

A short time later Chou withheld applause during a speech in which Brezhnev called for "a new international meeting of the fraternal parties."

Record Number At Meet of Senior Citizens

The mid-monthly meeting of the Belleville Senior Citizen Club was on Wednesday last. There was a record attendance.

The meeting was opened by President Mrs. Clapp who welcomed visitors and new members. One-minute's silence was observed, respecting the death of a beloved member Mrs. Young, and all joined in singing "The Old Rugged Cross."

A short business session was held following which a short address was given by Dr Dutton, Senior Citizens Advisor of Community Programs Branch, Ontario Department of Education.

The evening continued with tables of Euchre and the winners were: Gents, Mr. Botting and Mrs. J. Robinson; Ladies, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Fox, and Mrs. Goodfellow.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Taylor and her committee, preceded by grace.

The meeting closed with the singing of "God be With You Till We Meet Again".

Commencent Exercises Held At Stirling-Rawdon School

By BILL SEYMOUR

STIRLING — Hundreds of proud parents, teachers, guests and excited students filled the Stirling Community Centre last evening for the 1964 Commencement Exercises of the Stirling-Rawdon District High School.

This was the night that many a student, attending Stirling-Rawdon District High, had been waiting for.

Scores of parents and teachers sat proudly in their seats, as they watched, one by one, their sons, their daughters and their students, ascend to the platform to receive diplomas and prizes.

Four outstanding events highlighted the evening's exercises.

Following the presentation of the various awards, bursaries, those present listened to an address given by R. H. Sadlier, Dean of Men at Trent University in Peterborough.

SCHOLARSHIPS PRESENTED

Next on the program was the presentation of two scholarships, Queen's University student Robert Bell was awarded the Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Lawlor Memorial Scholarship, while David Murray was awarded the John L. Good trophy. David Murray also gave the valedictory address.

Guests were welcomed by Principal R. T. Hayes, who also introduced the members of his teaching staff and members of the District High School Board.

In his address R. H. Sadlier said, "for most of you who are present this evening, the program must evoke many memories.

"You have had the opportunity," he said, "of watching a generation of high school years parade by.

"The time may seem very distant when young, fragile, spindly seedlings were first planted in grade nine," he said, "and about the sturdy, tall stock has grown and matured. Tonight, the crop has been harvested."

SIGNIFICANT STEP

Mr. Sadlier went on to say that "graduation is a significant step in the life of every student and presents opportunities for a new and very different role for each individual — not a role to be feared or avoided."

Mr. Sadlier congratulated those who had successfully completed their commercial course and those who had matriculated and embarked on new studies at university.

The speaker also commended the teachers of the school and parents, whom he referred to as being the "unsung heroes among us". "I am sure that your sons and daughters are well aware of this," he said, "although they may not be the first to admit this is so. Your pride and pleasure in your offspring are justifiable. How well you know the love, support and discipline that have had to be provided through these colorful years."

Dancing in the gymnasium concluded the eventful evening.

Valedictory Address

Following is the valedictory address given by David Murray at the graduation exercises of Stirling-Rawdon District High School at Stirling on Friday evening:

"It is a very great honor for me to stand before you tonight as valedictorian. It seems like only yesterday that I was sitting where you are sitting now, listening to someone else give this address and wondering what it would be like to 'be up there' giving it myself.

"Now, I am here, and it is truly a wonderful feeling.

"I would first of all like to say thank you very much to all members of the staff, who, through a combination of persuasion and forcefulness, helped me to reach my senior matriculation.

"My indebtedness to you is very great. Although we may have had our differences, they are now past and as I look back over my five years I attended Stirling-Rawdon District High School, I find that my memories, good and bad, are very rich and full.

"To the staff, then, my sincere thanks.

"Thif world we live in today is moving very rapidly and to keep pace with it, one needs an education of one form or another. You may ask, "what is education?" My conception of education was going to school. Absorbing what the teachers told us, learning what our parents taught us, in order to go out into the world to make money.

"In the few short weeks I have been at the Royal Roads Military College in Esquimalt, B.C., this concept has been drastically altered. I have come into contact with men with degree upon degree following their name.

"These men are still learning. The men in my classes impress me the fact that education commences the first time that a baby realizes that if he cries his mother will come running, the first time he uses a spoon to feed himself, the first time he speaks an intelligent word and ends only when the last spark of life passes from the human body.

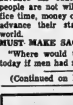
"Education is a door which can be opened to a rich and full life. I now realize that the teachers, both the public and high school, were only confirming what our parents began in our infancy.

"I also realize that education from now on cannot be obtained by examination. From now on I have to 'paddle my own canoe.' The many experiments, the numerous lines of endeavor which are being pursued by the staff at Royal Roads, have taught me that education never ceases, that the search for further knowledge never ends and that receiving the education is complete can only lead to complacency and the loss of many rich experiences.

"Education may take many forms. It can be technical training, academic training, or the training of experience. Whatever the form of education or training an individual pursues, it is essential to make the most of it.

"Life is too short to spend time in idleness without learning. We must endeavour to build and develop our intellect every day of our life. This is essential to our personal welfare and, to the welfare of our society.

"Education also allows a person to make greater contributions to life and to take many rich experiences in life.



"Education and learning requires sacrifice. Many people give up their leisure time just to make money. This is not good. Even if a person does not go on to university, he can still advance his education. Many people are not willing to sacrifice time, energy or pleasure to advance their status in the world.

MUST MAKE SACRIFICES

Republicans Face New Battle

Not all Republicans, even amongst those who not only voted, but even worked for Senator Barry Goldwater, will have been truly dismayed by the scope of his defeat.

The magnitude of the Democratic victory will provide them with an ideal opportunity to assume control over the wreckage of the Republican machine.

The Goldwater forces, though, are not likely to surrender meekly. They surprised the nation by the ease with which they took over the party this past summer. In spite of the disaster which has overtaken them they will probably be able to put up a stubborn fight against their foes within the party.

Unfortunately for the opposition, it is united on only one issue, the desire to wrest control of the party from Goldwater. Some of Goldwater's foes are middle-of-the-road men who look to the idealism of Lincoln for their inspiration. Others are conservatives of the old school, practical men who, while they dislike liberalism as much as Goldwater are prepared to accept reluctantly a measure of social security legislation and the like in order to gain power.

Whatever one may think of Goldwater, if one is to be fair to him, it must be admitted that his conservatism is idealistic. Sincere conviction, and not expediency, is the motive power behind this man.

Nor should we, if we are to be fair, confuse Goldwater's brand of conservatism with the radical right. Certain tenets they have in common, but Goldwater is several notches above many of the crack-pot extremists who supported him.

His sincerity, in itself, suggests that he will not easily relinquish ground which he fought so hard to win. Confirmation of this appraisal can be seen in the election-night reaction of one of the chief aides, Denison Kitchel. Declared Kitchel, "We have to wait four years but we are going to get this government back where it belongs."

Among the most important developments of the next couple of years will be the struggle, thinly mantly hidden, for control of the GOP. Moderate Republicans, whether they represent the Taft brand of conservatism or the middle-road approach of which Wendell Wilkie was one of the standard-bearers, have none too little time if they are not only to gain control of the party but also to have it in fighting trim for the next presidential election. They must hurry a search for a Moses to lead them to the Promised Land.

Why this Showing?

In Quebec City, fifteen reporters have been shown a 20-minute movie of police in action during the visit of the Queen to the capital of La Belle Province.

Why?

The film was shown by the attorney-general's department, the same department which absolved police of unnecessarily rough behavior. The logical conclusion, therefore, is that the desire was to provide corroboration for the department's findings. But the film hardly succeeded in this objective, if indeed this was the purpose of the showing.

What it showed was a man being hit by municipal policemen.

Even if no untoward incidents were revealed by the film, it would prove nothing. It was taken by members of the Quebec Provincial Police, and therefore suspect. At the same time, it would be dangerous to conclude that any beating which appeared unprovoked was certainly in this category. The camera can be deceptive, there would be no assurance that it had caught every thing which preceded any police action and, in any event, quite adequate reason for police action could be provided by verbal, as well as by physical provocation.

Perhaps, the real reason for showing the film was because its existence was known and to refuse to screen it would be misinterpreted. If this is so, we congratulate the attorney-general's department on its decision.

Millions of people always keep on asking why Italy has produced so much art. The answer is simple. We say to ourselves: "All right. We have been thrown out of the Garden of Eden. We'll build another one." And you might agree that we almost did.—Riccardo Aragno, Italian political commentator, critic and playwright.

Edema a Common Problem Often Peculiar to Women

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: Many people have a problem of liquid retention by the body. I am overweight and realize that may have some bearing, but I had this trouble before too. Otherwise I am in excellent health. — Mrs. W. M.

Dear Reader: My case has been diagnosed as "cyclic edema." I was told there is no known cause. I have tried diuretics but none has helped for any length of time.

The swelling is not limited to any one part of the body. A slight pressure, such as from a watch band, anklet, ankles, waist or neck band causes large welts which last for hours and sometimes overnight. — Mrs. L. F.

Edema (accumulation of excess fluid in the body tissues) is, indeed, a common problem. When it comes and goes periodically, it is called cyclic edema, which is peculiar to women.

Rather than agreeing that there is no known cause, I'd rather state there is no single cause for all cases.

Most women have an increase in water retention just before the menstrual period, with an increase in weight of from one to perhaps 10 pounds; the weight is promptly lost, through release of the water, when the period starts.

With some women the problem can be more severe than that, and various facts may be involved. Sheer overweight is one, hence should be corrected for the patients comfort. Or the amount of estrogen (female sex hormone) produced by the body, can have its effect on the system and rate of fluid retention.

One research report has noted that some women have had a severe strep infection earlier in life, perhaps altering the capillaries, or very small blood vessels, permitting more fluid to seep into the tissues.

Because hormone activity is closely related to the psychological or emotional state, attention to tension can be helpful. Indeed, in some cases deep-seated emotional problems have been found, and efforts to ease them have been reflected in less edema.

Keeping salt in the diet at a minimum is an obvious measure, because more salt in the body, the more water retained.

Diuretics (drugs to release excess fluid) can be helpful when used periodically. Sometimes they are sufficient to keep the patient adequately comfortable. In severe cases, they cannot be expected to do it all, and weight reduction, low-salt diet, measures to control emotional tension and other steps may be required. Low thyroid activity also tends to cause some degree of fluid retention.

The welts suggest an "angioneurotic edema," and possibly an allergic disorder of some kind.

In most of the cyclic edema cases of the sort we are discussing, there is no kidney, liver or heart disease — although there can be continuing and serious edema from those causes.

Usually cyclic edema cannot be nearly pigeon-holed as coming from any single cause, fortunately severe cases of it are not common.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can X-rays given by a dentist every six months be dangerous? Many dentists X-ray before they fix teeth. I am sure many mothers are interested in this. — M. W.

With modern equipment and in skilled hands, I see no reason for concern. The exposure is brief and, of course, applied only to the teeth and gums.

• • •

Dear Dr. Molner: I am bothered with sore corners of my mouth. Cold creams, oils, etc., effect no cure. At times they are heavily encrusted. What causes these eruptions? — Miss G. B.

It can be from a Vitamin B deficiency. How is your diet?

Another common cause is sensitivity to lipstick or possibly to a dentifrice. Try changing these or even going without lipstick for a time.

Vilification Is Simple

Ottawa Journal

A cleaning company's new waterproofing and stainproofing process known as "silvification" ended up as "villification" in the yellow pages of the Montreal telephone book. Damages of $1,000 were awarded to the cleaners the other day in court. Our hearts go out to both the cleaners and the phone company.

These technical slips happen. The business of communications has so many undiscovered pitfalls that it is frightening. Consider the case in Billericay England, in the British election. A Tory agent was quoted by the London Observer commented: "Staggering, anyway."

But we should talk. Just the other day above a story about dying fish we proclaimed in bold type that there was a rise in smelt mortality." One gleeful correspondent suggested that a rise in any kind of morality was encouraging. Morality or mortality, the only encouraging thing about it was that the fish had pretty grounds, or water, for a lawsuit. Yar luckier to flatter smelt than vilify silvitators.

Cat and Mouse Game Played In a Nervous Parliament

By RICHARD JACKSON

From The Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Isn't it amazing—or perhaps, really not surprising at all—how hot political tempers cool the morning after the emotional explosion of the night before.

For nearly two years, ever since the General Election of April last year, when the uncertain minority government of Prime Minister Pearson regained to power, crisis has followed crisis.

Each time the election storm clouds start piling up darkly on the political horizon.

And each time, the clearing wind of the cold hard financial facts of contemporary political life — an election costs the parties themselves a conservatively estimated collective $25,000,000 and can run an individual candidate into as much, according to the records, as $90,000 — sweeps away the mounting election thunderheads.

Through 19 nervous months, Parliament has lived with tension as the Government came through one crunch after another.

This kind of crisis - to -crisis political living can't go on indefinitely — or can it?

Most MPs are in all five parties and five different reasons — think it can.

But they are getting exceedingly jumpy.

THE REASON WHY

The Socreds and the Creditistes hope that life is so tense in it here not only can last through the winter, but even endure into 1966 when the Government is approaching the end of its normal term, would be expected to appeal for a substantial vote of confidence for Centennial '67. For the Socreds and Creditists know that ill the trend will be in their favor, or even a spring election, they will be the first certain casualties.

The New Democrats, too, trust they won't be swept out into the March snows or April rains in search of votes, because they fear that they also may be severely crippled in the killing campaign front of public dissatisfaction for third party "splinter" groups.

The Conservatives, or a majority of them, do not mind telling you privately that they think this same Parliament will continue for the next two years in ineffectual job, simply because "not more than 40 per cent" of them estimated it, really and truly in their secret hearts, want a quick election.

And finally, the Liberals are reasonably confident things will hold together for no other reason than they believe it publicly obvious that an election not only won't solve anything but could make an already extremely difficult situation all but impossible.

But all this believing, trusting and hoping really is not doing much to calm Parliamentary nerves.

And if attendance in the Commons these last few weeks has been so thin as to be positively embarrassing to visiting lawyers in the Galleries of the House, it is not that the honorable members have lost their appetite for tention to business, but rather that they have.

THE FUNDAMENTALS

To the scientists, that is.

For the basic necessity of life in Parliament these days is simply being elected, staying elected and getting re-elected.

All you have to do to see what we mean is to look around you. Empty seats you would see if you were here in the Galleries of the House, looking down on all sides of the Commons and wondering where everybody had got to, are significant not just for what they are but for what they mean to the Parliament has become.

While beating their fingers crossed, the MPs are flying out of the Capital in carefully-arranged political party relays to keep the home fires burning.

The Party Whips are "furloughing" them in groups, being careful to keep enough here for sudden emergencies while maintaining, as best they can, the Parliamentary power balance.

At their finger-tips within quick reach, either in the House itself or in their offices, the Whips have a revolving file of alternative phone numbers where those MPs who are on "home leave" may be long-distanced to grab the first plane back to the Hill in case things suddenly start coming apart at the Parliamentary seams.

The MPs from the Pacific, the Prairies and the Maritimes, like to take a week at a time, if it can be arranged. Not to holiday. To work the constituency, to keep things politically shipshape as possible just in case this, or the next, turns out to be the crisis-to-end-continuing-crisis for this trouble - starred Parliament.

Ontario and Quebec MPs have a bit better break. They, too, take a week for "homework" if and when they can get it. But in addition, if they are fast out of the House in good time on time into Toronto and Montreal late Sunday night, they have the convenience of handy Air Canada weekends when Parliament Hill is only minutes away.

New Aircraft In Operation

Hamilton Spectator

One American election issue that came close to spelling ruin for Defence Secretary Robert S. McNamara was the construction of the TFX, a multipurpose, all-weather, fighter aircraft.

This aircraft was built by General Dynamics Corporation and Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corporation. The dispute and Senate investigation was touched off when the administration enemies—contended the Boeing Company had submitted a superior design and had been denied the contract because of political skullduggery.

Now the aircraft has been completed and was recently unveiled as the F-111.

The F-111 has a variable swept-wing feature that enables it to change its wings in flight from the straight position to the swept back position ideal for supersonic flight, to a top speed of Mach 2.5 (two and one-half times the speed of sound at sea level) the F-111, carrying two men, has 80,000 feet as the maximum operating ceiling and 900 feet as the minimum operating altitude.

Designed to be used by all branches of the military, the F-111 can operate with both conventional and nuclear weapons from short, unprepared runways and from aircraft carriers.

The F-111 is described officially as a "transoceanic" aircraft. This means that, using its in-flight fueling capabilities the aircraft can fly anywhere in the world in one day.

It is to be hoped this aircraft will never be used in anger, but the fact that it has become a sectional seems to justify Secretary McNamara's faith in the contractors.

More Fads Needed

Financial Post

Canadian companies are telling the investor more about themselves than ever before. But more still needs to be done. Hundreds of Canadian corporations are still producing vague reports. The Porter Royal Commission on Banking and Finance reported last May that too many companies take the attitude "that the intelligent and informed investor is a nuisance rather than a partner in the enterprise."

Dr. Macdonnell spoke chiefly on the work of the Federation, outlining its work in awarding scholarships to outstanding university women, its efforts to improve educational facilities, Mr suggested project of travelling libraries for primary children in isolated districts throughout Canada. May Limit Voting Costs

London Free Press

The federal government has named a five-man commission to study and make recommendations on all means of controlling expenditures by political parties and candidates at election time, including the possibility of paying part of the costs and of the election campaign. The idea has been endorsed in principle by all parties.

There is little doubt that the present situation not only may offer an unfair advantage to some, but also through the high cost of getting elected, may deter many politically-capable Canadians from entering public life.

There are an increasing number of proposals in various systems in the democratic world for the government's move.

USED NO PRESSURE

Mr. Martin said the meeting in no way had brought pressure to bear on the problem of UN finances or on the problem of whether the Security Council or General Assembly or both could initiate peace - keeping operations.

The external affairs minister said he sent it clear last summer and again last week to Mr. Slipenko that the conference was purely technical.

The week - long conference concluded with a general feeling that future meetings of the same kind may be held.

Webb Inquires About Uranium

OTTAWA (CP)—Trade Minister Sharp told the Commons Friday the government has no plans to buy any more uranium "at the present time."

Mr. Sharp said Mr. Gilchrist was speaking about general uranium requirements for the future, and there are no plans at present to let new contracts.

MOSCOW (Reuters)—One of Moscow's new streets will be named after Richard Sorge, a Russian spy executed in Japan in 1944, Tass news agency said Saturday.

Jack Farrell, Blacksmith For 50 Years, Says Demand For 'Smithy' Great as Ever

The old time blacksmith has passed almost completely out of the picture but with today's stables and horse racing, the demand for the old time "smithy" is just about as great is it ever was.

At least that is the feeling of Mr. Jack Farrell of Blessington on the Shannonville gravel who after 50 years as a blacksmith is still about as busy as ever.

"There are still just as many horses to shoe," he says.

GOES TO HORSES

The difference is that more ponies and race horses are getting shod and the "smithy" now goes to the horses instead of the horses being brought to him.

For the past half century, Mr. Farrell has worked daily in his crossroads blacksmith shop north off Shannonville.

But time marches on and with today's emphasis on motor transport, Mr. Farrell's shop has to come down to make way for county road improvements.

However, he still feels he will continue as a blacksmith.

"How could I turn my customers down?" he asks. "There are no other smithies around."

And despite his near 70 years, Mr. Farrell still feels good and says he can shoe horses about as fast as he ever could.

ALWAYS AT SHOP

A boyhood liking for the blacksmith shop resulted in Mr. Farrell choosing to make this his life's work. As a lad on occasional trips to town, his family always found him at the blacksmith's shop.

After learning the trade he bought his present shop fifty years ago from the late Frank Corrigan. Actually the building is about 80 years old and at one time was known as the "Flask" Cole blacksmith shop.

Today horse owners from as far away as Wooler and Napanee look to him to shoe their horses. So many farmers in the same radius also look to him for general farm machinery repairs.

Just a week ago he had occasion to make a set of new shoes. They were for display as museum pieces.

NAILED 96 SHOES IN DAY

The biggest day's work Mr. Farrell ever remembers doing was nailing on 96 horse shoes in one day.

This included heating the shoes and fitting them on the anvil before nailing them to the horses' feet.

For the unlalitiated there are almost as many styles of shoes for horses' feet as there are for humans. And they come in almost as many sizes — to fit the smallest pony or the biggest Clydesdale.

The going rate for setting a shoe half a century ago was 15 cents and this included taking off the shoe, fitting it and nailing it back on. If a new shoe was required the rate was 30 cents.

But like everything else the cost of shoeing horses has gone up. Today the charge for resetting a shoe is $1.

But take it from Mr. Farrell, despite the hard work involved, there are few blacksmiths who ever got rich.

Valedictory Address

rifices in the past? Many great men sacrificed money and prestige to pursue an ideal or a goal. To some, even life itself was not too great a sacrifice.

"We must also be willing to make sacrifices.

"Sacrifice does not mean giving up the world and clothing yourself in sackcloth. It just means spending time doing something for a purpose, rather than devoting all of our time pursuing pleasure. Everyone needs a goal to aim for.

"The purpose of education is to help one find that goal.

"Education is not just pouring over books; it is the sum total of everything we do and experience in life. Education will require sacrifices but the final result will have been worth it.

"So, I say to you, who are in high school now, keep working, aim high, and learn from everything. To those who have left school, I say, your education is not over, so always maintain a goal.

"Education can take many forms, several of which I have mentioned. The branch which I chose was a military education at Canadian Services College, Royal Boards, B.C.

SERVICES CAREER

"Services college education is a combination of military studies and discipline, scientific studies and studies of the humanities. This multiple form of education is designed to create an individual who is capable of self-discipline, educated in culture and has knowledge of his world.

To anyone seriously considering this type of education, I would recommend it. One must work hard but the end result is worth the sacrifices that must be made.

"When you leave CSC you have a degree in engineering, science or the arts, a Queen's commission in the Army, Navy or Air Force and an opportunity to step into the world knowing that you are prepared for its surprises.

As I have stated, each fragment of learning helps to develop a person. This learning will lead to greater income, greater contributions to society and a richer, fuller life.

Life is only as you make it and learning helped to make it richer. Although we may not realize it, the greater our capabilities, the greater the asset we are to ourselves, our nation and mankind.

QUOTES KENNEDY

A phrase from the inaugural address of the late president of the United States, John F. Kennedy, may well be applied here, "ask not what your country can do for you — ask what you can do for your country." This simple but eloquent phrase may also be applied to an individual or to society as a whole.

Remember that "the greater a person's training, the greater is his contribution to himself and to those around him."

David flew from the military college in British Columbia to be in Stirling last evening to give the above valedictory address.

Blacksmith shop operator for the past half century, Jack Farrell of Blessington, feels he can still shoe as many horses in a day as ever. Here he fits a heated shoe over the anvil.

The Golden Years
Just Old Man's Dream, You Say? Retirement Starts at Age 25

By THOMAS COLLINS

It is about time the country got over the notion that retirement is just an old man's game.

So wide have become the ramifications of the Serutan and Shuffleboard Society that most people from age 25 on are now caught up in the retirement process.

The young men and women who are now finishing their schooling are likely to get their first job, and any later one, because some 65-year-old man or woman is being shoved out of the chute at the far end of the line in order to make room for them at this end. There are businesses now that are spotting employees as they pass their 60th birthday, and setting timetables for the hiring of the young to replace them.

Young people are a notable economic factor in the retirement process. A business frequently can hire two college graduates for the salary it is paying one 65 - year - old employee who is about to be retired. Better still, it can hire one sharp college graduate one year before the old man retires, teach him to do the old man's job, and in a couple of years be making a profit on the exchange.

Young people who don't realize this — and most of them don't — haven't been taught all they should know. Or they have not been listening.

The second encounter with the retirement process usually comes to people in their early thirties. They are married now, are very much in love, have babies, bills, mortgages, problems, frustrations with their careers. . . and more bills. At this age they dream of the privacy and the security of retirement, in what is probably the purest and most wonderful dream of retirement people ever have. They cover over their insurance, annuities, and savings, with visions of the precious freedom it will bring. Some 35 years from now. They think more deeply about retirement than anybody except the 64-year-old.

For the unlalitiated there are almost as many styles of shoes for horses' feet as there are for humans. And they come in almost as many sizes — to fit the smallest pony or the biggest Clydesdale.

The going rate for setting a shoe half a century ago was 15 cents and this included taking off the shoe, fitting it and nailing it back on. If a new shoe was required the rate was 30 cents.

But like everything else the cost of shoeing horses has gone up. Today the charge for resetting a shoe is $1.

But take it from Mr. Farrell, despite the hard work involved, there are few blacksmiths who ever got rich.

ing up, and Papa and Mama are striving mightily to join everything and be everything and buy everything — at this point the parents of the husband and wife come up for retirement. If they are like most parents now retiring, Papa and Mama must provide an emotional crutch for them — a show of love, attention and concern — while their own emotional crutch is threatening to crack. They also, in many cases, must provide money. Not always for food and shelter, but to maintain the retired parents in a station of life that won't be embarrassing to the image Papa and Mama are striving to create for themselves. They can't let their parents apply for relief, live in a shack, or wear rags. Not if they're going anywhere, socially or in their careers. But this is a secondary cost. The primary one is for medical care, because retired parents also get sick. Often with no health insurance, or savings or with just enough to keep them out of charity wards for 14 days. Cancer calls for a little more. It is now often calling for financial catastrophe on the part of 45-year-old children.

TOUGH ENCOUNTER

The fourth encounter with retirement — long before age 65 and the gold watch — comes in the early fifties. And this is a tough one. People in their fifties begin hearing signals beeping all around them, telling it is growing late, retirement is coming, and they'd better start storing some nuts. All sorts of forces are pressuring them to buy annuities, old age insurance and to hold onto their jobs at all costs to preserve their built-up pension credits. So what happens? They start reaching back for youth. . .dyeing their hair, growing mustaches, buying convertibles, flirting, wearing gay clothes. . .and often acting silly. Retirement is just an old man's game? Some game!

Going Places
Past More Real Than Present In Historic Old Edinburgh

By SHIRLEY and BOB SLOANE

EDINBURGH, Scotland —1717," according to a plaque. She's been called everything from "Auld Reekie" to the Grey Metropolis of the North. An Englishman abused her main thoroughfare of Princes St. as "only half a street" because it contains first its other side. When she tried to cash in on her ancient geography by erecting a war memorial atop Calton Hill, she ran out of money; today, only a few bare Parthenonian columns stand, nicknamed "Edinburgh's Folly."

But if the sunny beauty of Athens or the liquid loveliness of Paris were not Edinburgh's fate, a mighty history and a physical majesty have been. Sir Walter Scott called Edinburgh romantic, Washington Irving described it as sombre and sublime. Her contents and her setting, her rugged topography and brooding castle, her ancient gray mass of the Royal Mile, holding the secret courts called "closes," all ring with echoes of Scotland's stirring and violent history.

Edinburgh's geography is its first impressive feature. The walks and trees of Princes Gardens, once a river valley, divide the squares of the modern city from the steep wynds and cobbled alleys of the old.

HIGHLANDS INVADE CITY

The highlands seem to invade the very heart of the city where, at the Royal residence of Holyrood House, the sloping geometric crags of Holyrood Park climb into it. Sheep graze on the grassy sides, brightened by yellow gorse and broom. From its heights are seen the Firth of Forth and Portobello, where Harry Lauder was born.

On the Old City side, the Royal Mile separates Edinburgh Castle from Holyrood House. Holyrood traces its origin to the 12th. Century abbey built by Queen Margaret. Near its entrance, is Jenny "S" inlaid in the cobblestones still reminds of the days when the palace was a weekend sanctuary for debtors.

In Holyrood Mary Queen of Scots lived for six fateful years and witnessed the infamous murder of her secretary, David Rizzio. Here too she married Darnley and Bothwell. Later, the stiegulfed Bonnie Prince Charlie held court here for six weeks while Edinburgh Castle a mile away still held out against him.

For hundreds of years Scotland's history turned on sieges of Edinburgh Castle. Once it held out for five years. But its fearsome battlements and towers were never taken by assault only by treachery from within.

Within its walls James I, the first king of united Britain, was born. Under the hammered beam ceilings of its banquet hall, Cromwell, Charles I, James VI, and Khrushcher all have dined. The Scottish crown jewels still are maintained in the castle, ready for whatever.

TRIBUTE TO DEAD

On the grounds stands Scotland's moving War Memorial, tribute to the more than 200,000 Scotsmen who lost their lives in two wars. Each name is recorded in books, and each unit honored in carved stone, bronze, and stained glass.

The shops and wynds and closes of the Royal Mile are so full of intrigue as to keep the most energetic explorer walking for days. In Lady Stair Close Bobby Burns once lived, and in the gas lamp-lit square Sir Richard Steele "gave supper to a group of eccentric beggars in

Whistling Mother-in-Law About to Cause Explosion

DEAR DORIS — My husband and I have made an addition to our home for his mother and father as he is an only child. There is a door between their section and our part of the house which we've never closed since they've moved there.

DORIS CLARK

My problem is that my mother-in-law, who is as nice a woman as you can find anywhere, whistles from the moment she gets up in the morning until she goes to bed at night. She is a nervous person and I believe this is the reason she whistles a shrill note all the time.

We have never had a disagreement and I couldn't possibly bring myself to tell her how nervous she makes me with this whistling. My nerves just tighten up and I could just scream at her "Will you please shut up!" all the time.

My husband works at night and sleeps during the day, so he hasn't been bothered by it apparently. I'm afraid if I tell him he wouldn't say anything to her anyway. — NERVOUS WRECK.

* * *

DEAR NERVOUS WRECK — Well, there are such things as ear plugs. There are also counter-melodies such as you might bring forth from your own radio or hi-fi. Or you could close the door.

Save yourself from going herself by sharing your quandry with your husband — not so that he will tell her, but so that you will have syphoned off some of this emotional upset. Sometimes all we need for serenity is to know that someone — our special someone — understands. You may find that he shares your discomfort — and you can plot together!

* * *

Confidential to BEWILDERED — You may still hear from your friend. It may be that he was away when you were there. Don't waste time worrying. You didn't do anything wrong.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I weigh 180 pounds. I haven't the will power to cut down on my eating, so that can't be solved. I am unhappy through boredom and discontent.

I would like to try for a baby boy, but I am afraid of the meticulous months of pregnancy. I have three girls. If I could get a job it might get me out of myself, but I am not trained for anything. My husband is indifferent or should I say ignorant about my needs.

He is below my intellect and learning and religion. Also I am in need of friends, as I am a quiet type of person and a poor conversationalist. — CONFUSED.

* * *

DEAR CONFUSED — Well! You threw the book at me that time! Overweight, bored, untrained, indifferent husband, no friends.

It's a merry-go-round. You sat to compensate. You even think of a baby boy as compensation. What kind of a mother would you be giving him? And what sort of "superior" religion leaves you so resourceless?

You can get training. You can learn to converse. You can take an interest in your husband's needs. You can reduce. You can pick yourself up by your bootstraps; and at 34 it's your own funeral if you don't.

My private letter to you goes into more detail. Let's have a progress report in, say, a month's time.

* * *

Confidential to DESPERATE — Same old story: Man doesn't love wife. Wants divorce. Makes love to you, a gullible girl of 16. Result: Disillusioned young mother.

The helpful counsellor at your child care agency will work with you in facing and coping with your problems, which are: the coming of an an ill-timed, illegitimate offspring; the expenses of pregnancy and hospitalization; the disruption of your school or work life; the loss of status in the eyes of those around you; the assuming of adult responsibility while you are still a child.

* * *

For Belleville, the place to go is the Children's Aid Society of Belleville and Hastings County, 63 Moira Street.

* * *

DEAR DORIS — I am 14 years old and hate home. All of my sisters and brothers yell at me for staying home whenever Mom and Dad go out. When I mention something to them about it they all just laugh and deny it.

When I try to be nice they tell me I'm nuts and start teasing me again. I have thought of leaving home but I have to finish school. My girl friend said I could stay with her. Do you think this is a good idea? If not, what should I do? — HOME HATER.

* * *

DEAR HOME HATER — Teasing is hard to take. Make one private appeal to Mom and Dad to have it stopped. Then if it happens again — and it may — ignore it. Without your rebellion the teaser has nothing to build on.

Home is better than a permanent berth with the friendliest of girl friends. And you'd miss those brothers and sisters! Believe it or not.

Auxiliary Tea Attracts Fine Crowd

QUESTION: When one attends a christening, is it proper to bring along a gift for the baby or should it be sent either before or after the ceremony? Also, are guests expected to attend the ceremony at the church even if it is not specified in the invitation? Mrs. G. C. M. Washington, D.C.

ANSWER: A christening gift usually is brought to the reception, but it may be sent in advance, if that's preferable or, for some reason more convenient. Guests often are asked to the ceremony, but about a c t specified in the invitation. If the invitation is specific about this.

Question: My husband is to be best man at the wedding of his brother and he has asked to give the bachelor dinner at our house. There will be about fifteen men at the gathering, and I plan to fix up a hot and cold buffet. I had planned to stay home and help serve, but my husband says a woman definitely should not attend a bachelor dinner, even if it's in her own home. I wasn't going to stay in the room and disturb the men's party, but just set out the food and then sit in the kitchen or some other room and read. Do you think I should go out or stay home? — Mrs. B. F., Boston, Mass.

Answer: I'd suggest you arrange the buffet table, then the cold things in the ice box and the hot things in a warm oven, then go out for the evening and let the men take care of themselves.

Readers' Saturday Column

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION:

I am serving a wedding breakfast for around 125 people. I was thinking of serving either a creamed chicken in patty shells or chicken salad. Could you please give me a complete menu for both and also the quantities and recipes I would need — Mrs. J. C.

ANSWER:

Because I receive so many requests for quantity recipe for creamed chicken (or turkey) and chicken (or turkey) salad I will give both recipes today to serve 125 people, hoping prospective conveners of large receptions will clip this now.

SATURDAY

Moist Meat Balls (see Thursday); Parched Curried Rice (see Thursday); Brussels Sprouts or Frenched Green Beans; Butterscotch Bun Loaf (see Friday); Individual Dessert Fruit Salads with Cheese Wedges; Tea.

CREAMED CHICKEN OR TURKEY (a la King — for 125):

5 packages fresh frozen peas, 4 qts. hot milk, 3½ cups butter or margarine, 2 lbs. mushrooms, scrubbed and sliced, 2 large sweet green peppers, chopped, 1-3 cups flour, 5 tablespoons salt, 2½ teaspoons pepper, 10 cups cold milk, 12½ lbs. boned, chopped chicken (or turkey) meat, five 4-oz cans pimiento, diced.

About 1½ hours before serving cook peas as package directs. Heat 4 qts. milk slowly. Meanwhile, in butter in very large kettle, gently saute mushrooms and onions until tender; stir in flour, salt and peppers until smooth. Then stir in the 10 cups cold milk; gradually stir in hot milk. Cook, stirring until thickened. Add drained cooked peas, chicken (or turkey), and pimiento. Carefully heat through.

CHICKEN OR TURKEY SALAD (for 125):

FINE ENGLISH CHINA

"These I have loved:
White plates and cups, clean-gleaming, ringed with blue lines . . ."
— from The Great Lover by Rupert Brooke.

Did you know a China Store in Belleville owes its beginning to trading stamps? "It's true," declares Mr. J. A. Blackburn, owner of Stroud's Gift Shop on Front Street. "During my father's time, a man named Stroud of Montreal had a chain of stores scattered throughout Eastern Ontario, which sold among other things, tea. To stimulate its sale tea-coupons were offered and exchanged for fine china tea-cups and saucers.

TEA VANISHES

"The buying public approved of the china idea to such an extent that when I was asked to take over the management of the Belleville store after my father's death, the stock was comprised mostly of china, pottery and glassware. Tea had completely vanished from the shelves. Later when Mr. Stroud died, I bought the business and moved to the present premises which I at first rented, but later purchased.

Today, Mr. Blackburn's store, still known as Stroud's, features jewelry, silver, glassware, lamps, mirrors and other gifts, but first and foremost it is a china shop: the largest in Eastern Ontario.

Said an out-of-town customer recently: "Though I have travelled all over the world, I have yet to see a finer display of English china."

In fact, a walk by this array of Minton, Royal Doulton, Wedgewood, Coalport, Spode Royal Albert, Royal Worchester, Paragon, Foley, Aynsley, Royal Chelsea, Adderly, Royal Crown Derby to mention some fine English dinnerwares, is to mingle with the seasons. Their varied colors and patterns bring memories of a wash of spring, summer skies and gardens, autumn tints, the driven snow of winter.

"A thing well-displayed is half sold, I'm told," admits Mr. Blackburn, "Although I have no heirs to carry on the business I recently enlarged the china department because," he says, "it brings me pleasure. Owning a china shop is something I really enjoy. I can't imagine anything else I'd rather do for a living than sell china. Perhaps it's because I've been brought up with the business."

Strangely enough the wide array of around 300 patterns in stock presents a problem for young brides. It is so difficult to make a choice!

IMPORTANT CHOICE

"For this reason, I always urge the girls to come in again and again before making an important a decision on a life time investment," says Mrs. Arthur Burton head of the china department, whose valued experience makes her an authority on what that will accent a bride's future life where dear companionship will centre, ware that will serve those happy occasions: birthday parties, wedding receptions, anniversaries and other social festivities of a yet invisible world.

"The dinnerware as well as the silver, glassware and linen should set the keynote of the dining room" she tells us. "Color and pattern play such an important part, they should be carefully considered. That which looks well on display may look entirely different in another room or in another lighting. It takes time to judge, weigh the facts, and decide. So I say, do take plenty of time to make a happy choice."

Do you remember when it was the fashion to order items of china by the dozen? Such is the case no longer.

BUY PLACE SETTINGS

"The tendency today is to buy by the place-setting," says Mrs. Burton. "This is really better, for it allows a young bride to buy something to start for each setting, and does not involve heavy expense all at one time."

Here are some tips on china care which Mrs. Burton suggests: warm dishes gradually; take care in the choice of detergents; use just warm water; let dishes soak if not convenient to wash soon after use; put cloth between each plate of precious china; hang cups on square hooks or stand them separately.

It is said that our present day living is founded upon the past, and good design and beauty are timeless. "All beautiful things," says Oscar Wilde, "belong to the same age." Lovely china is a source of pride and a symbol of quality. A china shop such as Stroud's leads one through civilization's garden, where the amenities of life are cheerfully expressed. Little wonder that china's first appearance was as "epidemic that once held the whole of Europe in polite and beneficient thrall."

Belle-vignette speaking of china, as an exhibition of still life paintings by Mark O'Neil was held recently in Brandon Vermont, where we visited recently, we noted that Mr. O'Neil had painted some fascinating historical subjects. These included a grouping of Martha Washington's favorite china, her "blue and white"; the Boston tea party bowl and Paul Revere's silver cups and were displayed against a background of wallpaper from the Revere house (1735-1818); pottery, glass and tile were shown which was recently excavated in Jamestown, a city founded in 1607; and the cup which John Alden brought with him on the Mayflower. It seemed a most interesting and splendid way to show examples of rare and priceless heirlooms of a nation's heritage.

Church Groups

ST. COLUMBA CHURCH

The Alpha and Iona groups of St. Columba Presbyterian Church combined for their November meeting. It was held at the home of Mrs. D. Devolin who was hostess for the evening. President Mrs. W. Bowles welcomed everyone and then turned the meeting over to Mrs. K. D. Taylor who led the devotions.

Mrs. Devolin introduced Officer Fay Willis of the Ontario Provincial Police, who gave an interesting talk on his work and how the work of church groups such as this could help the teenagers of today. At the end of his talk Officer Willis answered some questions from the ladies.

Mrs. H. Pollard thanked him on behalf of the groups for his talk and said how much all had benefitted by his talk.

The business meeting follow ed with Mrs. Bowles presiding. It was stated during the course of business that the bonser had been most successful.

Mrs. Ralph Baldwin reminded the meeting of the Iona group's rummage sale and asked for contributions. The groups are catering for a Hydro luncheon on November 26th.

Mrs. C. Miller closed the meeting with prayer.

A social hour followed with the hostess serving coffe and cake.

This training school emphasizes some finished details not covered in other departments of sewing, such as collars, bound buttonholes, etc. Choice of patterns will be discussed and basic sewing techniques and finishes will be reviewed.

The two ladies from each branch Institute will carry home to their members some valuable assistance as they conduct classes in the coming months. This course was open to any interested women in the various communities.

At this school 11 Institutes were registered on Tuesday with 22 ladies.

LACE-COVERED MIDRIFF — Lace-covered midsections will be featured on the beaches in 1965, fashion experts expect. At left, a deep mesh insert conceals an adjustable bikini shown by Cole of California at a Swimwear Institute of Canada show in Toronto. It is screen printed on fine gauge nylon jersey. The pattern features hot colors on a black ground. At right, a one-piece maillot with a sequin-embroidered lace overblouse was shown by Rose Marie Reid. Of textured nylon jersette, the see-through midriff gives the illusion of two-pieces. (CP Photo)

Ann Landers

Specialist Can Relieve Worries of Young Couple

DEAR ANN LANDERS — Dave and I have been going together for three years. He is now a junior in college and we plan to be married when he graduates.

Recently when I gave a pint of blood to a friend who was injured in an accident I learned my blood type is O negative. Dave was upset when I told him because he is a B positive. He says it is possible that we could not have a child who would survive because of the differences in our blood types.

After hours of talking it over Dave told me perhaps we should break our engagement and go separate ways. I love him and I was certain he loved me, but now I'm so distraught I'm not even sure of my own name. Please tell me if Dave is right about this or whether it could be an excuse to break off with me? Thank you. — INDIGO.

ANN LANDERS

• • •

DEAR INDIGO — The combination of your blood type and Dave's could indeed produce children with blood problems.

Many years ago such babies died, and no one knew why. Today when physicians know of this condition in advance (and yours will) the babies can be given transfusions at birth and grow up to be well and healthy.

I suggest you and Dave go to a specialist. He will give you the facts.

• • •

DEAR ANN LANDERS — I'm a girl 15 with an unusual problem — people insist on giving me their old clothes.

My parents are not rich or poor — but sort of in the middle. I have all the clothes I need and I've always felt neatly dressed. Yet the women I baby-sit for, my grandmother's housekeeper and the ladies from my mother's church auxiliary are forever dropping off boxes of dresses their children have outgrown or just got tired of.

I know these people mean well and I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings but they are either too large or too small, or I just don't like the way they look on me.

I've thought of accepting the clothes gracefully then throwing them out, but this doesn't seem right. Please tell me what to do. — SHMOTTAS.

DEAR SHMOTTAS — Thank the people nicely, let them know you appreciate their kindness but tell them you don't need extra clothes. Suggest they call Goodwill Industries. This wonderful organization makes sure the used clothing gets into the hands of those who do need this kind of help.

• • •

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Church Leaders Differ On 'Gift of Tongues'

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — "The words I uttered were above and beyond my own intelligence.

"It happened three years ago I had been praying for the experience.

"One day, here in my living room, I was kneeling in prayer. Suddenly I had a feeling of great and unhibhited joy.

"I began to praise God in English, then changed to another language. It was a beautiful experience."

The speaker is Vivian Bruner of Dallas. She is a Baptist. She takes part in one of the most controversial activities in Christianity today: Glossolalia.

Glossolalia means "gift of tongues," which Webster's Third New International dictionary defines as: "Ecstatic speech that is usually unintelligible to hearers and is uttered in worship services of various contemporary religious groups laying great stress on religious and emotional fervor."

Proponents see it as a religious prairie fire sweeping the grass roots of American religion. They say they hope it will breathe new life and vitality into what they call "the cold and sterile" church.

FEAR EFFECTS

Many church leaders differ. They fear that growth of Glossolalia could deal great harm to organized religion because of its dividing nature.

It is related in the New Testament in the Book of Acts, chapter 2, when the Apostles gathered at Jerusalem 50 days after Easter:

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully gone, they were all with one accord in one place.

"And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

"And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

"And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance."

Speaking with tongues has been a characteristic of the Pentecostal movement since it sprang up shortly after 1900.

In the last five years, the practice appeared in some Baptist, Presbyterian and Episcopal churches.

A Lift for Living

Knowing How to Wait Secret Of Living the Life of Faith

By REV. HAROLD E. KORN

Now across America the amber hours of autumn swiftly pass, as the year rushes toward its close, farmers garner the harvest-crowned crops from the thrilled earth. The fruits of the good land are harvested and heaped high in fields and barnsets, wagons, trucks and bins. All that the vital seeds, the fertile earth, the kindly rains and the impartial sun could do this growing season has been done, and now before the yellow light of autumn fades away, a grateful people look upon this bounty — one mighty harvest-basket, nation - wide and continent - deep, we breathe relief and murmur thanks.

Last spring this plenteous gift of Heaven was only a promise made by tiny seeds, rich fields and generous skies. Now it is man's sustaining food. What has happened between early spring and mid-autumn to make for this bounteous harvest? Obviously the farmer has been busy plowing, sowing, cultivating, reaping. Yet, of all the hours that have passed from spring until now, he has spent only a small fraction of them on any crop. And of all the energy invested in the fruits of the earth, agricultural experts say the energy of man and his machines represents only five percent; the rest comes from such natural sources as sunlight and the earth's warmth. So what has man done? He has worked, but mostly he has waited, hopefully, trustfully, believing that when he has done his best he can then patiently abide nature's response. God's goodness, man's effort, plus waiting is the formula for crops.

But the farmer's waiting is not idle waiting. He accomplishes what man can do while he waits for God to do what man can never do. Between sowing and harvesting, does he sit on his tractor all day, watching the fields for sign of life, fidgeting, nervously tapping his fingers on the steering wheel? Does he go along the rows of root crops pulling up all his carrots and beets to see if they are thriving? Does he forfeit his days with worry and his nights with anxious sleeplessness? Of course not!

From the day he puts his seed spreader away until he hitches up his harvest machines, the farmer buries himself with such tasks as can be performed in the meantime. Are there cattle to be milked and fattened? Very well, he attends to these tasks. Is there hay to be cut and raked? He cuts and rakes it. Are there crops that mature early before fall harvest, such as wheat, oats, rye and barley? Then he cuts, threshes, stores or sells them. The good husbandman must do much waiting, but he does not wait idly. He waits productively, creatively.

In the Bible waiting is never glum, helpless hand-folding idleness. Nor is it simply a numb endurance while undergoing testing. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." So promised Isaiah, the prophet (Isaiah XL:31). "They that wait" in the Bible will not be found sitting under a shade tree or dozing in a hammock while hoping for help from God. Nor will they be seen frantically pacing the floor, fretfully "sweating out" God's delayed answers to their pleas. Faithful waiting means trusting God will do for us what we cannot do for ourselves, and it also means filling the waiting-time with meaningful tasks. While Israel-Ites waited for deliverance from their enemies they attended to the fields that must be plowed, sown, cultivated, harvested. They herded, pastured and tred cattle, sheep and goats. Ships and nets were kept in good condition for fishing. Families were housed, clothed and fed. The welfare of the community was promoted. God would come to the aid of His people and deliver them from trouble. Exactly when, they did not know. But, in the meantime there was much to be done. To God's people, trustful waiting meant productive waiting.

Knowing how to wait is one of the secrets of living the life of faith.

SOMETHING WORTHWHILE

Some people crave sleep and struggle for it. If it does not come within an hour they become panicky, provoked, or discouraged. The more they determine they must sleep, the more elusive sleep becomes. We cannot force ourselves to sleep, but we can pray for it, expect it and wait for it and in the meantime do something worthwhile. Pick up a book and read. Make a list of the people who have blessed your life in the past year, some to whom you should speak some word of appreciation or send a note of thanks. Plan your next vacation. Sleep is like a buttered fly: chase it and it flees from you; busy yourself doing something else and it may come and light upon your shoulder. While waiting the blessings of sleep, do something worthwhile in the meantime.

Here is a woman whose husband, prominent in his community and a hero to his children, confesses that he has been unfaithful to his marriage vows. Both come seeking help to save their marriage. They are crushed emotionally, spiritually. She wants to know, "When will I again feel I can trust him?" "How can I wait out the weeks and the months until I am assured he loves me and will be true to me?" The husband wonders how he can endure the months ahead when he is severed from his illicit relationship and must let the wrong infatuation die. How can he bear the interval of waiting while he attempts to regain some trust and peace at home? Both of these people have sought forgiveness for past wrongs done to each other. What now? The answer is that they must now wait for a healing of heir deep wounds, but they must wait creatively and not idly.

Infidelity is less a symptom of physical sex wantonness than it is of deep self-doubt that seeks reassurance through sex conquest, or it is symptomatic of resentment that seeks revenge against the spouse. Since this is so, marriage partners need to spend some of their waiting time finding counsel and gaining insight into their urges that entice them into wrongdoing and into hurting each other.

WAIT CREATIVELY

While they are waiting they can practice being together at the times and places and under the circumstances that give them maximum enjoyment. They can plan surprising little deeds of thoughtfulness and consideration for each other and practice the courtesies that were present in their courtship and so easily forgotten in marriage. They can spend hours together in the places that strengthen and deepen their inner life, such as in worship, Spiritual healing, like physical healing, takes time and the ill and the hurt must wait, and wait creatively.

One man of my acquaintance, who daily deals with pain from an incurable affliction, testifies that, while waiting for sedation to take effect, he studies difficult books in the fields of philosophy, science or history. He declares that this forces his pain into the background of his attention until powerful drugs can bring some relief.

Healing — both physical and other blessings come to us like autumn harvests, in due time and seldom with a rush. We all must learn to wait.

Trustful waiting is a glorious mixture of high expectation and significant action. It is hope for the future and doing something that counts — in the meantime.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

TORONTO — Four hundred chests swelled with justifiable pride in a convention room of the King Edward Hotel here this morning.

They are the men, with some ladies, dedicated to the well-being of the hockey-minded youngsters of the province. They hail from Gananoque on the east to Sarnia and Windsor and as far north as Sibley River.

They placed an unanimous stamp of approval on the first-term operations of the Ontario Minor Hockey Associate president Albert Watkins of Peterborough, first vice-president Doug Patterson of Stirling, and their directorate associates.

The "button-busting" came when secretary treasurer Gary McLeod announced the association topped all records in the 1963-64 season.

Under the OMHA aegis, Mr. McLeod told the delegates 83,124 Ontario youngsters had played hockey with 2,673 clubs. This was an increase over the former record established in the 1961-63 season.

These figures, he pointed out, did not include other affiliates of the Ontario Hockey Association such as the Toronto Hockey League and the Northern Ontario Hockey Association.

The trial agreement with the OHA to allow juveniles and in some cases midgets to play junior hockey in C and D towns, and still play minor hockey had been quite successful, President Watkins told the delegates. He recorded further extension of the plan.

He drew attention to an unusual incident, that of a club threatening the Association with a lawsuit. It had been amicably settled, he said.

While nothing had been decided at this writing, the delegates were asked to approve sixteen amendments. Those included the establishment of a series for the "novice group," formerly squirts; uniform rates for referees; chin strapped helmets, and a "no body-checking at centre ice" rule for bantams and under eliminated.

Delegates were reminded that no OMHA team or affiliated local league team can play in any tournament unless they receive permission from the OMHA secretary—then only in sanctioned tournaments.

The permission carries the warning that tournaments cannot interfere with OMHA playoffs. A team's first obligation is OMHA playoffs where dates conflict.

Delegates were also reminded that not more than three abbreviated games in 24 hours will be permitted. They were likewise asked to keep in mind that roughhouse hockey in tournaments or exhibition games will not be overlooked by the OMHA. Suspensions will be handed out the same way as any regular OMHA playoff game.

Many top hockey men and dignitaries attended the post-convention banquet where they heard an outstanding address by Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League. More about this Monday.

Mayor Philip Givens of Toronto was present with his city's greetings, as were representatives of other hockey organizations. A special guest was the famous "Mr. Hockey," W. A. Hewitt.

Off-beat chats with minor hockey men from all parts of the province indicate that Young Canada is doing better work along the lockstep of hockey fundamentals that is their's still stands on a rock-bound foundation.

You will be getting a change of columnar fare next week when this agent takes off on a week's vacation. I'm not Florida-bound but hope to see what a football game looks like from the sidelines.

Minor Hockey Results

A couple of shutouts, one outstanding individual performance and two close battles featured minor hockey action in the tyke and squirt divisions here last night.

SQUIRT

Torpedo whitewashed the Wings 6-0. Grant Keegan sparked the winners with a pair of goals. Others were divided among John Venutti, Paul Williams, Tim Matha and Wallace Gaynor.

The other squirt game saw Bruins and Canadiens tie 2-2. Richard Burnett and David Flesch were the Bruin marksmen. Tommy Coughlin and David Webster had Canadiens' goals and Peter McCabe had a pair.

TYKE

Wings blanked the Hawks by a 3-0 count with one player doing all the scoring. John Ross triggered the Wing trio.

Bruins also got a three-goal effort from John Ashley, while nipping the Canadiens 3-2. Stephen MacDonald and Bruce Sutherland scored the losers' goals.

Leafs outscored the Rangers 9-5. Peter Crawford was a one-man scoring machine for Maple Leafs with his club's first three goals and after Rangers Tommy Gee, slammed home the final five. Barry Marin had three for the Rangmen. Tommy Coughlin and Larry Waite got the other pair.

$10,000 Stud Fee ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Taylor Retiring 'Northern Dancer'

TORONTO (CP) — Northern Dancer, winner of this year's Kentucky Derby, will enter stud next year at the National Stud Farm near Oshawa, owner E. P. Taylor announced Friday.

Taylor said he was retiring the Dancer to stud at a fee of $10,000 a pair of mares from United States breeders to let him stand at stud in the U.S. or syndicate ownership for $1,500,000. The millionaire financier said he would have had one-third of the shares, but decided to keep the three-year-old colt in Canada.

Northern Dancer, Canada's greatest money - winning thoroughbred with purses totalling $580,847 in fewer than two seasons, nicked a tendon in a workout at Belmont last July. The injury failed to respond to treatment properly, leaving the Dancer's 1964 earnings at $450,812.

"It's a sad situation," Taylor said. "He might have won $1,000,000 in one year, and that's never been done."

Taylor, whose horses have won eight Queen's Plates, said the horse's 1963 stud book is already full and the colt will service 25 to 30 mares next year, among them will be Mesodina, Canadian Oaks' winner last year, and Wonder Where, Canada's Horse of the Year in 1959.

WON 14 OF 18

Northern Dancer won 14 of 18 races before his injury and was the first Canadian-bred horse to win the juvenile title in the United States triple crown. Never finishing worse than third, his racing highlights were a record two minutes flat time in the 1¼-mile Kentucky Derby and a seven - length victory in the Queen's Plate, which proved to be the last in his career.

He added the Preakness to his Kentucky Derby win and Belmont Stakes, third race in the triple crown. Instead, he won $100,000 in one year, and that's never been done.

He is the foremost of six stakes winners by Nearctic, a son of Nearco, and the first foal of Natalma, a daughter of Native Dancer. Last month at the annual sale of Taylor's Windfields Farm, a full sister of Northern Dancer sold for $100,000.

Mrs. Richard C. Dupont, owner of Kelso, is among the Americans who have contracted for Northern Dancer's stud services. Canadian breeders include Mac Bell of Calgary and George Gardiner, Bill Beasley and Larkin Maloney, all of Toronto.

The Dancer's lifetime earnings far exceeded the previous best by Victoria Park, another Windfields Farm product whose 1960 Queen's Plate victory helped him to purses totalling $250,076.

Both Northern Dancer and Victoria Park were representative of Taylor's great career in breeding and racing. They were among five Windfields Farm horses passed by at the annual sale who went on to Plate victories.

In the 1963 sale, no one believed the diminutive Dancer was big enough to warrant the $25,000 asking price. Dub trainer Horatio Luro of Argentina, the Dancer was five of his first seven races in Canada, drew international attention with a 1:35 3-5 mile last fall in the Remsen Stakes, and went to the post in the 1964 Queen's Plate a 1-0 favorite.

Taylor planned to give the horse a vacation after his Queen's Plate and return him to competition in the Travers Stakes at Saratoga Aug. 27. The colt's injury, caused when he sickled the inside tendon on his left forefoot, ended those plans and any further hopes Taylor might have had.

Baseball's Summit Meeting

Commissioner To Regain Power

By JOE REICHLER

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Major league club owners prepare today to vote for the restoration of the baseball commissioner's full power with unlimited jurisdiction over the game.

The move is an all-out effort to regain public confidence and stem the tide of criticism from press and public alike.

This decision, arrived at during the second day of the three-day summit meeting of the baseball brass here was viewed as a personal triumph for outgoing commissioner Ford Frick although the measure will be the one to reap its full benefits.

Nevertheless, Frick probably gained more stature in two days here than in all his 14 years as baseball czar.

In what probably was the most forceful straight-from-the-shoulder speech of his life, the white-thatched former newspaper man warned the owners they had eliminate the clauses which reduced his power and made him little more than chairman of the board of directors.

DEMANDS SUPPORT

"If your new baseball commissioner is to function successfully, if he is to provide the desired leadership and if he is to have the main tain the public image that baseball desires, he must be given the unquestioned authority and loyal support required to do the job," Frick told the owners and general managers.

They agreed and from their leader, the owners Friday unanimously approved his recommendations. They immediately set machinery in motion for adoption of a number of the commissioner's proposals designed to restore and maintain public confidence.

They agreed to equip the next commissioner with the same powers enjoyed by baseball's first czar, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, but denied to his successors by two constitutional changes.

Another positive action expected to be taken today at the joint session would prohibit expansion of the major leagues for at least the next three years.

In separate action, the American League recommended that after 1965 consideration be given to starting the World Series on a Saturday instead of the customary Wednesday.

Also recommended was that weekday games be played at night at the option of the host team, depending on location, weather and other factors. The National League made no such recommendation.

Cassius Promises Cut Up

BOSTON (AP) — Cassius Clay promised Friday to cut up at the weigh-in for his Nov. 16 heavyweight championship bout with Sonny Liston despite a $2,500 bond put up as insurance against any shenanigans.

"I'll still cut up," Clay told reporters after his workout. "I'll lose $2,500. It will be a great show for $5,000. What's $2,500 when you can make $4,000,000 for each fight?"

Clay, claiming Liston is "scared to death," referred to Thursday's announcement by the state boxing commission that each fighter must put up a $2,500 bond as insurance there won't be a repetition of the trouble Clay caused at the weighin for the Miami bout in which he won the title from Liston.

In Miami, Clay raised such a ruckus that one of the attending physicians thought he was undergoing a nervous breakdown. He was finally dissuaded to be allowed to fight that night.

Perhaps Beatles Cut In

TORONTO (CP) — Ron Turner and his curling rink introduced electronics to curling here Thursday night.

The skip used a walkie-talkie radio to call the shots in an effort to overcome the noise from neighboring rinks. Turner said the strain on his vocal cords but his rink lost 9-7 in a match at the Royal Canadian Curling Club.

Raps Cheap Penalties

Fontinato's Outlook Changed

ORANGEVILLE, Ont. (CP)—Lou Fontinato, who had more than his share of penalties in the National Hockey League, has a different outlook as a coach.

Fontinato, who set a record for the number of penalties in one season, is coach of Orangeville Hornets in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior C Series.

He has almost recovered from a near crippling injury he suffered while playing with Montreal Canadiens during the 1962-63 season. The former New York Ranger smashed two vertebrae in his spine, leaving him almost completely paralyzed. He spent several months in a cast that covered his entire upper body and needed a year of therapy to regain use of his limbs.

"I play it different as a coach. He lectures his charges before the game about taking too many penalties.

"I didn't tell them to play the game in a panty-waist style," he says. "You can't have them bolding back to avoid penalties. This game has to be played all out. I just told them to avoid cheap ones."

He describes himself as a combination of the "fatherly" type coach and the fire-and brimstone kind."

Cattle and coaching are his main interests. He is farming full time near Guelph where he got his start in hockey as a junior. He has a herd of 90 beef cattle and is an authority on the market and grading of the cattle.

This season, Fontinato had several offers to coach, but the Orangeville job gave him a chance to return to hockey without leaving his farm and family.

He had been in hockey since I was about 12 years old," he said. "Now it's good to be back. I know that I took a lot of good coaching to turn me into an NHL player and I hope I can pass some of it along to these boys."

Boy Dies After Injury

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A University of Pennsylvania junior varsity football player died Friday of what university officials said was a rare complication from a broken leg suffered in a game against Harvard at Cambridge, Mass., last Saturday. Allen Buday, 18, of Springfield, Mass., died at 6:40 a.m. at the University of Pennsylvania Hospital.

Dr. Paul Schrode, medical director of student health at the university, said Buday's death was caused by a "fat embolism," fat entering into the bloodstream and then into the lungs and heart.

Schrode said the cause was a complication resulting from the leg fracture.

Key Men Hurt

Belleville Led 3-0
Picton Rallies For Tie

By GARRY ALEXANDER
Staff Sportswriter

Trailing 3-0 early in the second period, the Picton Mercants battled back to gain a 4-4 tie with the Belleville "B's" in a junior hockey exhibition here last night.

Belleville threatened to repeat their 10-5 win over the visitors, gained a slight carrier, until about the mid-way point in the game. Picton came to life and it was a 2-2 tilt going into the third heat. Belleville had led 2-0 after twenty minutes of play.

Again in the third, the "B's" moved ahead, at 7.42. Bob Boyle scored the goal on a solo effort. He carried up centre, avoided a half-hearted stick check and slid a low shot to the far corner.

The 4-3 margin was short-lived. Less than a minute later Billy Hopkins found the range from close in to complete the scoring.

Both sides missed good close in chances later and the Merchant chances were cut greatly when they were assessed six of the seven penalties handed out in the third period. Belleville held a two-man advantage briefly on two occasions without doing anything about it.

All in all, Picton drew seven penalties and Belleville five. All were minors and did not figure in the scoring.

Bruce Stewart, assisted by Jim "Bud" Pringle opened the scoring at 10.56 of the first. Seconds later Jim Woodcock clicked on a loner play to make it 2-0.

Bill Lang gave the homiters their 3-0 lead after 5.47 of the second period. He broke in quickly from the right side and dumped the disc between Holmes' pads. Bob Ethier had started the play.

Harold Haddock, felled when in since at 8.00, came back to get Picton's initial goal at 9.06. He skirted the defence and fooled Moon in close. Denis Langlois assisted.

John Todd pounced on a rebound to make it 3-2 at 13.02. Billy Hicks and Ron Riley drew the assists. Bart Frederick out scraped a Belleville player for the puck near the blueline and raced in to tie it at 17.02. Paul Jones gained an assist.

Both goalies, Belleville's Bob Moon and Picton's Larry Holmes, were called on for some hot stops from close-in and through scrambles.

Belleville coach Gordie Bell dressed 17 players, attempting to get an idea of the club's strength for the loop opener next week. He said a final decision as to his opening lineup would be made after Sunday's practice.

PICTON: Holmes, Langlois, Pettingill, Haddock, Ethart, Riley, Todd, Hopkins, Hasenfratz, Flake, Frederick, Hicks, Jones.

BELLEVILLE: Moon, Ethier, Boyle, Marsele, Woods, Townsend, Richmond, Stewart, Pringle, Woodcock, Pringle, Moore, Bennett, Lang, Prentice, Moore, Bennett.

Speed isn't everything in hockey. Several players in recent years edged right out of the National Hockey League. Every time one of these teammates got the puck, they'd race down the ice. They won but the trouble was that the time they spoiled the play because they were offsides, beat the puck carrier over the line.

Take Chicago's Stan Mikita, the 1964 National Hockey League scoring champion. He's quick. But he's in the medium class as far as skating goes.

Stan seems to me never in much of a hurry unless he has open ice all the way to the net. I think he plays more headier, slower type of hockey, yet he's moving.

When you talk about quickness, he has real quick moves with the arms and the stick. He can handle and control that puck just about as cleverly as anyone in the league.

He has everything. He has a good shot. He can pass equally well to both sides. He's got strong legs.

There's just one point you might fault him on. He hesitates too long a lot of times in getting the puck away. This results in his getting hit a lot. He's not a big man. He must be very well conditioned to take the knocks he does.

On the other hand, this is a calculated risk on his part. He's waiting for a teammate to get into a hole, sacrificing himself.

He reminds me of Doug Harvey who won the James Norris Memorial Trophy seven times in his last nine years in the NHL. Doug took all the time in the world to get the puck away, then did it with split second timing that was tremendously effective.

Stan is like the quarterback who passes. You give him an extra couple of seconds of protection when he's back in the pocket and he can wait until his receiver gets downfield and starts cutting.

In hockey, you're in front of the net fighting for your freedom, trying to get your stick on the good side. Some guy's holding you. You give a couple more jerks to get your stick free and Stan will wait for you until you shake yourself free. Stan will be high in points for years to come.

Early Skirmish
Braves' Petition Denied

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee County claimed victory today in the first two rounds of its legal skirmish to prevent the Braves from moving to Atlanta.

The case was returned to state courts Friday as U.S. district Judge Robert E. Tehan denied the baseball club's petition to take jurisdiction.

Judge Tehan ruled that the bulk of the Braves' business is carried on in Milwaukee despite the move of executive offices to Chicago Oct. 5 and there is no "diversity of citizenship" as claimed by the club.

The court action returned the case to Milwaukee circuit court, where the county obtained a temporary order restraining the Braves from moving Oct. 21, within hours of the club's vote to move to Atlanta in 1965. No date has been set for further circuit court action.

Judge Tehan noted that the Braves did not move any furniture equipment from their Milwaukee offices to Chicago, bank accounts are maintained both in Milwaukee and Chicago and the club's principal debt is a $1,000,000 loan from a Milwaukee bank.

The Braves had contended that farm clubs represent a major portion of the corporation's assets, the county officials argued that 84 per cent of the team's total revenue, or $2,371,-158, was generated from operations in Milwaukee.

Gino's Toe Wins For Patriots

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gino Cappelletti, who makes a habit of winning American Football League games for Boston Patriots with his toe—often in the last few minutes — did it again Friday night.

Cappelletti earned the Patriots a 25-24 victory over Houston Oilers with a 43-yard field goal on the last play of the game.

The kick saved an important game for Boston, which trails undefeated Buffalo Bills by two games. Buffalo is at New York Sunday and the Patriots, who haven't met the Bills this season, are hoping for some help from the Jets.

In other Sunday games, Oakland Raiders are at Kansas City Chiefs and San Diego Chargers play at Denver Invaders.

In the National League Sunday, the key game may probably be between Washington Redskins and Cleveland Browns while Baltimore Colts battle Chicago Bears, St. Louis Cardinals play Pittsburgh Steelers, Detroit Lions visit Green Bay Packers, Dallas Cowboys are at New York Giants, Philadelphia Eagles are at Los Angeles Rams and San Francisco 49ers meet Minnesota Vikings.

The Redskins' high-weight offence may hold the key to the Eastern Division title.

Batting 6-for-7
U.S. Equestrians 'Riding Hot'

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States equestrian team continued its relentless drive toward the team championship in the National Horse Show Friday night, when Frank Chapot of Wallpack, N.J., captured the Good Will Trophy before a Madison Square Garden crowd of 13,000.

Chapot took the Good Will Trophy after a jumpoff. The victory ran the United States record to 6-for-7. Only young Jim Day of Toronto, who won the first event of the show for Canada, has been able to move in on the United States monopoly. The Good Will victory gave the United States 85 points in the team title race while Canada is second with 30, followed by Argentina with 21, Mexico with 7 and Brazil with 5.

Chapot moved into the individual lead with 24 points, ahead of teammate Kathy Kusner of Arlington, Va., with 22.

Chapot, riding Mazos, and Tom Gaylord of Aurora, Ont., up on the mount of Trocar, were two riders who managed to go clean in the jump - off. Chapot was timed at 35.3 seconds and Gayford in 42.

In the afternoon competition for the Maclay Trophy, the United States team won so emphatically that Chapot did not even ride.

The event called for the best three scores of the four riders to be counted.

The United States team had 114 faults, all compiled by Shapiro, to 22½ for second place Argentina, 34 by Canada, 36 by Brazil and 36 by Mexico.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — An annual award bearing the name of Jim Ellery, the late secretary and publicity director of the American Hockey League will be given to the hockey writer or broadcaster making an outstanding contribution to the rink - team league. The award was announced Friday by Jack Riley, the AHL president.

Americans Add To Slim Lead

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rochester Americans scored 2-1 American Hockey League victory over Providence Reds Friday night to pad their narrow lead in the league's Western Division.

But Eddie Giacomin was the only standing between them and a score in both figures as he defied Rochester to do their best in the third period and turned them back.

Giacomin handled 19 shots in the third period while Americans' goalie Jerry Cheevers lost his shutout streak of seven Providence shots — by Jimmy Bartlett — slipped past him midway in the bow of the play.

In the only other game in the nine-team league Friday night, Hershey Bears scored three times in a minute and 22 seconds of the third period for a 6-3 win over Cleveland Barons.

GO AHEAD

The win bounced Hershey one point ahead of Cleveland into second place in the Eastern Division with 12 points, 10 behind leading Quebec Aces.

Les Emmerson got the first Rochester goal, and his first of the season, while teammate Ed Ellett-Lambert was serving a penalty. Stan Smrke scored six minutes later.

Cleveland had a 3-1 lead early in the second period on their game on goals by Doug Senior, Gordon Gillis and Joe Szura after Wayne Rivers had scored on the first shot of the game for Hershey.

But before the second period was over, Bruce Draper and the Danny Poilliard squared the score, setting the stage for the third-period outburst.

Marlboros, Flyers Get Wins

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oshawa Generals dropped from a first-place tie with Niagara Flyers in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series Friday night to a second-place tie with Toronto Marlboros — and the Generals weren't even playing.

The Flyers pushed into solo possession of first place by defeating Kitchener Rangers 7-3 after spotting the Rangers the first goal. Toronto moved into a tie with Oshawa by potting two unanswered third period goals that defeated Montreal Junior-Canadiens 4-3.

At Toronto, Al Osborne, Bert Olmstead, Paul Laurent and Jack Chipchase scored the Toronto goals in a see-saw battle that saw the Marlboros with a 1-0 lead after the first and the Canadiens leading 3-2 after the second.

For Montreal, Norm Fargeon, Rene Drolet and Craig Patrick scored all the goals in the second period after Toronto had taken a 4-3 lead.

The Flyers, on home ice, pounded in three goals after Peter Conacher opened the first period scoring for Kitchener. Niagara Falls led 6-3 after the second period.

Brennan added another in the third period for Kitchener. Tom Miller and other Ranger marksman. For the Flyers, goals were scored by Gillies, Cercecchia, Rod Dobrecky, Don Marcotte, Ted Snell, Bri Golden worthy, Jean Pronovost and Brian Bradley.

"I'm The Leader"

Meet Mosca's Meanies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Angelo Mosca has picked an all-mean team from the Canadian Football League.

The Hamilton Tiger - Cats' two-way tackle declares himself the leader, ready to fill in "the moment just one of these guys shows the slightest sign of charity."

Mosca is quoted by the Vancouver Sun as naming these men in a telephone interview to make up his all-Canadian meanies:

Corner linebacker Ron Brewer, Toronto; linebacker Bobby Kuntz, Hamilton; tackle Billy Joe Booth, Ottawa; tackle Ron Atkinson, Saskatchewan; safety Oscar Kruger and linebacker Al Kozyra, Edmonton; defensive end Herb Gray and tackle Cornell Piper, Winnipeg; defensive end Dick Fouts, safety Neal Beaumont and linebacker Tom Brown of British Columbia.

Kuntz wins the honors as possessing, pound for pound, more pure cussedness than anyone in Canadian football."

Brown is "so aggressive and so mobile and hits so hard that I don't really know if he's just plain good, or mean, or both."

Marshal Dillon of Gunsmoke Has No Time to Spend Money

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jim Arness didn't look like a man who had just made $1,800,000

That was what CBS had paid him for the rights to 84 hour-long Gunsmoke shows, of which he owned 50 per cent. It was yet another bonanza (poor choice of word) for the outsized actor from Minneapolis who appears to be earning more out of the old west than the Southern Pacific Railroad.

But Arness has no time to spend his fortune. He still lives in the same Pacific Palisades home he shares with his three children: Craig, 17, Jenny Lee, 14, Rolf, 11.

Travel? His trips are limited to the drive between home and CBS's studio centre (formerly Republic).

"I don't get much chance for vacation," Arness said. "When you're doing 34-hour shows a season, that doesn't allow for a great deal of time off. We get a couple of weeks in the summer and a couple at Christmas time, but likely I'll spend it at home with the kids. I'm usually too worn down to go anywhere."

Don't get the idea that Jim is seeking sympathy for his lot as Dodge City's stalwart marshal. Still, the job at Matt Dillon has its problems.

"It's pretty hard to come up with anything new after 10 years with a show," he said. "As an actor, it's a constant struggle to keep your enthusiasm fired up. Every now and then something will happen with an actor or a scene that will make me come alive. Then the whole thing is worth it."

AT THE PARK — Tuneful Tennessee Ernie Ford, Kaye Stevens and Thomas John their voices in one of the seven singing numbers featured in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's romantic comedy "Looking For Love", showing at the Park Theatre for seven days starting Monday. Also featured in the film, together with Johnny Carson, George Hamilton, Voyle Minnick and Paula Prentiss, with the cast also heralding Jane Morgan, Diana Oliver, Joey Baker, Barbara Nichols and Jay C. Flippen. On the same program, Elvis Presley in "Kissin' Cousins". Last complete show at 6.40 p.m.

Kitchener Rink Gets 12-7 Win

CHICAGO (CP-AP) — Wendell Finley's Kitchener rink defeated John Holloway's Chicago foursome 12-7 Friday in the sixth draw of the International Mixed Bonspiel at Chicago's Saddle and Cycle Club.

Three other Chicago rinks swept their way to victory in other sixth draw matches.

Ed Prosser's quartet beat Jack Rutherford's Scarborough, Ont. rink 13-8 and W. Melville Cribbs' group downed Ernie Lock's Burlington, Ont., rink 11-9 in the two involving Canadians. A Cleveland rink lost to Chicago in the other match.

Other results included: St. Thomas, Ont. (Ed Smith) 10, Chicago Exmoor (Perry Pennington) 8 Copetown, Ont. (Jack Windsor) 11 Chicago North Shore (Dudley Woodman) 5.

Make That First Shot Count

Picture a beautiful fall morning in the hills. In the middle of colored cover a big setter ranges ahead of three woodcock hunters — my son, a companion of the same age, and yours truly. The big dog slows his pace, makes four a cautious point, and then comes down on a solid point. Quickly the two boys move out on the wings while I, in the centre, walk in slowly behind the dog.

Out of the fallen leaves bursts a brown rocket, twisting and towering in his flight, and dodging for safety among the short second growth. From each side of the dog come two fast, hurried shots; the bird keeps on going. Then comes a fifth shot, this one from the centre position, and the little woodcock drops to the leaves once more.

"Fetch, Spot." I call to the dog who goes in for the retrieve. I open my gun and the ejected shell flips over my shoulder as I slip a fresh shell into the chamber, meanwhile making acid comments on the shotgun Landing of my youthful companions. "When," I ask them, "are you two fellows going to learn to make that first shot count?"

DOOMED TO FAILURE

All of us do it. I, who have known better for about 50 years still find myself punching out that first shot when a deliberate, accurate shot would have killed the bird and with plenty of time to spare. After all, in wing shooting split seconds do count, but the proper spacing of those split seconds can make the difference between success and failure. The shooting done properly, is a smooth flow of coordinated reflexes. But you can depend upon it — once you make the mistake of hurrying or "jamming" one of these reflexes your shot is doomed to failure, nine times out of 10.

When Dick (that's my son) and his shooting companion whom we will call Joe (because that is not his name) were in high school, the three of us were gunning together every fall. Joe shot a "corn sheller" — a beat-up old pump gun that looked and ils way through a box of shells with alarming — and expensive — celerity. Try as I would, I simply could not persuade that boy to slow down. A bird would flush; bang-bang-bang would go the pump gun, and the bird would go its way, unharmed.

Then one day a fortunate thing happened, right midway in the woodcock season; Joe's pump gun ceased to function and had to be returned to the factory. Of course he appealed to me, instead of filling him out with another twelve-gauge, I tried an experiment. The only gun I would let him use was a little .410 double, chambered for 2½ inch shells.

Joe looked at the gun with obvious misgivings. "Don't look for much power," I told him, "but little gun will kill birds for you. All you need to do is to learn to point it."

The next woodcock to flush in front of Joe took off in its typical, erratic flight, now swung low to his shoulder, pivoted with the bird in smooth, unhurried motion, and squeezed the trigger. Down came the woodcock, stone dead. Joe's mouth dropped open in disbelief; then he looked at me and grinned. In the space of the next two weeks that boy changed from a very bad wing shot into a very good wing shot. With that little gun (a .410 is considered a prefect gun for grouse, rabbits and even big-tough ringneck pheasant roosters), I say, almost overnight, he became an excellent wing shot, rarely missing. He had learned that excellent precept of gunning — making that first shot count.

The same rule holds good for the rifle, just as it does for the shotgun. A buck deer walks into a clearing and stands there, testing the wind. He is a big deer with a good rack, a fine trophy. In your anxiety you hurry that first shot, and miss. Now the buck is running; nothing for it but to "shoot at the pile." Chances are you will miss again or hit him in a non-vital spot. Then come the inevitable hours of tracking a wounded deer, if you are lucky, or you may find him. But all if that extra work and worry could have been avoided had you taken another split second of time with that first shot.

So this season, set up your own ritual to be performed each day you go out. Say to yourself, as a reminder, "The first shot in this gun is the crucial, all-important shot — the big one. Make it count."

SELL ALL SEATS

BALTIMORE (AP) — Baltimore Colts announced Friday that all 60,215 seats in Memorial Stadium have been sold for the National Football League games with Minnesota Vikings Nov. 15. It will be the sixth straight sellout for the Colts this season. They lead the Western Conference.

Where Is Chuvalo's Opponent?

HULL, Que. (CP) — Jean Belleau, boxing promoter for Monday night's scheduled bout between Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo and unranked Don Warner of Philadelphia, said Friday he is concerned about whether Warner will show up.

Warner was due to arrive here Thursday for a wo-kout but didn't show. Belleau said the fighter missed a plane connection and returned to Philadelphia to finish training.

"We have another good boy lined up just in case Warner doesn't arrive," Belleau told reporters.

This one is Wendell Newton, 25, of New York, also unranked who recently returned from a tour of Europe.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: How long is the Trans-Canada Highway? Where does it start and stop? How much did it cost? — J. W., Belleville

ANSWER: The Trans-Canada Highway is 5,000 miles long and starts at St. John's Newfoundland, and stops at Victoria, British Columbia. The cost of joining them — over $1 billion.

QUESTION: We are thinking of hunting moose this winter. How far must we go to find them, and when are they out of season? Are there highways which will take us to all the moose hunting sections? — B. B., Odessa

ANSWER: As this would take up too much space to answer, I suggest you contact the local Chamber of Commerce for literature or write to the Department of Lands and Forests, Parliament Buildings, Toronto. They have a booklet named "Hunting Regulations" which they would be glad to send you along with other pertinent information.

QUESTION: We are holidaying in Florida next month and would like a list of cottages or cabins near Fort Lauderdale. Could you tell me of them, or where I can get literature that will tell me where to find these places? Also could you tell me the fastest route down? — Miss L. T., Belleville ANSWER: If you write the Fort Lauderdale Tourist Association, they would be happy to send you information and brochures on places to stay in Fort Lauderdale area. Also write to the chamber of commerce. To drive to Florida the fastest way, I suggest you take No. 31 from Watertown and continue south to No. 11, and then No. 81, No. 46, No. 3 and then 301 all the way to Florida. If you wish a change of scenery on the way back, try Highway No. 15.

QUESTION: We are going to Florida and would like a list of places of interest. Could you name the places or can you give us the address where we should write? — Miss H., Belleville.

ANSWER: This is a pretty big order, but we can give you a few of the most widely known places, such as Cape Kennedy, Marine Studio, Everglades National Park, Monkey Jungle, Cypress Gardens, Hialeah Park, Parrot Jungle. There are many more attractions. If you write to Travel and Publicity Commission, Tallahassee, Florida, they would be pleased to send you brochures and literature.

Canada is the second largest country in the world. Yet its population is only 18 million, and has the world's longest national highway.

Now is the time to have your service man get your car ready for winter. Have him show you block heaters, battery warmers, oil pan heaters. These items will help start your car on zero mornings. Using No. 10 oil and a good battery, you cannot miss.

Play it safe — use travellers' cheques when travelling.

If you are heading for Florida, check in hotels and motels before dusk. Otherwise you might be without accommodation, or have to pay a higher rate than planned.

THE ROOF IS NEARLY FINISHED and the penthouse is almost closed on the new Ontario Intelligencer building. The masons start work Monday to lay bricks for the main walls.

BELLEVILLE'S GROWING . . . EVERYDAY!

Today, acres of undeveloped land — tomorrow, a bright, new, west-end subdivision, "Glenarden".

"Glenarden" will represent the ultimate in subdivisions with unsurpassed municipal services. Such as complete underground wiring (no ugly poles or wires) paved roads with curbs (no dust), sewers, street lighting—even a municipal park contained within the subdivision. The streets will be arranged in quiet crescents allowing only slow, residential traffic. A variety of over 35 house models will insure an interesting design throughout the subdivision. Various sized lots are available too.

Probably the most important feature of "Glenarden" is the unprecedented low price of the homes themselves. Three bedroom brick bungalows begin at $13,950 — priced much below competition. Needless to say, all homes will contain the many extra features common to any "Rollins Home".

"Glenarden" is close to public and high schools, churches and public transportation.

Familiar Names In Running

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Voters in two federal byelections will be faced with some familiar names when they enter ballot booths today.

The elections are being held in Westmorland, where the death of Liberal Sherwood Rideout caused a vacancy in that New Brunswick riding, and in Waterloo South. The Ontario riding was left without a member due to the death of Progressive Conservative Gordon Chaplin. Both are three-way fights.

The Liberal candidate in Westmorland is Margaret Rideout, widow of the former member, while James Chapin, 31, is contesting his father's former seat.

The Liberal candidate in Waterloo South is Roderick Stewart, 30, who ran in the 1963 election as a New Democrat and switched parties prior to his nomination for this contest.

Other candidates in Westmorland are lawyer J. Ed. ward Murphy, Progressive Conservative, and a businessman Henry Landry of the New Democratic Party.

The NDP candidate in Waterloo South is businessman M. S. (Max) Saltsman, 43.

ELECTIONS TO BE OUT

Social Credit, which ran fourth in both ridings in the 1963 election, will not contesting either byelection.

Polls are open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.

In a statement issued in Moncton Saturday, Mr. Murphy said a Conservative win would "indicate to the do-nothing government in Ottawa that Westmorland is not satisfied with indecision and delay, revision and retreat."

His counterpart in Waterloo South, Mr. Chaplin, says Canadians are fed up with the lack of decision by the Liberal government.

Mr. Saltsman says voters are frustrated with both major parties and his party will benefit.

Mr. Stewart says the Conservatives are to blame for failure of action by the Liberals.

Mrs. Rideout and Mr. Landry both hit local issues in pre-election statements.

WANTS EQUALITY

Mr. Landry said the NDP is appalled "by the fact that Maritimers, students and fishermen earn less than their counterparts in other parts of Canada will continue to press for equal standards of living and a work."

Mr. Stewart's nomination in Waterloo South caused a split in the Liberal party in the constituency. Some members charged "manipulation" by the Ottawa hierarchy of the party.

The Westmorland riding has voted Liberal in 16 of 24 elections since 1867. It went solidly Liberal since 1940, except during the 1958 Diefenbaker landslide when it was won by lawyer W. L. M. Creaghan, now a judge.

The Waterloo South riding has a tradition of conservatism. Liberal Arthur White won a four-year term in 1953 and it was held by a farmer-labor candidate from 1935 to 1945. With these exceptions, Conservatives have held it except in the decade after Confederation and from 1882 to 1900.

SHOWINGS IN '63

In the 1963 general election in Westmorland, Mr. Rideout won 19,989 votes, Conservative Jean-Paul LeBlanc 19,356, New Democrat J. Edward McAllister 4,415 and Social John Bampton 1,145.

There were 48,500 eligible voters this year.

The late Mr. Chaplin polled 11,079 votes in 1963 and Donald Shaver polled 8,782 for the Liberals and Mr. Stewart picked up 7,403 for the NDP. Social Ted Bezar got 372. A total of 36,034 persons are eligible to vote.

Standings in the House of Commons are: Liberals 128, Conservatives 96, New Democrats 17, Creditistes 13 and Social Credit nine. There are no other vacancies.

Hastings South Member of Parliament Robert Temple left by air today to attend important forthcoming two-week NATO conference and tour of Canadian bases in Europe. His elder daughter, Michele, 3, watched him pack his briefcase.

S. Hastings Member To Head Delegation

Robert Temple, M.P. Hastings South, has been chosen to head Canada's political committee at the forthcoming NATO talks in Paris.

Mr. Temple leaves from Ottawa today with the parliamentary defence committee, on its annual tour of Canadian bases in Europe.

During the committee's visit, the conference of NATO parliamentarians is scheduled to start November 16th and continue through to November 20th.

Mr. Temple will deliver the keynote speech of the Canadian delegation.

Canadian bases included on the committee tour are Lahr and the RCAF No. 3 Wing at Zweibruecken.

Among his constituency activities last weekend before leaving for the NATO sessions was a speech by Mr. Temple to Liberals at Stoco.

In his remarks he emphasized the economic achievements of the Liberal government since taking office.

The present economic boom had vindicated the government's policies, he said.

It not only had restored order to the national finances but a budgetary surplus now was a surety.

Tire Blows - - 4 Dead

SMITHS FALLS (CP) — Two Toronto men and two girls, believed to have been hitchhikers, died today when their car blew a tire and struck a tree nine miles north of here on Highway 29. Three others were injured.

Dead are: Myrl Watson, 30, and Richard Dellabunt, 23, and two girls, believed to have been the girls, believed to have been identified.

Injured are Giovanni Berti, 20, and Fernande Sanche, 26, both of Toronto who are in hospital in Perth, and John Cooper, 34, also of Toronto, who was transferred to Kingston General Hospital in critical condition.

Says 36 Hours Lost in Recovery Of Bodies After TCA Disaster

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. H. B Cotnam, Ontario's supervising coroner, says 36 hours were wasted in the recovery of wreckage and bodies from last November's Trans-Canada Air Lines crash at Ste. Therese de Blainville, Que., because of a jurisdictional dispute at the scene.

He told a conference of Ontario coroners Saturday there was a dispute over who was in charge of the recovery project, the coroner, the police, TCA officials of the department of transport or representatives of the airplane manufacturer. The crash took 118 lives.

He said the dispute ended when the Quebec attorney-general ordered the local coroner to take charge.

Dr. Cotnam added the crash may force the courts to change their position on what is needed to prove death legally because positive m e d i c a l and documented evidence of identification was impossible to get at the scene.

He disclosed a master plan is being prepared by the Ontario government to cope with such tragedies, but gave no details

Dr. Cotnam also said there is a loophole in the province's cremation law that the government is taking steps to end.

Under Ontario legislation a crematorium must wait 48 hours after a coroner issues a cremation certificate before the body can be destroyed.

Some undertakers, especially in Windsor, are circumventing the law by taking the bodies into the U.S. for a "first one-hour job," Dr. Cotnam said.

"I can't understand this because Ontario is a no a tourism claim a proper job takes two or three hours. The relatives must be getting someone else's ashes," Dr. Cotnam said.

Today's Chuckle

Most girls' ambition is to make some man a good husband.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Warm weather is forecast to continue over the province for some time. However, a weak disturbance approaching Lake Superior is expected to move through central Ontario Tuesday with associated cloud cover and a few showers. This will be followed by temperatures in the central and northern regions Tuesday. Only slightly lower temperatures are forecast in southern localities.

Vatican Council Rejects Schema on Missionary Work

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican ecumenical council today voted down a missionary schema today and ordered it rewritten.

By a vote of 1,601 to 311, the Roman Catholic prelates meeting in St. Peter's Basilica ordered the document completely redrafted by the council's commission on missionaries.

The schema contains proposals on the need for mission, and the importance of cooperation and support for it in the church.

Pope Paul himself had underlined the importance he attached to it by attending the start of debate last Friday — something he has done for no other schema. He said there was much to be praised in it and that he expected it to be approved "easily."

The Pope said there was a need for some improvements — but he said nothing to indicate he favored the complete rewriting ordered today.

Almost as soon as he left the basilica after the introduction of the schema, it came under fire as too vague, too brief and inadequate.

Meanwhile, it was expected that the council's sharply debated religious liberty declaration will be ready for voting in a week from now, a qualified source said today.

It was reported as doubtful, however, whether the equally controversial declaration on the Jews would get back to the council fathers for a conclusive vote before the current council sessions end Nov. 21.

The religious liberty declaration contains twin statements upholding the freedom of conscience of every man in his spiritual beliefs and the separation of church and state in matters of religion.

The delegates question whether the vote outcome will allow Pope Paul and the council to proclaim the declaration as a finished decree.

That would depend on how many prelates cast votes of "approved but with reservations," in which case their written suggestions or reservations must be studied by a commission for incorporation into the document.

Party Leaders Meet - But No Agreement

OTTAWA (CP)—The politica party leaders concluded their current round of talks today apparently without agreeing to a program for the Commons during the coming weeks.

Prime Minister Pearson planned to outline the government's intentions for legislation and the flag debate later in the day.

This round of talks has been concluded and the prime minister will make a statement in the House describe and outline the program of business from now until Christmas, a Commons source said, as aids to the prime minister, told reporters after the 35-minute meeting.

The meeting was the third held in Mr. Pearson's office in an attempt to reach agreement on a time limit for debate on the Canadian flag proposed by Conservative House leader Diefenbaker declined to go beyond Mr. O'Hagan's announcement when he left the meeting. However, he is understood to have turned down a debating time limit and urged that the Conservatives go on with earlier proposal for a plebiscite on the flag issue before tackling the flag committee's recommendations.

"It's a dry well," commented NDP leader T. C. Douglas. Representatives of the other parties were Dr. Guy Marcoux (Quebec-Mercier) for Social Credit and Gilles Gregoire (Lapointe) for the Creditistes.

Mr. O'Hagan said the prime minister gave the leaders only a general indication of his plan to put under the particular pieces of business to be considered or the timing.

He said last Friday that it was a fair assumption if no agreed program could be worked out that the next few weeks would be devoted to the Canada Pension Plan, the national labor code, the redistribution bill and 1964-65 spending estimates, with the flag debate possibly coming on between Dec. 1 and 15.

Labor Likely to Win Vote Over Steel Nationalization

LONDON (CP)—The fledgling Labor government, with a parliamentary majority of only three, faces a crucial test in the Commons tonight over its proposal to nationalize steel. But though socialist ranks have been hit by illness, they are likely will win a paper-thin victory.

One reason is that two maverick Labor members have urged Prime Minister Harold Wilson's steel nationalization plan, have decided to support it rather than risk to help defeat a Conservative no confidence motion. Their argument, a spokesman said, is that the issue is likely to drag on for several years in Parliament and the House is urgency in condemning the measure at this stage.

Another reason, learned from the Conservative side, is that the Labor Party has a five-member majority in the House of Commons. But one member, Sir Alan Herbert, a Labor MP from Rotherham, is in hospital for an appendectomy. Another is nursing a sick baby at home and a third will hobble into the Commons with an injured leg.

A spokesman in the Tory whip's office said as far as he knew Labor's majority was a good shape but he hinted a "pairing" deal may be made with the Tories to keep an absentee from voting or be absent to balance O'Malley's absence.

Another Tory spokesman said his party doesn't want a government defeat at this early stage because it might give Wilson the opportunity to go to the country and settle the nationalization that the Tories were opposing Parliament.

Conservative House standing: Labor 317; Conservatives 303; Liberals nine. With the Speaker included, the total is 630 The Oct. 15 election returned 629 to the socialists power for the first time in 13 years.

The motion is an opposition censure of the government's defence, foreign affairs and steel industry under government control. Another no confidence motion, against the socialists' overall policies, comes Tuesday. This also may be defeated by a hairline margin.

Chinese Shower Cambodia With Verbal Support

PHNOM PENH (AP) — Cambodia observes its 11th independence day today showered with Chinese praise for its defiance of its anti-U.S. policies.

Following up its dispatch of Foreign Minister Chen Yi to the celebrations, the Peking regime sent an independence message from Premier Nonosm Sihanouk, the chief of state, again praising Cambodia's "heroic struggle against imperialism and its vassals."

The presence o. Chen Yi, also a deputy premier, demonstrated Peking's high regard for Cambodia, which is surrounded on the Indo-China peninsula by South Viet Nam, Thailand and Laos.

The message from Peking, signed by President Liu Shaochi and Premier Chou En-lai, said Cambodians "will always have the full support of the 650,000,000 Chinese people in their just struggle in defence of independence, neutrality and territorial integrity."

In his radio broadcast Sihanouk's reflection of U.S. aid.

Commons Has Lot On Mind

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons meets today with a lot of things on its mind—matters inside and outside the House.

First there is the Canada pension plan. The day has been set aside for a one-day debate on the government's resolution dealing with the much amended plan.

Adoption of the resolution will pave the way for introduction of the bill containing the details of the plan, scheduled later for extensive hearings in a Commons committee.

Another subject is expected to be a revival of the Hal Banks affair. Publication Friday by the Toronto Star of a story about $1,000 payments to each of five Liberal candidates by Mr. Bank's Seafarers' International Union (Ind) is sure to bring questions in the House.

Then Prime Minister Pearson is supposed to outline for the Commons the extent of agreement among the party leaders on what legislative business the Commons will consider in the next few weeks and where the proposed Canadian flag will fit into that schedule.

BYELECTIONS TODAY

While MPs' attention will be focused on these legislative concerns, they also will have one eye on the two federal byelections today.

In one the Liberals are trying to retain Westmoreland in New Brunswick and in the other the Progressive Conservatives are hoping to obtain a seat on Waterloo South in Ontario.

They are the first test of the voters' opinion since the last June in which Liberals and Progressive Conservatives each retained one seat.

However, the Westmoriand and Waterloo South votes come after the long, bitter summer wrangles in Parliament, especially over the flag. They may add some added evidence to the MPs' mail about how the electorate views their performance.

Rivalries Creating Problems

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Leading organizers of a national council for the folk arts are working behind the scenes to help it effectively to smooth away regional and inter-group jealousies that formation of the Canadian director of the union.

Local President Abe Taylor says he will not take any of the membership out on strike unless it is an absolute must for the good of the bargaining for a new working contract.

Mr. Taylor said a settlement will likely be reached long before any strike action is necessary. He said the decision is up to GM.

The strike threat at the Oshawa plant comes only a few days after the men returned to work following the wreckers' hammer four years ago. was designated a U.S. national historic landmark Friday.

State Secretary Lamontagne told a Sunday night banquet meeting of more than 100 founding fathers of the council that the government will support it —presumably, financia ly — in the years ahead and suggested "a national council with decentralized organization and representation at the provincial and regional levels."

The council is to bring together national cultural organizations and provincial and local folk arts councils.

The jealousies, barely under the surface at the first of the two-day meetings Sunday, were reported to exist between the National Federation of Canadian Folk Arts council first, before voting to establish a national council. Overlapping memberships among them were expected to resolve their position.

Mr. Lamontagne, minister responsible for the federal centennial commission which is sponsoring the conference, said Canada can build its unity by preserving the elements of cultural diversity.

For the centennial of Confederation next year, Mr. Lamontagne said the government wants the active participation of all ethnic groups, "the new ones and the old ones."

"The contribution that you can all make—that we can all make together—is essential for the proper celebration of the centennial," he said.

Quebec Dockers Quit Their Jobs For 24 Hours

Union Officials Plan To See Labor Minister

MONTREAL (CP) — The International Longshoremen's Association (CLC) announced today that all loading activity has stopped in the ports of Montreal, Trois - Rivieres and Quebec as a 24-hour protest strike went into effect.

Adrien Lamoine, secretary of the Montreal local of the union, said he and other officials of the ILA were leaving for Ottawa to meet with Labor Minister MacEachen.

At issue in the action of the 3,500 Quebec waterside workers was the demand by the ILA for establishment of a retirement fund promised following an earlier work stoppage.

The walkout, which began at 8 a.m. EST today, was the third in a little more than a year in the St. Lawrence ports.

Whether the longshoremen would return to work Tuesday morning after the 24-hour protest period remained in doubt.

"We will see," said Gerard Tremblay, vice-president of the Atlantic Coast region of the ILA.

He said the longshoremen would have an opportunity to decide their future course of action.

7,500 Workers At Oshawa Vote to Strike

OSHAWA (CP)—About 7,500 employees at the General Motors of Canada plant here voted Sunday 90.3 per cent in favor of strike action if the company and the United Auto Workers (CLC) are unable to sign a contract.

A three-year contract with GM expired last week.

The decision to vote was taken by members of Local 222 of the United Auto Workers (CLC) following an address by a union meeting earlier in the day by George Burt, Canadian director of the union.

Local President Abe Taylor says he will not take any of the membership out on strike unless it is an absolute must for the good of the bargaining for a new working contract.

Mr. Taylor said a settlement will likely be reached long before any strike action is necessary. He said the decision is up to GM.

Bitter Arguments Expected

By GEOFFREY WHITEHEAD

LONDON (Reuters) — Bitter argument of 15 years ago will again split Parliament this week as the Labor government attempts to nationalize Britain's steel industry.

Harold Wilson's administration has announced that despite its tiny majority of only five seats, it will go ahead with its proposals to bring steel under state control.

Steel was nationalized once before, in 1951 under a bill passed by a previous Labor government in 1949, but only after angry scenes in Parliament and a series of at-night sittings.

The Conservative government which gained power in the fall of 1951 repealed the legislation.

Sir Alec Douglas Home's Conservative party, now in opposition, has served notice it will challenge the steel nationalization plan immediately by forcing a censure vote in the House of Commons today.

WILL LEAD TO ROW

This would inevitably lead to a big row in Parliament, but political observers said it would be nothing compared with the furore that will break out when the government introduces its steel law for debate probably next spring.

Nationalization is an issue affecting the fundamental philosophies of all three major parties.

The Labor party's fundamental agreement for steel nationalization is that the industry is already in effect a private monopoly, and—as a basic industry on which other vital industries depend—should be made accountable to the public interest.

The basic Conservative case against steel nationalization is that ownership of the industry at present switches and, that it is competitive, efficient and has made great strides earned through a "massive" program of expansion and modernization.

Jo Grimond's small Liberal party backs the Conservatives' view that the present steel nationalization as "irrelevant."

The industry consists of 300 companies, plus their subsidiaries, employing more than 300,000 men.

Many Canadian Veterans to Feel Twinge of Nostalgia Wednesday

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Many Canadian veterans will feel a special twinge of nostalgia on Remembrance Day Wednesday.

Changes in militia organization announced last Tuesday by Defence Minister Paul Hellyer will mean that units with which previous generations of Canadians served will no longer exist only as names on the army's inactive list.

Altogether, 38 major reserve army units and 15 minor ones will be reh ated, merged or made inactive as a result of the moves.

Remembrance Day — anniversary of the Armistice which ended the fighting of the First World War — and the Armistice will see memorial ceremonies across the country for Canada's dead of both world wars.

Banks, schools and government buildings will be closed. Many private businesses will also close.

Mrs. Homer Rivait of Windsor, Ont., who lost three sons in the Second World War, will feel a special twinge of nostalgia in Ottawa on behalf of all Canadian mothers in the national ceremony there at 11 a.m.

The House of Commons will not sit. Remembrance Day under new rules approved this fall and the civil service will close at noon.

In big cities and small towns across the country, the most typical Remembrance Day event will be the community ceremony with a parade by members of the local Canadian Legion, civic and religious leaders taking part in a nondenominational service at places wreaths at cenotaphs.

The most of these ceremonies will observe the traditional two minutes of silence at 11 a.m.—the time the Armistice was signed.

Many groups, communities and schools are holding remembrance services before Wednesday. Church parades by many militia units were held Sunday.

401 Marysville-East Strip Becomes 4-Lanes Thursday

With paving operations completed, last minute details are now underway by contractors and highways department maintenance crews as preparations are made for putting into service Thursday the north lanes of 401 highway between Marysville and Cataraqui.

At three o'clock Thursday afternoon the north lane barrier will be cleared away and this 30-mile stretch of hitherto two lane highway will become a full fledged four lane motorway.

Paving operations on the north lanes of 401 between highway 33 north of Cataraqui and west of Marysville, have been underway all summer and now contractors are completing shouldering and installing guard rails. MARKING HIGHWAY

At the same time department of highways maintenance men are erecting highway signs and doing centre striping in preparation for the north lanes being put into service on Thursday.

Since the south lanes were put into service more than a year ago, the two lane stretch of 401 between Marysville and Cataraqui has been the scene of frequent accidents, a number of them being head - on collisions.

The cost of paving the north lanes of the 30-mile stretch of 401 was $12,000,000. Total cost of the stretch, including property acquisition and paving of all four lanes, is given as $17,930,000.

When the 30-mile stretch goes into use on Thursday it will bring to more than 70 the number of miles of four lane 401 highway put into use this year.

It means that motorists will be able to drive on the four lane 401 highway route from Gannonoque on the east to west of London.

Hunting parties returning from the Mazinaw Lake area report deer plentiful with at least two parties getting close to their quota, plus side trophies of a bear and a wolf.

Other members of the party included Mr. Rose' four sons, Vernon and Don of Belleville, Gerald and Clayton of Kingston, along with Harold Gilbert of Napanee and Dewitt Leslie of Kingston.

A Stirling district party of seven hunting in the same general area also came home with four deer. One of the party, Carl Bosiak of Stirling added a bear for good measure.

New Water Levels Booklet Now Available

OTTAWA—Solving the problem of fluctuating water levels in the Great Lakes will be "an achievement in the world wonder class," Hon. Arthur Laing told a press conference in Ottawa.

Mr. Laing, Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources, was introducing a new booklet on Great Lakes Water Levels being issued to the public by his department.

Written in laymen's language, this attractive 16-page booklet is available free of charge from the department's Information Services Division, 85 Sparks Street, Ottawa.

Because of their tremendous size, he said, it was wrong to suppose the Great Lakes could be controlled in the same manner as Canada's large rivers.

"We are talking about 95,000 square miles of water," the Minister emphasized, "which is equivalent to approximately the total combined area of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland Island."

To lower the level of Lake Superior one foot, he said, would require the addition of 5,000 cubic feet of water per second for 5½ years without spilling a drop through the St. Mary's River.

To lower it one foot would require a corresponding increase in the outflow over a similar period.

"I believe we can say without hesitation," said Mr. Laing, "that the solution of the Great Lakes water levels problem will be an achievement in the world wonder class."

Purpose of the new booklet produced by Mr. Laing's department is to present the basic facts of this problem in language any reader can understand.

"We are proud of this effort and it is hoped by the Canadians reading it will get a better appreciation of the many knotty problems and efforts being expended by those agencies concerned with solving this problem," Mr. Laing stated.

The Minister noted that the Great water levels problem is being explored by the House of Commons' Standing Committee of Mines, Forests and Waters. Moreover, the Canadian and United States governments have asked the International Joint Commission to examine the problems of further water level regulation on those lakes.

Farewell to Blood Alley

VANCOUVER (CP) — Blood Alley's days are numbered. No one will be sorry.

In the heart of this city's Skid Road district, Blood Alley is a 200-foot stretch of garbage - filled lane. Three beer parlors back onto it.

And here, last September, Charles Davidson was found beaten to death with a tire inspected every night and often men and women ejected from the beer parlors are found there, and moved on.

The lane is owned by a department store, which plans to pull down the two beer parlors it owns, and eradicate the lane with a parking lot.

Insp. Alex Shephard, who is in charge of the police patrol division's night detail, says it's difficult to adequately patrol the lane because its private property and police cars can't enter because it's too narrow.

"We usually drunks and others who cause trouble in these hotels are thrown out into the lane, so we patrol the parlors often and arrest all the drunks we find.

"That's all we can do."

Jack Cohen, an executive of the department store that owns the alley, said:

"We want that part of town kept clean and safe so people aren't afraid to walk the streets."

In the meantime, though, Blood Alley seems likely to maintain its name and reputation.

Arabs Appear To Be Victims Of Crackdown

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—Hundreds of persons have been arrested in the terror campaign by the government of Zanzibar, diplomatic sources said here on Saturday.

Arabs again appear the principal victims of the latest crackdown by former members of the old sultan's ruling Zanzibar National party being rounded up in droves.

Zanzibar leaders claim they have discovered a plot to overthrow the revolutionary regime of President Abeid Karume.

Two Western journalists who went to Zanzibar this week were turned back at the airport by immigration authorities.

The estimated numbers of persons arrested in the sweep vary from 250 to 450.

Zanzibar, the clove island 231 miles off the African mainland, is linked with Tanganyika in the new united republic of Tanzania. It became independent almost a year ago under the sultan's Arab-dominated government, but was overthrown shortly after set up a people's republic.

Estimates of Arabs killed in the revolt range up to 10,000.

Personal Letters Sent to Heads Of Four Govts.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) Nigeria's United Nations ambassador disclosed Sunday he has appealed directly to the heads of Premier Soviet Premier Kosygin, French President de Gaulle and Britain's Prime Minister Wilson to make a cordial settlement of disputes over paying UN dues.

Chief S. O. Adebo sent personal letters to the four heads of government Wednesday, but so far there have been no replies.

In the meantime, the U.S. has indicated it may refuse to pay its bills if the UN General Assembly lets the Soviet Union get away with continuing to veto there although the chart calls for those votes after two years behind to be stripped of voting rights.

Moscow has refused to pay for peace-keeping operations in the Congo and Middle East, arguing they were unauthorized by the UN Security Council where the Kremlin has a veto, but to no avail so sorry.

France has refused to pay for the Middle Eastern operation and may lose voting rights at a later date.

The Soviet Union has indicated it may quit the world organization if stripped of voting rights.

It is their dispute which Chief Adebo, chairman of the UN's working group on peace-keeping finances, asked the leaders of East and West to resolve.

YOUNG GANNETS

Young gannets are among the very last migrants to leave Canada. Born towards the end of June or early July, they take a long time to mature, remaining dependent upon their parents in their home upon a cliff throughout the summer. Only then do they learn to fly, dive for fish, and feed themselves. This is a much more difficult task than does most young birds.

On this side of the Atlantic there are few places where gannets breed: Bird Rock off the Magdalen Islands, Bonaventure Island, Anticosti Island and Gt. St. Marys, Newfoundland, being the most important.

After a 2½ week period when nestlings have their predigested food dropped to them from above because their bills are too short for the ordinary feeding method, they are fed by regurgitation well into November.

COLOR CONTRASTS

Very young gannets are covered with dark grey down and have black beaks. This is a great contrast to their white parents with black wing tips. Towards the end of July grey feathers begin to show on wings and back; the last down is replaced by feathers on the back of the head. Each year more dark feathers are shed and white ones grow in their stead. However, it takes from three to six years to acquire the white plumage, and meanwhile the gannets have a mottled appearance.

When four months old young gannets actually weigh more than the adults, with one to four pounds of fat stored up on them, but this is none too much because they will soon be on an obligatory fast. Anxious for their young ones to be able to get along without help, the parents refuse to feed them any longer pock at them, and try to push them over the cliff side. Once over the edge, they practically fall into the water some 200 feet below.

Gannets obtain their food by flying high and then diving into the water head first. Just as they are about to reach the sea face they close their wings, and as they disappear spray rises from the impact for many feet. Naturally, this feat is impossible for the new adventurers. For days they float around, trying to fly. This gannets are able to do only after first running over the surface. Once capable of rising 10 feet, the youngsters can dive for fish. If unable to get away be December 15th they must remain and freeze to death.

Gannets winter along the U.S. coast from Virginia to Florida. The young, which may be spotted by their dark coats, go farther, sometimes reaching islands off the coast of Peru.

Blaring Horn Wakes Family, Car on Fire

TRENTON — Fortunately for the Sandy Henry family of R.R. 1, Hilton an unusual turn of events started the horn blaring on a '56 model automobile parked beside their house early today. They were aroused suddenly by the eerie noise at 2:40 a.m.

When Mrs. Henry looked out the window she discovered a fire burning fiercely inside the sedan.

The Henrys, along with the owner of the car, Allan Ferrill, were fighting the flames and controlling them when Trenton firemen arrived with chemical extinguishers. Apparently heat that built up inside the car fuse wiring under the dash caused the horn to sound continuously and attract attention.

DROPS INTO BAY

Allan Anderson, 20, of R. R.3 Trenton, is thankful water levels are low in the Bay of Quinte.

He had his car parked facing south on the government dock at the rear of the Legion hall early Sunday. Before he started the motor, it moved forward and plunged over the edge with him behind the wheel in the driver's seat. The drop, police estimated was 10 feet.

The driver was able to climb out on the trunk of the car and clamber back on the dock without getting wet, according to the investigating officer. Damage to the car's bumper and right fender was placed at $75.

Veterans Attend Divine Service In Remembrance

TRENTON — Two events struck high points yesterday in the Poppy Week campaign sponsored by Branch 110 of the Royal Canadian Legion.

In the morning, legionnaires in a body headed up by their president, Vic Burtt, paraded to St. Georges Anglican church for a Remembrance Day service.

Mayor James MacDonald led the local Sea Cadets band in front of the veterans marching across town in bright November sunshine.

In the evening the 8 RD Reed and Brass volunteer band conducted by Sgt. Howard Kelly gave a concert in the high school.

MARK ANNIVERSARY

Large congregations turned out for both morning and evening religious services that marked the 50th anniversary of King Street United Church yesterday.

Messages appropriate for the occasion were delivered by visiting minister, The Rev. R. K. N. McLean, president of the Bay of Quinte conference with his charge at Cambridge Street United Church at Lindsay.

The church's minister, Rev. J. T. Ewing presided at a Fellowship Hour meeting in the parlors of the church following the evening service.

SEIZE FREIGHTER

VENICE (AP)—Police seized a Greek freighter and arrested captain and engineer of smuggling 4,400 pounds of American cigarettes into Italy for sale on the black market, authorities said Saturday.

Trenton Sports

By ELMER BONTER

A single point late in the final quarter put Trenton High School in the COSSA Junior "A" football finals in Peterborough Saturday.

The single, off the toe of Danny Creighton, with about three minutes left in the game, gave Trenton a 15-14 semi-final victory over Peterborough.

Trenton High won the COSSA crown last season and will battle for it again next Saturday in Oshawa. Oshawa Central Collegiate will supply the opposition.

Peterborough had two golden opportunities in the dying minutes. They had the ball near Trenton's 30-yard line but chose to go for a major, rather than kick, in each instance.

The game was a see-saw affair. Besides Creighton's winning single, he also converted both of his club's touchdowns.

Bob Halverson plunged over from the Peterborough five yard line for Trenton's initial major. Allan Kinik caught a pass and run it across on a play from the 50½ yard stripe for Trenton's second touchdown.

In a pair of fast, exciting exhibition hockey games here Sunday night, Trenton and Oshawa teams split the decisions. A good crowd, about 800 in number, watched the games.

Trenton Lions, midgets nipped Oshawa 1-0.

The game's lone goal was scored by Rick Munroe at 17:20 of the third period.

In juvenile, Oshawa broke a 3-2 tie in the final period to top Trenton Legion 5-3.

Trenton goals were scored by Art Hampson, Jim Bond and Al Ferguson.

Oshawa goals went to Robinson, Elliott, Leaning, Watts and Barnoski.

Peterborough teams will visit the Community Centre for next Sunday's exhibition twin-bill.

Farmers Looking to City For Livestock Water Supplies

With lower than average rainfall and more farmers' wells having gone dry this year district farmers are looking to the city of Belleville for their livestock water supplies.

Local truckers hauling water on a commercial scale with 1,000 gallon tanks have been busy all summer while numbers of farmers haul their own water supplies for stock requirements.

Some days there is a lineup at the water filtration plant in the west end of the city as district farmers and commercial truckers wait to get their tanks filled.

A few commercial truckers with 1,000 gallon tanks capacity, make up to eight trips in a day, hauling water for farmers as far distant as Madoc and Deseronto.

BAY LEVEL DOWN

But it is not only farmers with dry wells who are feeling the low water pinch.

The level of the Bay of Quinte is down more than a foot as compared to last year and operation of the Ontario Department of Highways ferry at Glenora has been affected with maximum loads reduced. In some instances heavy transports are being asked to take alternate routes.

The summer and early autumn rainfall in Belleville area was said below normal this year. October rainfall of 1.33 inch was up from only .53 inch received last year.

SOLEMN REMEMBRANCE—In bright November sunshine yesterday Trenton Legionnaires paraded to St. George's Anglican Church for annual observance service.

Much Ticket-Splitting

"Ticket-splitting" is something unknown in Canadian elections, except occasionally at the municipal level when slates of candidates are sponsored by certain organizations.

In the U.S., however, where elections involve voting for candidates for several offices at the same time, it has always been commonplace. It involves the voter casting his ballot for some candidates of one party and some candidates of the opposing party.

In effect, this voter is the counterpart of the Canadian who says he "votes for the man and not for the party." He is the so-called "independent" voter whose preferences really decide all elections, since it is his "swing" from one party to another which decides who is victorious.

Returns from the recent U.S. election indicate "ticket-splitting" was widespread. On the basis of popular vote, U.S. electors preferred Johnson over Goldwater by a ratio of approximately three to two. For the purpose of the comparison we wish to make, however, we need not the popular vote, but the electoral vote or the States won. Johnson captured 486 electoral votes to Goldwater's 52, a ratio of over nine to one, while his edge in states was 44 to 6, a ratio of approximately seven to one.

In elections for 35 seats in the U.S. Senate, the Democrats were victorious in 27 and the Republicans in six, with results still uncertain, at the time of writing, in two. Here the Democrats had an edge of only four and one-half to one. Results for the House of Representatives were even closer, only two to one in favor of the Democrats. The same ratio in favor of the Democrats was shown in governors elected.

Comparing these results even with the lower of the two pertinent ratios in the Johnson-Goldwater race, the seven-to-one Johnson edge in States carried, it is evident that many who cast votes for Republicans for congressmen and senators voted for Johnson for president.

President Johnson can take pride in this fact, while at the same time the Republicans, as a party, can derive from it some solace and construe it as a reason for hope in the future.

Wants Instant Intervention

A Canadian officer (service not designated but probably navy) is credited with a unique plan to speed United Nations' intervention in trouble areas.

This officer would have as UN force aircraft carriers which would sail to the neighborhood of the trouble spots, and await orders to land.

Once the UN debaters decided the force was needed, it could start its work immediately.

On the face of it, this sounds like an interesting experiment of considerable promise.

We are afraid, though, that in practice the effect might be the opposite of that sought. Some dozens of air transport facilities, such as those maintained by the RCAF at Station Trenton, is such that planes can rush troops to any part of the world at almost a moment's notice. It is not so much transportation of the troops, as their detachment from other duties and their assembly, which requires time.

Still, having the troops right on hand, rather than having to transport them by air following a United Nations decision, would speed their intervention.

Is it not possible, though, that the troops' very proximity to the scene of trouble might tend to delay a decision in the UN? As it is today, delegates will realize that some time will elapse between their approval of intervention and the earliest date at which this is likely to be feasible. If a truly critical situation appears likely to arise, they will have a tendency to approve intervention, so that preparations for despatch of troops can proceed forthwith. But if troops are already at the scene, there might be a temptation to wait until the last possible moment—and the end result could easily be that intervention would be delayed rather than speeded.

Our greatest need today is to acquire the power of looking ahead, forecasting, and preparing for the consequences of the accelerating developments in science and technology.—From Lord Brain's Presidential address to the British Association.

Dropsy Accumulation of Fluid in Body Tissues

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: My elderly father has dropsy. Thus far it is confined to his ankles. Could you give me a little about it? — Mrs. G. W.

Dropsy is the accumulation of excessive fluid in tissues of the body. The feet and ankles are most likely to show it first, but it can occur elsewhere. After all the feet are farther from the heart, as well as below it, so any interference in circulation increases the problem. The blood stream must carry this extra fluid back to the heart and then to the kidneys to be filtered out.

The dropsy, or swelling, can result from kidney or liver disease, from a gradually weakening heart, or from interference with free circulation of blood in the legs.

It is important to consult a doctor so he can find out which is responsible, because the right treatment for one may not be the right treatment for another.

Caught in an early stage, such as this case evidently is, dropsy usually responds to treatment.

If inadequate circulation is the cause, the swelling tends to appear or to become more severe toward the end of the day. Or the heart may be inefficient. Or both factors may be combined. Some degree of air transport facilities, such as those maintained by the RCAF at Station Trenton, is such that planes can rush troops to any part of the world at almost a moment's notice. It is not so much transportation of the troops, as their detachment from other duties and their assembly, which requires time.

Still, having the troops right on hand, rather than having to transport them by air following a United Nations decision, would speed their intervention.

Dear Dr. Molner: My elderly father has dropsy. Thus far it is confined to his ankles. Could you give me a little about it? — Mrs. G. W.

Dropsy is the accumulation of excessive fluid in tissues of the body. The feet and ankles are most likely to show it first, but it can occur elsewhere. After all the feet are farther from the heart, as well as below it, so any interference in circulation increases the problem. The blood stream must carry this extra fluid back to the heart and then to the kidneys to be filtered out.

The dropsy, or swelling, can result from kidney or liver disease, from a gradually weakening heart, or from interference with free circulation of blood in the legs.

It is important to consult a doctor so he can find out which is responsible, because the right treatment for one may not be the right treatment for another.

Caught in an early stage, such as this case evidently is, dropsy usually responds to treatment.

If inadequate circulation is the cause, the swelling tends to appear or to become more severe toward the end of the day. Or the heart may be inefficient. Or both factors may be combined. Some degree of air transport facilities, such as those maintained by the RCAF at Station Trenton, is such that planes can rush troops to any part of the world at almost a moment's notice. It is not so much transportation of the troops, as their detachment from other duties and their assembly, which requires time.

Still, having the troops right on hand, rather than having to transport them by air following a United Nations decision, would speed their intervention.

Is it not possible, though, that the troops' very proximity to the scene of trouble might tend to delay a decision in the UN? As it is today, delegates will realize that some time will elapse between their approval of intervention and the earliest date at which this is likely to be feasible. If a truly critical situation appears likely to arise, they will have a tendency to approve intervention, so that preparations for despatch of troops can proceed forthwith. But if troops are already at the scene, there might be a temptation to wait until the last possible moment—and the end result could easily be that intervention would be delayed rather than speeded.

Our greatest need today is to acquire the power of looking ahead, forecasting, and preparing for the consequences of the accelerating developments in science and technology.—From Lord Brain's Presidential address to the British Association.

Wants Instant Intervention

A Canadian officer (service not designated but probably navy) is credited with a unique plan to speed United Nations' intervention in trouble areas.

This officer would have as UN force aircraft carriers which would sail to the neighborhood of the trouble spots, and await orders to land.

Once the UN debaters decided the force was needed, it could start its work immediately.

On the face of it, this sounds like an interesting experiment of considerable promise.

We are afraid, though, that in practice the effect might be the opposite of that sought. Some dozens of air transport facilities, such as those maintained by the RCAF at Station Trenton, is such that planes can rush troops to any part of the world at almost a moment's notice. It is not so much transportation of the troops, as their detachment from other duties and their assembly, which requires time.

Dear Dr. Molner:

Dear Dr. Molner: I have diverticulosis and also an infected gall bladder. I sent 25 cents in coin and it was unstamped. Undiscouraged I sent money for your booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You," and it proved a great help.

But what about an infected gall bladder? What does it signify, and is there danger of the infection spreading to other organs? My doctor has not suggested an operation. I am in my early 70's. — E. N.

Like diverticulosis, ailments of the gall bladder are very common. They do, however, deserve close watchfulness by your physician.

Risk is not especially a problem of the infection spreading to other organs; rather, it is a question of how much the infection interferes with the gall bladder itself. Let's compare it to a sinus infection. It can be chronic yet sometimes not cause much trouble.

In view of your age, your doctor probably takes the position that he can afford to wait and see; if your call bladder continues to function despite the infection, to let well enough alone. If you were younger, and if the infection showed signs of getting worse, then he might well take the opposite view and suggest surgery. In your case, my advice is to let your doctor do the worrying over whether to operate or not.

Dear Dr. Molner: Please write something about the itch of diabetes symptoms. — J. R. C.

Generalized itching of the skin can be a symptom of severe and uncontrolled diabetes.

More often, however, the itching occurs where there are folds in the skin, such as under the breast, or in the genital areas. In the latter case, sugar in the urine can be irritating, or there may be fungus infections of skin and genital tract — or perhaps both.

In any event, controlling the diabetes and thus lessening the sugar content of the urine usually brings relief.

Sunshine

Regina Leader-Post

In this land of cold or hot sunshine, depending on the time of year, it is difficult to appreciate the average Britisher's preoccupation with the sun. Such interest is more easily understood when it is realized that the ratio of hours of sunshine and rain in the daytime is eight to one on London and five to one in northern England and south Scotland. In the western Highlands rainy hours equal those of sunshine.

The Loyalty Of Fans Has Been Eroded

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Toward the end of the World Series, I was having coffee at the counter of a snack shop, when a man walked in, sat down next to me, and asked me: "Who's winning?"

I turned my big baby blue eyes on him and asked right back: "Who's playing?" His startled something indefinable and repeated his question to the man on the other side of him.

Of course, I knew who was playing — the St. Louis Browns and the New York Giants, wasn't it? But, over the years, I have become sick and tired of the baseball fans' blithe assumption that every red-blooded American ought to be passionately involved in that insipid sport.

A few days later, I ran into a sports editor of my acquaintance, and mentioned this incident. "A couple of years ago, he might have socked you for that heresy," he said, "but it's a year there seemed to be very little interest in the World Series. This is right, this is jubilant news for the millions of us who have been tyrannized over the years by the fanatical wide-eyed baseball chatter from early spring to late fall — and by the collateral assumption that nonaddicts are somehow deficient in the glandular system.

"Why do you think it's declining?" I asked him.

"Three or four reasons," he said, "but you know, the game has been slowed up. It now takes almost twice as long to complete a major league game as it used to — which makes it just dull to watch.

"Secondly," he went on, "the loyalty of fans has been eroded over the years. The playing roster is changed almost every year, and the teams keep going up and down cities, so that the old sense of continuity has been lost.

"The fans are realizing that major league ball is a big business, and that's the prime consideration — not the 'home team' doesn't mean much if it is broken up every year. Baseball was on, and it can be moved to another city overnight. The players are just another item with dollar signs in front of them.

"Isn't this just as true of professional football, which is growing in public interest?" I asked.

"Sure, that's a business, too," he shrugged. "But football is a hard-contact sport, and the fans attend it as a release of their own aggressive tendencies. It serves the same purpose as bullfighting in the Latin countries. Since baseball lacks this element, when it becomes slow to watch, and when it forfeits the civic loyalties of fans, it's digging its own grave as a national pastime."

Wanted: Plain Speaking

Ottawa Times

The cause of unity in Canada is being imperilled by a proliferation of voices emanating from the mouths of those who, in the privacy of the entrenched and dedicated sanctuaries of their own homes, look like the squeaky wheel which gets the most grease, by their very noise they are attracting more attention and publicity than their numbers and importance merit.

Coupled with the minority of extremists are still more terrorists, who seek by acts of violence to sow the seed of Canada into conformity with their preposterous demands. But because of the nature of their actions, they also attract a wide measure of publicity, which is exactly what they want.

It is time that the majority view in Quebec, and that majority wishes no interference with the ties which link Quebec with the other provinces in a workable and successful confederation, were heard with equal force by those of the other side.

The government of Quebec, under Prime Minister Jean Lesage, knows only too well that the future welfare of Quebec rests in strengthening the bonds of confederation, rather than in their destruction. The fact that the Quebec government has agreed to the formula adopted for the repatriation and amendment of the Canadian constitution is an indication of the thinking within government circles.

But that is itself is not enough. It is time that the people of the rest of Canada heard some authoritative voice setting forth explicitly and clearly the official view of that province. They should be told, without equivocation, the position for Quebec, and who expresses the true aspirations of the French-Canadian province. And coupled with that there should come, from official sources, a condemnation of the tactics and views of those who would wreck Confederation.

Use A-Power To Get Water

Vancouver Sun

Suggestions that Arctic watershed rivers be diverted south to irrigate dry regions of Canada and the United States may seem far fetched. But news reports from Russia's capitals should serve to remind us that fresh water is becoming an increasingly precious commodity on this planet. In Moscow, the Soviet government announced that it will build canals to desalt Caspian Sea water to supply the Mangyshlak oil region. The use of an atomic reactor, the Russians expect to desalt 35 million gallons per day. Geneva, the Atoms for Peace conference learned that Egypt is inviting bids for atomic power to desalt Mediterranean seawater for irrigation purposes. Neither announcement said what it expected costs of providing fresh water by nuclear reactor power.

Socialism?

Windsor Star

There are those who regard socialism, nationalization, public ownership (or whatever term one prefers) as attributable to wild-eyed radicals. Usually, it could be said, it comes when private enterprise fails in one way or another.

Only recently a decision to establish its own concrete batching plant. It isn't doing so out of any socialistic urge. Indeed it is doing so reluctantly. Why is it doing so? Because of logistical bids it has received and the belief it can make its own concrete more cheaply.

After a hazardous trip that most hope lived even they planned, 20th, the Pilgrim Fathers aboard the Mayflower sighted Cape Cod in what later was to become Massachusetts 344 years ago today — in 1620. The 102 Puritans, 74 men and 28 women, had sailed from Plymouth, in Devonshire, on Sept. 6 to seek the freedom of worship which they said was impossible in England. They landed at Plymouth Rock on Dec. 21.

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1939 — German authorities offered a reward of $360,000 for information concerning an assassination attempt on Hitler; the Netherlands flooded large areas of the country as a protective measure; Belgium boosted mobilization to 600,000 men.

Prefer Looks To Safety

New York Times

Many of the 1965 automobile models are featuring additional horsepower — not for the sake of speed, the manufacturers tell us, but to increase passing power and to help operate the ever more numerous accessories. The "need" for more horsepower goes along with the industry's apparent conviction that $10 worth of chrome sells more new cars than $100 worth of safety features.

Highway deaths hit a record of 43,600 last year and are running ever higher in 1964. To counteract this trend, a New York State legislative committee is planning a series of public hearings designed to create interest in a program for "crash-proof" car. There is no good reason why automobile passengers cannot be afforded improved protection against crashes. Dirk brakes, common on medium - priced European cars as standard, only on some of the makes. Energy - absorbing steering wheels, padded dashboards and instrument panels, shock - absorbing bumpers, roll-over bars — have been tested and proved of value. But the industry says that their general installation must wait for "public demand."

It was only after New York and several other states passed laws requiring seat belts that the industry fell into line. Even today the belts commonly used here are much inferior to proprietary purposes to the over-the shoulder type favoured in Europe. The automotive industry's unspoken conviction that talk about safety merely makes car buyers fearful keeps it from taking the lead in installing safety devices.

Government pressure toward car safety is imperative if we are ever to reduce the disgraceful toll at highway deaths.

Gradual disintegration and drifting of coal beneath the wall foundation of St. Thomas' Church, believed to have originated with excavations for installation of furnace years after the edifice was constructed, is the feature of a financial problem now facing the congregation.

So serious is the situation, that immediate plans have been taken by church officials to effect repairs at the earliest possible moment. A Restoration Fund has been set up with an efficient committee in charge. Financial requirements for urgently needed repairs and installation of modern facilities, are set at $15,000.

Heating of the church at the time of construction was done through the medium of stoves. Later, when furnaces were installed, excavations in the basement were necessary. The passing of years has seen a slow drifting of the coal bed from beneath the foundation walls to these holes.

Carpet Slippers

Hamilton Spectator

A suggestion made at the Ontario Public School Trustees' convention the other day that schools be broadloom on their floors leaves us cold. The idea is that carpets would reduce noise, which is something no one will dispute. For those who were in their 30, 40 or more years ago soon to enjoy the splendid schools that are being built today, the reaction to broadloomed floors for silence' sake must be one of incredulity. This generation might scarcely reflect that in its school days there were millions of other ideas current on the floor for maintaining clearance.

Man Brought To Trial After 18 Years Search

CELINA, Tenn. (AP) — It was nearly 20 years ago that a car hit Newt Lee as he crossed the road in the Cumberland Mountains to seed his logging horses. The car sped away, leaving the 56-year-old man dead.

Lee's son, Welby, vowed he would not rest until he found his father's slayer.

Today, the man arrested after a 100,000-mile, 18-year search—Grover Jones, 53, an Indianapolis grocery handyman—goes on trial, charged with second-degree murder in Lee's death.

Welby Lee, 31 when his father was killed Dec. 31, 1944, began his one - man search when the elder Lee's granddaughter described the car and a man who walked back to look at the victim.

Lee also found a crumpled bumper guard in a ditch near the lumberman's body.

Lee, who lives across the state line at Tompkinsville, Ky., spent 16 years, in his words, "trying to prove the wrong boys did it."

"After 10 years I had to start all over from the beginning," he said. "Every time I came to a dead end I would just boil up inside and want to catch that driver worse than ever."

Jones' name entered Lee's investigation in May, 1945, but Lee said, "I didn't pay too much attention to it because I was zeroed in on two other guys."

Lee turned his attention to Jones in January, 1963, he said, after a relative of Jones told him he had been in the area at the time of his father's death.

"I realized that after 18 years a half job just wouldn't do," Lee said.

So when he had completed his investigation, Lee turned over to authorities a book with the case he had amassed.

Jones was indicted June 25, 1963, and was arrested in Indianapolis the following month.

Workers Vote To Strike if Talks Fail

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Workers at a major General Motors subsidiary, McKinnon Industries, voted Sunday in favor of strike action if contract talks fail to bring about a settlement.

The number attending the meeting of Local 199 of the United Auto Workers (CLC) was not given, but union officials said 95.2 per cent of those voting supported the move. Some 5,700 workers were eligible to vote.

The union will return to the bargaining table here today, and a meeting with the conciliation board is anticipated within a few days, Local President James Connell said.

McKinnon Industries, a subsidiary of General Motors Corporation, has two plants which manufacture engines for General Motors of Canada.

Says Violence Useless In Separatism Is

QUEBEC (CP) — Pierre Bourgault, president of the Montreal Rassemblement pour l'Independance Nationale, said Sunday that "violence is useless and terrifies the population."

He said at a press conference that "violence can do us considerable harm in present circumstances; it is certainly not an effective method for recruiting on the survival of Le Rassemblement."

Mr. Bourgault, reporting on a recent tour he made of the Lower St. Lawrence and Lake St. John regions of Quebec, said that the idea of separatism is growing and his organization now is too small to meet the situation.

"Independence will not take place without support of the majority of the population," he said.

PLANS TOUR

Le Rassemblement is planning an international tour to make its ideas better known. Mr. Bourgault said that if the tour takes place first countries to be visited would be the United Kingdom, France and the United States.

Mr. Bourgault said about 100 members of police forces have infiltrated the ranks of Le Rassemblement as "double agents."

Fliers Seeking Missionaries In the Congo

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP) — Belgian helicopter crews searched during the weekend for 36 German Roman Catholic missionaries kidnapped by rebels in the northwest Congo.

A West German diplomat in Leopoldville said Sunday there was still "reasonable hope" of saving the missionaries, who include Martin Bormann Jr., son of Hitler's deputy.

While mercenary soldiers who are captured the northwestern Congolese town of Ikela from the rebels reported they had found no trace of Bormann and the other missionaries.

Villagers questioned by the advancing government troops said they believed the Communist-backed rebels had origin ally planned to kill the missionaries. Ikela, an important road junction, lies less than 200 miles south of Stanleyville, capital of the rebel "Congolese people's republic."

CONDUCT SEARCH

Belgian - piloted helicopters have been searching the region around Ikela for several days of traces of the missionaries and for a number of Belgian plantation workers who were also kidnapped by the rebels.

The rebels were believed to be acting on orders from rebel radio Stanleyville to accentuate all foreigners on the rebel capital to hold them as hostages.

Saturday, it was learned that rebel president Christophe Gbenye of the "Congolese people's republic" had declared 60 American men, women and children and nearly 800 Belgians trapped behind rebel lines to be prisoners of war.

Gbenye has said he is willing to negotiate the release of his captives.

The Americans are Protestant missionaries and their families, teachers and five members of the U.S. consulate staff in Stanleyville.
